Jubilee Concert.

The letter of Mr. John Fraser, Secretary of the Band, following that of Bandmaster Miller, and the announcement made by the gentlemen who are proposing to have a concert on the evening of June 21st, should lead to some joint action being arranged. All these gentlemen have common objects in view, to do honor to our Sovereign on the jubilee of her reign, and at the same time to give everyone an opportunity of participating. The preliminary points as to which there seems to be a difference of opinion are time, place and expense. As far as we gather our instrumental musicians would prefer an open air concert in the daytime, our vocal musicians an indoor concert in the evening. Surely a friendly and open discussion between them would lead to some agreement. As to the question of expense, and of a free concert or charge for admission, the difficulty might be removed either by a voluntary subscription list, or by those able to do so giving free tickets to their less fortunate brethren, whichever plan may be considered most advisable. We hope to hear a good concert, worthy of the occasion, and with all our musicians aiding harmoniously in making it a success.

THE SPRING SHOW.

Fine Exhibition of Stallions—The Bulls Shown.

The annual Spring Exhibition of bulls and stallions, held under the auspices of the West Riding Agricultural Society, was held on Saturday. The weather was fine and warm, and the attendance large. There was a fine lot of stallions shown, especially the roadster class. There was a slight falling off in the number of entries in the agricultural class, as compared with last year. Altogether there were 27 entries. The entries of bulls was not large, there being only ten, and those confined almost altogether to the Durham breed.

Mr. John Campbell, of Woodville, judged the cattle, and Mr. Robt. Millan, stock-raiser of Brougham, judged the stallions. The judging of stallions took place in the afternoon. The crowd formed large circles inside of which the grooms held the prancing, sleek-coated animals until disposed of by the judge.

The judges' decisions are as follows:—

BISHOP OF PETERBORO'

REV. FATHER DOWLING CONSECRATED IN HAMILTON.

A Solemn and Impressive Ceremony—The Officiating Prelates — Short Sketch of the Bishop-elect's Career —His Popularity in the Diocese.

The Mail, in a despatch from Hamilton dated Sunday, gives the following account of the consecration of Bishop Dowling:—To-day Rev. Father Dowling was consecrated bishop-elect of the Roman Catholic diocese of Peterborough, Ont. Rev. Father Dowling was born at Limerick, Ireland, 46 years ago, coming to Canada with his parents when but a lad. He received his early education in the schools of Hamilton, and was continued and completed at St. Michael's College, Toronto, and Laval University, Montreal. Twenty-one years ago he was ordained parish priest of Paris, Ont., and there he has since remained, much beloved by his flock, which has grown and prospered under his fostering and kindly care. Father Dowling is a man of fine constitution, early showed an aptitude for the priesthood, and during the interval that elapsed between the death of Bishop Crimmon and the appointment of Bishop Carbery he was administrator of the diocese of Hamilton.

BISHOP DOWLING'S POPULARITY.

His elevation to the episcopate is popular with the Roman Catholics of the diocese. How well he is liked by those with whom he has been closely associated in his work as a pastor of the church is shown by the presentation to him yesterday, when Vicar-General Sheenan, on behalf of the priests of Hamilton diocese, read to him a flattering address signed by the Vicar-General and Chancellor Keough, of Dundas, congratulating him on the exalted position in the hierarchy of the Catholic Church to which he had been raised. The address was accompanied by gifts, including a pectoral cross inlaid with mosaics of the finest workmanship on pure gold. The chain was in the same classical style as the cross, and the ring was a large emerald set with brilliants. Accompanying the cross and ring, which were Tanpani, of Rome, the Pope's jeweller, were a full set of pontifical garments and a gold mitre. Dr. Dowling felt very much touched by this expression of regard on the part of his fellow priests.

THE CONSECRATION CEREMONY.

The consecration ceremony was extremely solemn and interesting. In chairs placed in front of the altar railing were a great number of visiting clergy. In the organ gallery nearly one hundred nuns watched the unusual sight. Prominent in a front pew were seated the aged mother of the new bishop, his sisters, Miss M. Dowling and Mrs. Keough, of Kingston; his sister and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. Dowling, of Chicago, with two little daughters. The cermonies were elaborate and very long. Soon after eleven o'clock the procession of clergy came forth from the sacristy making its way to the sanctuary. After the archiepiscopal cross bearer, cassocked acolytes and sanctuary boys and clergy, the first prelate was Bishop O'Mahoney, of Toronto with his chaplains. Very Rev. Father Laurent, V. G., and the Rev. Father Conway of Peterborough. The bishop-elect was attended by Bishop Walsh, of London, with his chaplains, who was followed by Dr. Carbery, Bishop of Hamilton. Last came Archbishop Lynch, of Toronto, with his deacons, Father Lamont, of Toronto, Rev. Dean Harris, of Toronto, Very Rev. Father Cushing, of St. Michael's College, and Rev. Father Haim, of Hamilton, and as ceaplains Rev. P. Lennon, of Brantford, and Rev. B J. O'Connell, of Galt.

AFTER HAVING BEEN ROBED

Bishop-elect Dowling was led by the assistant bishops to the presence of Archbishop Lynch. Bishop Walsh, senior assistant, having demanded that the Archbishop proceed with the consecration of the elect, the Archbishop then commanded the reading of the apostolic letters, which was done by the Rev Father Kleopfer, notarius of the Archbishop. The examination of the elect having been completed, the solemn ceremony of consecration was begun, Archbishop Lynch being the consecrator. The choir sang Gregorian music, and during the mass the Gloria and Credo from Mozart's 12th Mass. The sermon was preached by the Bishop of Kingston, and was a most eloquent discourse upon the status and spiritual functions of the bishops of the Church and the duty of the people towards them. The ceremony concluded with the Te Deum, after which the new bishop, astended by Bishops Walsh and Carbery, walked through the cathedral bestowing his blessing upon the people.

After the service had been ended the clergy dined at St. Joseph's convent, and there Bishop Dowling replied to the address presented to him yesterday by the clergy of this diocese.

The World says that Messrs. Thomas Kelly, John Hackett, E. D. Gough, and John O'Meara were present from Peterborough.

A Case of Child Murder.

TORONTO, April 30.—The dead body of a male infant was fished out of a pond on Crawford street. It bore marks evidently showing that it was a case of murder. An inquest will be held.

BAYARD IN A BAD WAY.

The Three Mile Limit Business as Applied to Alaska.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—The department of state is carefully considering the question of the jurisdiction of the United States over the Alaskan fur seal fisheries. The statement made in the Canadian parliament yesterday to the effect that communication on the subject had been sent by that government to Secretary Bayard is denied at the State department and it is said that all of the correspondence touching the fisheries has been carried on directly with the Government of Great Britain. This fact, it is believed, will explain the delay in hearing from the state department, of which complaint has been made at Ottawa. The United States laws under which certain British Columbia vessels were seized by the revenue cutter Corwin last season are more than twenty years old, and the question of a conflict between them and the law of nations is one particularly knotty and difficult of settlement. The fact that this question has been raised strengthens the department of state in its determination to continue to pursue the temperate course it has so far followed in the negotiation with Great Britain concerning the Canadian fisheries. The vast Alaskan fisheries are thought to be quite as important to this country as are the Nova Scotian inshore fisheries, and the State department is necessarily obliged to so shape its construction of the laws and treaties as to preserve the rights of the United States to the exclusive enjoyment of the Alaskan fisheries while maintaining the treaty rights of our fishermen in North American waters. It is held that there cannot be two constructions of the laws, and any position assumed by the department must apply equally to Atlantic and Pacific waters.

If you are undecided what to buy in a Dolman or Mantle, call at Turnbull's and inspect the latest styles. New patterns every month. You will surely find some thing to please.

A STORM GATHERING.

LONDON, April 30.—The meeting of Liberal-Unionists to-day to consider proposed amendments to the Coercion bill was very stormy, owing to the divergence of opinion of the members. Several retired before the meeting concluded.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC
FROM
J. J. SHEEHY

I beg to say that contrary to announcements which appeared in the Peterborough papers for the past two months, I DO NOT intend to remove to T. Dolan & Co's Dry Goods Store, nor have I any connections whatever with that establishment. The final arrangements not being satisfactory to me, I withdrew from the projected change, and intend carrying on the Dry Goods business in my usual stand next to Loch's Hat Store.

It is my intention in the future as in the past to show at all seasons nothing but new and fresh goods in the various lines of Dry Goods and Gent's Furnishings; and by doing so, hope to retain the confidence which I am proud to say, I have enjoyed from the public since commencing business two years ago.

Real Estate.

At the auction sale of real estate held on Monday by Mr. Henry Denne, the city grist and flour mills were sold to Messrs James Stevenson, M. P., Peterborough, and Alex McDonnell, Lindsay, for the sum of $7,000. To the same gentleman he sold a lot on Water street, near the mill, having 80 feet frontage and 67 feet depth for $1,000. A lot containing one third of an acre broken by the railway track at the north of the town was sold to Mr. R. M. Hamilton for $850. Messrs. Chas. Stapleton and son conducted the sale.

Arrived to-day, Parasols 25, 35, 50, 75 and $1.00, really nice goods at double the money. See Sheppard for Parasols.

Honors for Salisbury.

NEW YORK, May 2.—A despatch from London to the World says: "It is common talk here that the Marquis of Salisbury, if so disposed, may become a duke. The Queen is said to have hinted that it would gratify Her Majesty if he would accept this elevation in the Peerage."

Another Teller Gone.

PHILADELPHIA, May 2.—Jas. N. Daggert, who for several years has been the paying teller of the Union Trust Company, has absconded and an examination of the books of the Company shows a deficit of something less than $100,000.

SOON WILL BE A CITY.

INCREASE IN PETERBOROUGH'S POPULATION OF OVER 500.

Substantial Advance in the Total Assessment—The Town's Assessment Approaching Four Million Dollars.

The assessors have returned the roll which supplies interesting information in regard to the progress of the town. The REVIEW is indebted to Mr. J. G. Macdonald for the subjoined table of comparisons. From it will be seen that there has been an increase in the population of the town during the past year of 514 and an increase in the total assessment of $171,725. There have been increases in the value of real estate and personal property but the assessment of incomes show a decrease.

It is rather a peculiar thing that, with a growing town, the number of school children has decreased.

The number of the population of Peterborough, with the residents of Ashburnham, and those citizens of Peterborough living just beyond the town limits included, now numbers considerably over the requisite population for a city.

The following is the table of figures:—

	1887.	1886.
Ratepayers	2,419	2,314
School Children	1,922	1,937
Acres Resident	1,275½	1,274½

CHIEF COOPER

He Resigns his Position on Monday Evening.

Capt. Cooper, who succeeded Chief Johnston as Chief of the Peterborough Police and has held the position up to the present, tendered his resignation to the Council at Monday evenings session.

On leaving Peterborough he will enter the services of the Protective Police and Fire Patrol Company, having been offered the position of Superintendent of the Toronto force. This position he has accepted and will commence its duties at once.

Captain Cooper has been an energetic and efficient officer, possessing especial qualifications for the position he has filled here. He has given repeated proofs of his sharpness, tact and detective ability, and has been resolute in maintaining order in our town. Of course in such a post as he occupied he could not look to give satisfaction to all; in some cases no doubt his course has been made difficult by differences of opinion in the council and elsewhere, and by perturbing influences which may have been brought to bear.

By his leaving Peterborough, the 57th, Peterborough Rangers, must before long lose the service of an able and experienced officer, as he was Captain of Company Six.

The appointment he has received in Toronto is to an important position which he is well fitted to fill and in which his services cannot fail to be found valuable.

At the Council meeting last night Capt. Cooper was voted $100.

Well, well! Kidd's kid boots are really kid and not shoddy

MINDEN.

SERIOUS LOSSES.—We were exceedingly sorry to learn that Mr. Thos. Waugh, of Lutterworth, lost a fine cow last week by her breaking her neck in her stall. Mr Wm. Ranson, Anson, also had a fine cow choked to death and Mr. James Kirkpatrick Minden, lost two milch cows all about the same time.

OUTRAGE.—Some miscreant deliberately unhitched the line from the snubbing post that held the boom around McArthur & Thompson's logs at the mouth of Gull river entering Gull lake. Fortunately the ice had not moved and will keep them in reasonable bounds until they are collected and boomed in again. Foreman Simeon has a club waiting for the miserable fiend who did it.

LOGS MOVING.—The various lumbering firms are now all on the alert to get their drives started. Messrs. Bravo and Ritchie arrived here on Tuesday night with about fifty men to start the logs of the Messrs. Strickland. From the appearance of the men and the ability and experience of the foremen, we expect to hear of a rapid and successful trip. The men all stopped at Morrow's Hotel while here, and were othe quietest and most orderly lot of men we have seen for a long time.

TIMBER DRIVE STARTED.—Messrs. McArthur & Thompson, of Fenelon Falls, who have been heavy buyers of timber of various descriptions in the back country during the past winter, have already got their drive of logs under way of their mills at Fenelon, having passed this place on Monday last. The drive is under the management of Mr. Simeon E. Lott, who has a rattling gang of river drivers that are capable of making good headway.—Eceo.

Put up in 50c. and $1 size.

WILLIAM O'BRIEN.

His Closing Words Before Leaving for Canada.

LONDON, May 2.—Replying to an address at Thurles, yesterday, Wm. O'Brien, who is now en route to Canada said: "The addresses and this magnificent welcome prove that I do not go alone on my mission, but that I carry the hearty good wishes and full approval of the Irish priests and people. Nothing has been left undone by the people to effect an amicable settlement with the Marquis of Lansdowne, but the tenantry and those acting for them have been treated most shamefully, and it only now remains for me to place the whole case before the bar of public opinion in Canada and the United States. I feel assured that when the liberty-loving Canadians have heard the true account of Lord Lansdown's cruelty to the tenantry, they will not permit themselves to be governed by such a man."

In an interview, Mr. O'Brien said: "Meetings have been arranged in the four principal cities of Canada—Montreal, Quebec, Ottawa and Toronto These I intend to compass, if possible, within eight days by which I trust Canadian public opinion will have had sufficient material to judge between Lord Lansdowne and the hundreds of poor people he has left homeless at Luggacurran. I have no notice as to the intentions of the Canadian Government but, the Canadians will not tolerate any attempt to refuse me fair play in pleading our poor people's case. If Lord Lansdowne has no better answer to make to me than a warrant of arrest, it will be a more crushing condemnation than any I could pass upon him. I am very certain that the people of Canada hold the fate of the whole humble community at Luggacurran in the hollow of their hands. Lord Lansdowne is carrying out the first systematic clearances attempted in Ireland since the years following the great famine. He proposes to sweep his estate bare of its whole population. I don't believe the Canadian people will allow that if they can prevent it. I propose to show that, even in a high state, no man is now exempt from responsibility for the cruel sufferings inflicted upon his poor tenants."

HOW PETERBOROUGH LOST ANOTHER BUSINESS HOUSE.

To the Editor of the Review.

DEAR SIR.—Some three weeks ago I arrived in Peterborough, fully prepared to open a Dry Goods store in your enterprising town, but, after looking the field over, I was convinced that it would be suicidal for me to embark in trade in a place where there is a business house so disgustingly aggressive and so lost to the interests of other houses as one you have located in your town. It is with surprise and chagrin that I notice that this particular house is steadily increasing its number of customers day by day, by employing methods that would make it very uncomfortable for me, if I were in business here, just as it does now for competing establishments who are striving to combat the evil.

I refer to J. C. Turnbull, George and Simcoe street, who sells a good Black Worsted, or a Scotch Tweed suit for $16, worth $20 in any other town or city. Fine unlaundried white shirts, from 35c to 50c., worth from 50c to 75c. All-Wool Tweeds at 40c, worth 50c. Fine Prints 9½c, worth 12½c. This is no place for me.

Yours in sorrow,
H. I. PRICE.

BOBCAYGEON.

BRIDGES.—The wind on Friday and Saturday did much to break up the lakes, and in doing so did not hesitate in breaking the floating bridges of Mud Lake and Pigeon Creek. They are to be repaired at once.

FURS.—To lateness of the ice is spoiling the spring trapping of the Indians. A number of muskrats have been taken, but rats are low in the market. The price of otter, beaver and bear has gone up slightly. A greater number of foxes have been killed than usual. It was a hard winter for them in the woods and they were compelled to come around the farm buildings, which brought many of them to a conversion from their wicked ways. The conversion usually took the for of a dollar and a half worth of groceries per pelt.

LOONS.—The crazy screams of the loon are heard again through the silent watches of the night, and at early morn. Seven were seen sporting themselves in Pigeon Lake the other morning. It will be a good thing if they become numerous around here, as they will make magnificent sport for the innocent shootists who come in the summer with their handsome kits. If there is anything that will tickle a loon half to death it is to get a pair of breach loading, nickle mounted, double and twist, brown canvas, copper riveted throughout, city sportsmen after him. He will stand on his head and kick at the clouds with delight. He will sit on the water like an old fashioned three-decker, with his off eye shut and his beak on the grin, till the city chap thinks if he can't blow that galoot clean out of the water at the first pop, it would be useless his shooting at a barn. Then he draws up, holds his breath, shuts his eyes, and pops. So likewise does the loon, and whilst the sport is confused looking for the pieces, the loon comes up within four feet and a half of the boat and laughs—a wild lunatic laugh—that would put unholy thoughts in to the best church deacon that ever lived. Then the rowing and shooting commences, and if the loon does not take at least five hours hilarious fun out of them, why he must be a young one, or is not feeling extra well. Yes, loons should be encouraged as one of our summer attractions.—Independent.

IRISH RENTALS.

LONDON, May 2.—A return will be published to-day giving the reductions in rent ordered by the Irish Land Court for the month of April. The figures show that the average reduction was 25 per cent. This exceeds the reduction demanded by the tenants in no case, except the Clanricarde estate, where the reduction asked was 30 per cent. and the reduction ordered was 35 per cent, and three other similar instances where the reduction asked exceeded 20 per cent.

ENORMOUS EMIGRATION.

LONDON, May 2.—The press comments on the enormous increase of emigrants leaving Queenstown, Dover, London, Hull, Bristol, Liverpool, Cardiff, Glasgow and other British ports for Canada, the United States and Australia. An overwhelming majority are going to the States. Over wide areas in the south of Ireland the entire able-bodied population is either leaving or preparing to leave. The aggregate emigration threatens to be the largest ever recorded in the history of Ireland. The Irish leaders are taking energetic measures to assist the emigrants.

ANTI-COERCION MEETINGS.

LONDON, May 2.—An unusually large number of Sunday political meetings were held by Liberal workingmen's clubs in the metropolis to consider the Irish Crimes Bill. Resolutions were adopted in every case opposing the bill, and pledging to support anti-coercion candidates at the next general election, and affirming confidence in Mr. Gladstone. Among the meetings was one in the Bermondsey Division, called under the auspices of the workingmen's organization that defeated Mr. Gladstone's candidate in 1880, and elected Mr. Edward Clark, one of Lord Beaconsfield's nominees. The fact that this section of the capital has thus early veered back again to the support of Mr. Gladstone is regarded here as a satisfactory proof of the change of public opinion going on in all parts of England.

M. SCHNAEBELE'S ARREST.

PARIS, May 2.—In an interview, M. Schnpebeles persisted that he knew of the German policeman and ran to French territory before he was arrested. A large number of guns also fell into the hands of the Spanish. Maibug was burned after being looted. Only the Chinese were saved. There were heavy losses on both sides. The native chiefs have fully submitted.

COLONIAL EXHIBITION ACCOUNTS.

LONDON, May 2.—The accounts of the Colonial Exhibition, just published, show a balance of $176,000. Of this sum it is proposed to transfer $125,000 to the Imperial Institute and the remainder to setting the deficit in the accounts of the inventories exhibition, and to forming a reserve fund.

IN Peterborough a discussion has been going on as to the time Spencer's lock works ceased operating in Kingston penitentiary. It was claimed, during the election contest, that the work had ceased then; but there was no foundation for that statement, neither for the statement of Hon. J.S. D. Thompson, minister of justice, who, in answer to the question, "Has the manufacture of locks been entirely given up in the Kingston penitentiary," replied, "Yes; some considerable time ago." The considerable time ago was March 31st, 1887. —Kingston Whig.

The Whig is mistaken as to one point. It was not claimed during the election contest that the work had ceased then, but it was then stated that the contract, which had expired, had not been and would not be renewed, and that Mr. Spencer had been allowed time to fill contracts and work up material. When the Inspector's report appeared, by suppressing its date, an attempt was made to show that it contradicted Mr. Stevenson's statement. The Whig just then came forward with evidence showing conclusively that what Mr. Stevenson said was correct, and it now kindly adds evidence of the truth of the statement of the Minister of Justice. Thanks.

Enjoy Life.

What a truly beautiful world we life in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health, but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof, that Green's August Flower, will make them free from disease, as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy-five per cent. of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the Head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it. d99

The Daily Review.

TUESDAY, MAY 3, 1887.

SHAMELESS FALSEHOOD.

We used to wonder, as probably many of our readers did, what possible benefit Mr. Blake's friends hoped to derive from the false claims they made after the first day of the Dominion general election. Now the object of their base trick is unveiled in all its deformity.

In reply to torrents of abuse and false charges from some of the Grit leaders, Sir John Macdonald related how Mr. Blake's lieutenants had telegraphed to British Columbia before the elections there stating that Mr. Blake had carried the country. The Grits in Victoria, being completely deceived, telegraphed to Mr. Blake their congratulations on his victory. This was two days after the election, and Mr. Blake knew then, if he did know before, that his lieutenants had telegraphed a deliberate lie to British Columbia. Yet instead of exposing the fraud he endorsed it, he became a party to it, he repeated it, for he answered as follows:—

"Thanks for congratulations of Victoria Reformers. May they do their duty and complete the Liberal triumph.

"Signed, EDWARD BLAKE."

He knew that he was stating a plain falsehood, that when he mendaciously said there had been a "Liberal triumph," there had really been a Liberal defeat.

Why did Mr. Blake take a hand in this criminal deception? Why did his friends originate it? The context of Mr. Blake's disgraceful telegram shows the design of their plot. It was to deceive the electors of British Columbia, to obtain if possible a Liberal triumph there by falsely pretending that there had been a Liberal triumph elsewhere. Mr. Blake has learned that he cannot obtain a verdict from the people of Canada on his merits, so he hoped to snatch one by shameless falsehood and deception, hoped to delude the electors into giving him a support which he was assured they would not extend to him if they knew the truth.

A little time ago we had Mr. Mowat uttering in the Ontario Legislature a deliberate falsehood to defer the confession of his corrupt dealing with his official patronage. And now we have publicly read in the House of Commons a mendacious telegram by means of which Mr. Blake tried to defraud the electors.

To what low estate has fallen the once great Reform party when its leader in the Dominion and its leader in Canada's foremost Province cannot expect their hearers to believe one word they utter however solemnly, if falsehood suits the purpose better.

MINORITY CANDIDATES.

Some Reformers are pretending that the recent vote was taken on the question whether Mr. King was entitled to the seat for Queen's County, N.B., and are accusing the Conservatives of sanctioning an outrage upon him. That was not the question at issue. The question was whether the House should resume jurisdiction in a disputed election case, or should leave it with the judges upon whom it had been deliberately conferred. To avoid the slightest risk of injustice through hasty action the matter was referred to the proper committee to examine and report. If it is decided that Mr. King cannot get his seat by this means, the House having divested itself of the right to interfere, he has still his recourse to the courts like any other candidate who thinks he has a right to a seat. Then can be duly tried the question whether his admitted breach of the law is grave enough to deprive him of the status of a candidate, with the subsidiary question whether if so there should be a new election or his opponent should have the seat. These are questions for a law court rather than for a legislature.

Without wishing to usurp the functions of judge and jury we may say that we are inclined to the opinion that Mr. King should have the seat, for we do not think he should be ousted by a technical imperfection if his deposit was made bona fide, and was not a fraudulent pretence like that in Frontenac. This, however, is a very different thing from saying that the House of Commons should turn itself into an Election Court.

The Grit howling about a minority candidate is sheer hypocrisy. Why they love a minority candidate if he is of their own political stripe. Is not their leader in Ontario giving a handsome present to his son at the cost of the people, on the recommendation of a minority candidate, of a candidate indeed whom Mr. Mowat expressly provided should be elected by a minority that he might be able to misrepresent the people and serve Mr. Mowat. There is no such fraudulent device for seating a minority candidate in the House of Commons, and if Mr. King is entitled to his seat he will get it. Conservatives can leave to Mr. Mowat and his friends the patent for making minority candidates.

The following communications were read:—

From W. H. Cooper, tendering his resignation as Chief of Police.—Received.

From R. E. Wood, in reference to a pending suit with the Grand Trunk.—Left in the hands of the Mayor and Councillor Davidson.

From John Carnegie, offering to give gravel for street purposes in exchange for that part of Water street lying between Sherbrooke and Dalhousie streets, and the land east of it to the river, so that the premises may be made suitable for a bridge factory.—Finance Committee.

From D. Breeze and six others, Wm. Whitehair and 30 others, T. Marks and Ridcard Hall, asking for street improvements.—Street and Bridge Committee.

From Mr. Judge, asking for time to pay taxes.—Collector not to press payment for a while.

The accounts were referred to the Finance Committee except those of Messrs. Smith and Roberts.

BY-LAW.

Councillor Moore introduced a by-law regarding the procuring of money to build bridges over the creek at Simcoe street, Hunter street and Brock street, for bearing the town's portion of the cost of building a new bridge at the locks, and for paying for cribbing Crescent street. Some objections were made on the second reading, and on Councillor Cahill's motion the Committee rose to sit again.

Councillor Cahill gave as a reason for moving the motion, in addition to the objectionable parts of the by-law, that there had been talk of the removal here of the Uxbridge Organ Company. It had been talked about during the past week, and the arrangement talked of was to supply the company with ground and buildings free of charge so long as they occupy it and employ a certain number of hands. It would require funds to carry out such an arrangement as this. The Council were to be asked to meet the directors soon, and it would be better to lay the matter over for a time for further consideration.

MEMORIAL.

Councillor Moore introduced a by-law to the Dominion Government in reference to dredging the Little Lake. It was passed after its several readings.

MEMORIAL.

Councillor Moore introduced a memorial to the Dominion Government in reference to the Jameson Bill now before the House of Commons, which proposes to give the private prosecutor in Scott Act cases one half the fines, the other half to go to the counties, and the Government inspectors all of the fines. The memorial protested against the bill. It passed its several readings.

STREET CROSSINGS.

Councillor Moore asked that the Street Inspector be instructed to lay crossings at several points at the west end of the town. The matter was referred to the Street and Bridge Committee with power to act.

TEMPORARY BRIDGE.

On motion of Councillor McNeil the Street Inspector was instructed to place a temporary bridge over the creek at Simcoe street, cost not to exceed $40.

MECHANICS INSTITUTE.

On motion of Councillor McNeil the Clerk was instructed to prepare a by-law to grant aid to the Mechanics Institute.

PLANTING THE WILLOW TREES.

On motion of Councillor Davidson the Street Inspector was instructed to plant willows on Crescent street where it has been recently cribbed.

Councillor Moore moved, seconded by Councillor Douglass—That a cribwork be placed by the creek at or near where it crosses Stewart street to prevent the water overflowing its north bank between the railway bridge on the Missing Link and Bethune street; and that the Chairman of the Street and Bridge Committee obtain the cedar required and that the Street Inspector proceed with the work as early as possible.—Lost.

The matter was referred to the Street and Bridge Committee to report.

NEW WAGGON.

On motion of Councillor Cahill the Street and Bridge Committee were instructed to buy a new waggon for corporation use.

THE SCOTT ACT.

Councillor Cahill introduced a memorial to the Governor-General for the repeal of the Scott Act in the County of Peterborough. The memorial set forth that the Scott Act had been in force for a year here and that it had failed in its objects; that it was the opinion of this Council that it promoted intemperance low shebeens and perjury; that the Council prayed for such legislation as was necessary for the repeal of the Act. The memorial passed its several readings without discussion, as there were no temperance Councillors present.

The Mayor thought it was not fair to pass it while the temperance men were away.

Councillor Cahill said that the Council had passed it unanimously. He didn't see why it wasn't fair.

CHIEF COOPER.

On motion of Councillor Moore seconded by Councillor Menzies, Capt. Cooper's resignation was accepted and the sum of $100 was granted to him over his salary.

ACTING CHIEF.

On motion of Councillor McNeil, seconded by Councillor Kelly, Constable Adams was appointed acting Chief.

The Council adjourned to meet at the call of the Mayor.

Montague speaks of "reposing upon the pillow of a doubt." Better repose upon the certainty that Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" will cure all chronic female diseases with their attendant pains and weaknesses.

Dear Sir,—Your "Favorite Prescription" has worked wonders in my case. It gave immediate relief.

SHIRLEY CARSTONE

By ELIZA ARCHARD.

Copyrighted by American Press Association.

So much is to be inferred from the wandering record.

At this point the vagabond's diary becomes once more direct and explicit.

"Once 'twas a fine morning. The sky was blue and a soft breeze was blowing. It was so fine a morning Lawyer Squeezit thought he'd go a walkin' fur his health. He was a walkin' along with the right dignity of a Christian jintleman with a clear conscience. A feller took a fit and fell down in the street. A crowd run up around him. Providence sent Lawyer Squeezit along there in that same streak o' time. The crowd pushed a rough feller up again the gentleman and knocked him over. His nice, clean coat was nearly clawed off him. The rough feller helped the gentleman up and brushed the mud off him, and begged his pardon with the best manners he knowed. He hadn't much larnin', that feller hadn't. Somebody in the crowd dropped a big yeller envellup. Providence put it where the rough feller's eye lit on it the minute it dropped. He picked it up. When the muss cleared away he tried to find the owner. He was a honest feller, if he was poor, the rough feller was. It's curus, but there hain't been no owner found for them papers down to this yer time. They're fastened into the back of my journal. The boy that got 'em was t'other kid what always had luck agin him."

There the journal ended, at least all that could be made out. There was more, but it was only incoherent maundering. The name of "Carstone" could be made once or twice, and once the name of "Edgerly," and the word "brother." The tramp was on his last legs. But at the end of this strange story there were several legal looking documents. One was to the effect that in such a year a male child, four or five years old, parentage unknown, was found alone in a room with a dead man, recognized as a burglar. The child was taken to the St. Hildegarde asylum, and afterward adopted by John and Frances Edgerly of Broomshire.

"It's a lie," exclaimed Robert Edgerly. "There's some infernal mistake about it. I don't believe a word of it."

"Wait," said Shirley. "Write to your father, and tell him about it. I know a strange story, about two boys, twin brothers, who were stolen from their home."

But Robert had not so long to wait. When events do begin to happen, they come in a rush. It was not a day later when the young man got this letter:

"MY DEAR SON—My health is falling, more rapidly than you think for. I want you and Brownie to come home and stay with me the rest of my time.

"There is something on my mind to tell you. I ought to have told you before, but I never could bring myself to do it. You would know it after my death, at any rate. Perhaps it may not be so terrible to you to hear the truth from me. I am as fond of my wife and I could not have contracted tenderly attached to you if we had been your real parents. And no son could have been more devoted and dutiful than you always were to us; no son could have realized more faithfully a father's and mother's brightest, fondest hopes.

"But, Robert, my boy, you were not our own son. We were absent from home for several years. On our return we adopted you, a lonely stray little boy, in the St. Hildegarde orphan asylum. None of our old friends knew but you were our own. You never knew it.

"Your parentage is unknown. The only clew is the forget-me-not ring, found fastened to a black ribbon around your neck, with its inscription and date inside, 'Myra, from Philip, July, 1854. But I am sure you came of good blood. When we found you there was still that about you that showed you had been tenderly cared for.

"I would spare myself forever the pain of telling you this, only it is necessary you should know you are not to be my heir. The estate must go to a distant relative, now in Australia. There is another thought that gives me anxiety, now that I know I am nearing my death. I have not been able to save much for you from my income. In truth, I have let you spend so much money in my lifetime that there will not be much left for you after I am dead. And still, even that causes me less trouble than it would if I did not know how capable you are and strong. I never brought you up to despise work, my son. In the New World, the land of promise, I know you will easily make your way. But not now. Now you must come home, you and Brownie, and come at once, to one who, as long as he lives, must still call himself

"Your loving father, JOHN EDGERLY."

The whole story was out. The American tramp and the English gentleman were twin brothers, of one blood, one race, one parentage, and even that unknown.

Here was a blow which staggered Robert Edgerly at last!

He and Brownie and Shirley had been reading the letter, with their heads together, all at once. Robert's head dropped upon the table in front of him. Shirley could not bear it.

"Robert! brother," said she, "don't. Hardly anything is worth taking a serious view of in this life. May be it'll even turn out you're an abominable American at last!"

But it was too much, this sudden whirling upside down of all his existence. He got upon his feet. Where was his pride of race, of family?

"I—I—never was so cut up in my life," he said faintly. "Who am I? Nobody, with no country, no name. I'm nobody's son!"

He choked up, and turned away to the window. Shirley followed him and linked her arm through his.

"But you're somebody's brother," she said, "and a very dear one."

Brownie cuddled up to him on the other side.

"And I'm sure you're somebody's husband," Brownie murmured, "and the darlingest that ever was."

And with two beautiful women, the dearest beings on earth to him, thus consoling him, what masculine creature could have been wholly comfortless?

CHAPTER XXIII.

"COME."

And Shirley? Well, at last something happened to Shirley.

She had given over looking for anything new in her existence. Once she had dreamed that change might come, but that was long since. She had ceased to think about it. She set her face forward, and drifted on with the tide of years. So far as existing for herself went her life was a steady repression.

The children were nearly all off her hands now.

"They're a credit to you, Shirley," said our old friend, Mis' Simpkins. "They've all done splendid."

Tom, the blundering brother, came home for the family reunion at Christmas. It was the first time he had set foot in the stone house since he left it at the age of 22, being at that time under a bit of a cloud. But Tom had redeemed himself nobly. He had gone to work with a will, and the good that was in him came uppermost.

Tom affected wild western ways tremendously. He wore a big beard and a slouched hat. He said the east crowded him up, and he longed to get back to the plains and the mountains, where he had room to breathe and turn around. He was fond of leaning up against something, resting upon one leg, with his hat on and his hands in his pockets, chewing tobacco the while and talking gorgeously about the west. Tom had got a nasty habit of chewing tobacco after he went away. And he talked of "my partner" and was fond of emphasizing his language with words not found in the dictionary. He could not speak his mind in ordinary English. It was not emphatic enough for him.

He wouldn't live in the east if they'd give him a whole state, quocha. People here were too picayunish for him. He told tales of buffalo and Indian that made the Linwood children's hair stand on end.

Life had thriven handsomely with Tom. He came back to them a big western man, with a certain dignity of his own that became him well. He came, too, with the title that his father had given him in sport in boyhood tacked to his name in earnest. Tom was a sure enough governor now, governor of the young territory wherein he had cast his fortunes twelve years before. Oh, yes, Tom was a brother to be proud of.

The brother and sister wandered about the old home together, talking of the changes in the village and of the family fortunes.

"You look a little pale, Shirley. Come to think, what a nose and grindstone business your life has been."

"I haven't had fun enough to spoil me, that's a fact."

"It's a shame, Shirley, how you have worked for us all. I never thought of it before."

"Yes," said Shirley. "I never saved myself any."

"But it must be a satisfaction to you to think how well all of us boys turned out," continued Tom, with a little pardonable pride. "There's every one of us now a credit to his family and his country. We're all a little past common, if I do say it myself. And I'm absolutely certain that some of us will be distinguished men before we die."

"Yes! I hope so."

"And," continued Tom, with a smack of self complacency, "it must be a pride and comfort to a woman to know that she has sacrificed her life to bring up good men, who take prominent places in the world."

But there was no complacency, on the contrary there was bitterness, in Shirley's voice as she answered:

"Yes, that's like a man. A woman is always to be the ladder for great men to climb up by. How would you like such a life of self sacrifice for yourself, Tom?"

"I—oh, well—that's different."

"Is it?" said Shirley.

They gathered in, one by one, the Carstone children, now the Carstone men and women. Alice had prepared a surprise for the Christmas. This youngest child of Shirley's care had shown the not uncommon artistic taste of the girl of the period. As she grew older this taste deepened into a genuine talent, accompanied by that which is uncommon in the girl of the period—a sincere resolve to make something of it.

Mutilation of Trade Dollars.

There will be considerable delay in the redemption and payment of these dollars, and those who thought that all they would have to do was to go and get their money will be sadly disappointed, and it may be a long time before they are waited upon. The capacity for counting the dollars is only $100,000 per day. They have to be received, counted, and, if found correct, then certified to and paid. Hence the delay. But a new and big cause for alarm among holders of the trade dollar has arisen. It is that nearly all the trade dollars coming back from China are mutilated or "clipped," and these are only bought as bullion and not redeemed for $1. The Chinese had a habit, and it has proved a bad one, of "clipping," or marking with some of their outlandish characters each dollar that came into their possession.

These marks told of the character of silver and weight in each coin. Thousands of the dollars have as many as six or eight different Chinese stamps, or "clips," on them. All thus mutilated are no good, except as bullion. Now, as the trade dollar was coined for the Chinese, it is probable that a large majority of the coin is thus mutilated, and that is what makes the count at the assay offices so slow. Another scheme of mutilation was the disfiguring of the Goddess of Liberty on the face of the dollar. On some of the coins sent to the treasury here, the poor goddess has been almost denuded of her flowing robes, and placed in awkward positions.

A large number of samples have been sent to Secretary Fairchild and Treasurer Jordan, and the artistic sketches are remarkable. Treasurer Jordan has a large number of coins mutilated by the Chinese. All coins in the least mutilated, scratched, or punctured are refused, and only accepted as bullion. This decision has alarmed some of the speculators north, who went in heavy and purchased millions of dollars' worth of the trade dollars all the way from 85 to 97 cents, and they are anxious now to close out their lots at 99¼, preferring to lose the half cent now than lose more when the coin is examined and found mutilated, for advices received here are that many of the millions to be redeemed are in such a condition that they will only be purchased as bullion.—Baltimore American.

Hundreds of Buffalo Skeletons.

Between the Little Dry and Big Dry we saw what has become of the millions of buffaloes. Hundreds of carcasses lay scattered over the prairie in every direction. They lay thickly along both sides of the road, and the bad lands were full of them. After passing the Red buttes, on the way up, we were hardly ever out of sight of a bleaching skeleton, and sometimes a score were in sight at one time. Once I counted seventeen lying grouped together in a space of not over two acres in extent. It was a mournful sight. Although these buffaloes were killed only four years ago or less, the powerful effect of the dry winds and intense heat of summer have literally stripped the flesh from the bones and left the whole skeletons lying just as they fell, bleached as white as snow on the upper side and very often with nearly every bone in its place. The skinners had left the heads of the bulls unskinned and the thick hide had dried down upon the skulls as hard as horn, holding the tangled masses of the shaggy frontlet firmly in place until it bleached brown in the sunshine and finally was worn away by wind and weather. A little later we picked up eight just such skeletons as the above, absolutely complete and with not three pounds of dried meat remaining on any one of them. The bleaching power of Montana weather is perfectly marvelous.

As we traveled back to Miles City in December we gathered up fifty-one perfect skulls of old bull and cow buffaloes to store up for the museums of the world to get will beg for them a little later when the buffaloes are all dead and the bone gatherers have gathered in and crushed the last bone to be found on the buffalo ranges. And I tell you it afforded me solid comfort to have it in my power to lay in such a goodly store before it was too late. For forty miles north of Miles City the buffalo bones have already been gathered up clean!—William T. Hornaday in New York Sun.

A Composite City Indeed.

New York claims 350,000 German residents and ranks the second German city of the world, Berlin being the first. What nationality is New York? One is tempted to digress and ask the question. Everybody knows it is the principal Irish city in the world. There are a good many people living in young Italy, and on Sunday night about 9 o'clock, if you stand on Twenty-fourth street, near Delmonico's, you will believe you are in Paris, because every passer by is talking French. If a picture of a representative Gothamite were called for it would have to be a "composite" picture, and one would have to awaken to the fact that although there is a true Bostonian there is no true New Yorker, or, rather, that there are eleven of them. Irishman, German, Frenchman, Pole and other foreigners, as well as half a dozen of American types, would have to sit for the picture of the true New Yorker, each individual influencing the others and being influenced by all of them, with a result as interesting as uncanny. It is possible to take a composite picture, and such a picture as the one imagined above ought to be taken to give a clear idea of the future cosmopolite.—Chicago Times.

A Nursemaid's New Attire.

Here is an accurate picture of—whom do you suppose? A Fifth avenue nursemaid. Where is her white cap? She doesn't wear any. And her apron? That is gone, too. How, then, is she to be distinguished from pretty girls who are not servile? By means of her wide white linen collars and cuffs. The fashionable matron concerns herself acutely about the costuming of the household servants. Just the same as in clothing herself, she seeks to keep different and ahead of the multitude.

White caps and aprons on children's nurses have become common. Therefore the swell mother sends her offspring out for an airing with a newly dressed servitor. This young person is clad plainly but neatly. Her bonnet is stylish, her bodice is fitted like a glove, her skirts are gracefully draped, and her feet are in French heeled gaiters; but conspicuous badges of her menial calling are a dead white collar and equally clean but glossless cuffs. These impart the desired singularity, and at the same time are new.—New York Cor. Cincinnati Enquirer.

BISHOP DOWLING HERE

RECEIVED BY THE PRIESTS AND THE PEOPLE.

The Installation Services at the Cathedral—Eulogy by His Grace the Archbishop—Addresses from the Priests and People.

His Lordship Bishop Dowling, of the Diocese of Peterborough, arrived at the seat of the episcopate at noon to-day by the Midland railway.

There was a large number of people at the station to welcome the prelate on the occasion of his entry into Peterborough. When the train stopped the crowd wedged to the door of the parlor car to catch a glimpse of His Lordship. The reception committee, Messrs. John Corkery, John Hackett, E. Phalen, Thos. Kelly, T. Cahill, Robt. White, J. C. Sullivan, John Delaney, John Lynch, F. J. Daly, E. D. Gough, R. W Muncaster, J. J. Sheehy, J. O'Meara L. M. Hayes, H. LeBrun, J. McAleer, Bernard Morrow, Dr. Brennan, T. Dolan, J. McIlmoyle and J. C. Crevier were present representing the congregation of the Cathedral to tender the new Bishop welcome.

It was some time before the Bishop appeared. His Lordship's mother and other relatives were conducted to the carriages which stood waiting. A number of the visiting priests came from the car. His Grace Archbishop Lynch appeared followed by the new Bishop, who was robed in the purple cassock with a golden chain around his neck and a golden cross pendant from it. The people cheered as they came to the door. His Grace said: "This is your Bishop. He will now bestow his blessing." Then Bishop Dowling stretched forth his hands and said: "May God's blessing be with you. God bless you. I will see you all at the church."

The Archbishop, the Bishop of Peterborough, and the visiting Bishops, Vicars and priests, then were conducted to the carriages and the procession moved toward the cathedral along Charlotte street to Aylmer street, along Aylmer street to Hunter street and up Hunter street to the Cathedral. His Grace the Archbishop and His Lordship the Bishop, who occupied the first two carriages alighted in front of the cathedral and went to the Convent de Notre Dame where the robing was done. The priests robed in the palace.

The decorations were very appropriate. Over the gateway there was an arch of evergreens having a quatrefoil design and on it were mottoes bidding thrice welcome. At the entrance of the church there was a bannerette bearing the words, "God Bless Our Bishop." Inside the Cathedral was decorated with festoons of colored bunting, the altar was ablaze with candles, and the whole place redolent with incense. Over and above the altar were the following mottoes: "Regina Coeli et Terræ," "Benedictus Qui Venit in Nomine Domini," "Monstra te esse Matrem," "Bienvenue a Notre Pasteur," and others. A carpet was stretched from the altar down the central aise, out through the main entrance and across the street to the convent.

After robing the priests of the Diocese: the Rev. Fathers Brown, Port Hope; Kelly, Ennismore; O'Connel, Douro; Murray, Cobourg; Quirk, Hastings; Ouellett, Garden River: O'Connell, Brighton; McEvay, Fenelon Falls; McClosky, Victoria Road; Larkin, Grafton; Connelly, Downeyville; Casey, Campbellford; Bretherton, Bracebridge; Bloen, North Bay; and Sweeney, Brumley, came from the palace robed in soutane and surplice and proceeded to the convent. A procession was formed in which the alter boys came first, the priests of the diocese second, Vicars-General Heenan, of Hamilton, and Laurent, Toronto, next, Bishops Carbery, Hamilton; Bishop O'Mahony, Toronto: Bishop Cleary, Kingston, and the Arch-bishop next, and finally His Lordship, arrayed in full pontifical vestments, with crozier in hand and mitre on head, supported by Fathers Conway and Fayolle.

At the entrance of the church His Lordship was met by Vicar-General Laurent, administrator of the diocese, who delivered up the keys and read prayers. After sprinkling with holy water and being incensed, His Lordship moved on up the aisle bestowing his blessing on his flock.

The Archbishop ascended the steps to the altar, and turning to the congregation said: We present to you, venerable clergy of the diocese of Peterborough, on the part of His Holiness Pope Leo XIII, Thomas Joseph Dowling as your Bishop, and I hold in my hand the Pope's apostolic letter in which he unites in presenting the Very Rev. Father to you. I rejoice exceedingly in Christ our Lord that we are presenting to you a worthy successor to the late venerable pious Bishop Jamot. In selecting from among the venerable able clergy of this Province, of which there were many, for one suitable to fill this office we sought for one eminent for piety, learning, love for the children and love for the poor—for one that would follow in the footsteps of the venerable, the first Bishop of Peterborough. We found that man in the Rev. Dr. Dowling. I may say no more; but I rejoice exceedingly, and also do the bishops of this Province, and many other Procinces rejoice exceedingly that the church has one more bishop to fight her battles and to work for the salvation of the people."

His Grace then outlined the service to follow. Prayers would be said, addressed to St. Peter, the patron of the diocese and of the church, for the long life of the new Bishop. The clergy of the diocese would profess their obedience and renew their vows. He asked the priests and and people to sustain the hands of their bishop in the work of salvation.

The service was then conducted.

At the conclusion of the service, the clergymen renewed their vows of fealty and kissed the Bishop's hand.

ADDRESS FROM THE CLERGY.

The Very Rev. Vicar-General LAURENT, of Lindsay, then read an address from the clergy of the diocese, as follows:—

Address of the Clergy of the Diocese of Peterborough, to the Right Rev. Thomas Joseph Dowling, D D., Bishop of Peterborough.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR LORDSHIP,—We, the priests of the Diocese of Peterborough. have assembled on this solemn occasion, to extend to your Lordship a kindly greeting and a sincere welcome to your episcopal See.

The official announcement that a Bishop had been appointed to the vacant See of Peterborough, brought joy to the homes and hearts of us all, both priests and people. Our widowed Diocese now lays aside her robes of mourning, and rejoices with a double joy in welcoming and receiving as her spiritual head, a Bishop, whom all unite in honoring. We welcome you, My Lord, to your episcopal city. We recognize in Your Lordship, the possession of all those noble qualities and virtues which serve to adorn a Bishop in God's Holy Church.

It is with sentiments of the highest regard and sincerest esteem, that we welcome as our Bishop, you, My Lord, whose name has come to us laden with the sweet odour of good deeds, whose eloquence and priestly virtues have endeared you to the faithful among whom you ministered, whose kindly disposition and noble qualities of head and heart have ever been the admiration of your fellow priests, whose administrative ability has received the commendation of the Bishops of the Province, whose labor for many years in the vineyard of the Lord, has now received a fitting reward, in your Lordship's appointment, by our Holy Father, to the high and onerous office of Bishop of Peterborough.

You bring, My Lord, to your new duties great ability, profound knowledge, and well tried experience. You know full well the many wants of this new and growing country.

We feel assured that all shall find in Your Lordship a true shepherd, a faithful guardian of the flock entrusted to your care. You come, my Lord, to a diocese but lately established, scarcely five years ago the late lamented Dr. Jamot was appointed first Bishop of Peterborough. With great zeal and energy he laid the foundation, on which you, my Lord, are now called to build.

As a friend of education you will be pleased to know that the christian training of youth in this diocese has not been neglected. Under your Lordships' fostering care, we are assured that the Catholic educational advantages of the diocese of Peterborough will be increased and multiplied.

We shall ever feel a religious pride in assisting your Lordship with our humble services. We shall endeavour by our fidelity to duty, and our fealty to your Lordship, to show the sincerity of our welcome, the depth of our love and the greatness of our esteem for your Lordships' person and episcopal character.

Through you, My Lord, we wish to express to the Very Rev. Father Laurent our appreciation of his kind, just, and able administration of the Diocese during the past year. We wish also to thank the Most Rev. Bishops, and the Rev. Clergy from a distance, for their presence on this happy occasion, so propitious for the welfare of the Diocese of Peterborough.

We are moreover deeply thankful to Our Holy Father Pope Leo XIII for appointing Your Lordship to rule over the church in this Diocese. We feel, My Lord, that in honoring you, His Holiness has honored the Priesthood of the whole Province.

Again, My Lord, we welcome you ad multos annos. Humbly asking Your Lordships' blessing we remain Your Lordships' faithful and devoted priests.

HIS LORDSHIP'S REPLY.

HIS LORDSHIP, in reply, said he thanked them sincerely for the hearty welcome on the occasion of his installation as a Bishop. He rejoiced to know that the appointment made by the Holy Father met with the cordial approval of the entire priesthood of the diocese. They had been pleased to draw a picture of him which he failed to recognize. The virtues and abilities they ascribed to him he did not possess in such a degree. The success of his former parish he ascribed to God and to the people there. Three things had impressed him since he came to Peterborpugh, the great honor of the Episcopacy, the responsibilities attached to the office and his own unworthiness of the honor. He had not sought the office, but it came to him, unworthy as he was, by the recommendation of the clergy, from the Shepherd of Souls. He was consoled by the reflection that he was priviledged to walk in the footsteps of that holy and apostolic man, Bishop Jamot, who had laid the foundation of the success of the diocese. He rejoiced also to know that he was promised the faithful co-operation of the zealous clergy. As to education, it would be his duty to carry out the will of the Holy Father and see that education was made more Christian. He was glad to hear that there were flourishing educational institutions. He again thanked them simerely and asked for their prayers. He hoped for the intercession of the Holy Mother and the great saints that he might receive from God grace to do dis duty. He depended, under God, for their co-operation to succeed in the mission entrusted to him.

ADDRESS FROM THE CONGREGATION.

Mr. J. W. FITZGERAD read the following address from the congregation of St. Peters:—

To the Right Reverend Thomas Joseph Dowling, D D., Bishop of Peterborough:—

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR LORDSHIP,—On behalf of the Congregation of St. Peter's Cathedral, Peterborough, we humbly beg to congratulate you on your elevation to the episcopate, and to tender to you as our bishop our welcome and homage.

We beg also to extend to the distinguished prelates and priests, who have accompanied Your Lordship, our appreciation of the honor conferred on us by their presence on this auspicious occasion.

The joyous feelings with which we greet Your Lordship's arrival amongst us, are, you will permit us to say, tempered with sorrow, remembering, as we do, that to-morrow we will commemorate the anniversary of the death of Your Lordship's sainted predecessor, bishop Jamot, to whose memory is due from us, that veneration and respect which the recollection of his many Christian virtues cannot fail to call forth.

In giving expression to these sentiments of attachment and duty, to the memory of the illustrious Bishop whose place you have been chosen to fill—and we feel to adorn—we cannot omit to testify our recognition of the devotion, scrupulous exactitude, and perfect discipline, with which the affairs of the diocese have been temporarily administered by the Very Reverent Vicar-General Laurent nor can we refrain from offering a tribute of praise to our own zealous and beloved pastor, the Rev. Father Conway, who, in connection with his able coadjutors, the Reverend Fathers Fayolle, O'Brien and Rudkins, has since assuming charge of this cathedral parish worked so earnest y and successfully for the advancement of our interests, and who, while administering faithfully to our spiritual requirements, has also toiled unwearily for the progress of the temporalities of the church, as is amply evidenced by the large sum which he has during the course of the past year, through a constant and rigid system of economy saved and applied to the reduction of the parochial debt.

But, while recognizing the faithful performance of duty in these respects, we are not strangers to your Lordship's unwearied efforts in the cause of God and our holy church, nor are we unmindful of the enduring services you have rendered to your late congregation; how by your writings, industry and energy, from an humble foundation you have achieved great results, and replaced the little church of former days by a beautiful edifice which would do credit to any of our cities.

We are aware, too, that when a few years ago it pleased Almighty God to relive from his labors in this life, the late Bishop Crinnon, of Hamilton, Your Lordship was by the unanimous voice of the priesthood, selected to discharge the duties of Administrator of that important diocese.

How faithfully and satisfactorily you performed these and all other duties appertaining to your holy office, is proved by your elevation to the important and exalted position which you now occupy in the church of God.

And while we would as obedient children of the Church, and in duty bound humbly bow to the appointment by our Holy Father of any bishop to rule over us, it is, nevertheless, to us a source of gratification to know that we have in your Lordship an ecclesiastic of great distinction and literary culture, and possessing high administrative and executive abilities.

We thank Almighty God for this signal blessing conferred upon us and upon this diocese.

We thank our Most Holy Father Pope Leo XIII, under whose glorious pontificate the Mother Church of Christendom at the close of this nineteenth century continues beautiful, fresh and vigorous, the bulwark of faith and morals and social order, as authoritative and infallible as on the day when she received from her Divine Founder the mandate to teach and spread throughout all nations the everlasting truths of the Catholic faith, for the honor he has conferred upon us by appointing as our diocesan head a prelate so eminent and distinguished as your Lordship.

In the spirit of loving and obedient children of our Holy Church, we therefore offer to your Lordship as our Bishop, our unreserved submission, and respectfully request your Apostolic benediction, and we pray that God may long spare you to preside over the diocese.

FRENCH-CANADIAN ADDRESS.

Mr. E. CREVIER read an address from the French-Canadian members of the congregation, which was as follows:—

A Sa Grandeur Monseigneur Thomas Joseph Dowling, Evegue de Peterborough:

MONSEIGNEUR,—Depuis le jour ou la nouvelle heureuse de votre elevation a l'episcopat nous est parvenue, nous, Canadiens-Francais de Peterborough, n'avons cesse de prier pour Votre Grandeur.

Nos prieres continueront et ou que vous soyez Monseigneur, dans les missions lointaines de Votre diocese ou pres de nous elles vous accompagneront toujours.

C'est pour nous un devoir, et un devoir du coeur, auquel nous ne saurions manquer. Les enfants sont toujours heureux de prier pour leur Pere.

Il est encore pour nous, Monseigneur, un autre devoir.

Choisi par Dieu, elu par l'Esprit Saint pour etre notre Chef, nous sommes heureux, Monseigneur, de profiter de l'occasion de votre installation au Siege Episcopal de Peterborough, pour vous assurer de notre obeissance et de notre soumission.

Par votre dignite episcopale vous etes, Monseigneur, plus grand que les monarques et les rois.

Votre science, votre prudence, votre justice et vos vertus, portees sur les ailes de la renommee ont etendu le diocese de Hamilton [illegible]

Que Votre Grandeur veuille bien recevoir aujourdhui nos sentiments les plus respectueux.

C'est pourquoi, Monseigneur, les Canadiens-Francais de Peterborough sont heureux de vous voir ou milieu d'eux, ils sont heureux de se joindre au clerge de ce diocese, a la congregation Irlandaise pour repeter a Votre Grandeur: "Beni soit celui que vient au nom du Seigneur."

Avec notre pasteur que nous aimons tous et que n'a qu'une ambition au monde, le salut de nos ames, qu'il nous soit permis, Monseigneur, de vous reiterer notre plus profond respect, notre plus entiere soumission et notre plus filial amour.

Que Dieu, Monseigneur, verse sur Votre Grandeur l'abondance de ses graces, ses dons les plus grands, qu'il vous accorde longue vie, saintete et bonheur. Tel est la plus ardent desir de nos coeurs.

Qu'il nous soit permis en terminant, Monseigneur, de vous demander votre paternelle benediction.

The following is a translation of the address:—

To His Lordship Monseigneur Thomas Joseph Dowling, Bishop of Peterborough:

MONSEIGNEUR,—Since the day when the happy news of your elevation to the episcopacy reached us, we, the French Canadians of Peterborough have not ceased to pray for your Lordship.

Our prayers will continue and wherever you may be, Monseigneur, in the distant missions of your diocese or near us, they will always accompany you.

This is for us a duty, dear to our hearts, in which we will not fail. Children are always happy to pray for their father.

There is also for us, Monseigneur, another duty.

Chosen by God, elected by the Holy Spirit to be our chief, we are happy, Monseigneur, to profit by the occasion of your installation in the Episcopal See of Peterborough to assure you of our obedience and of our submission.

By your Episcopal dignity you are, Monseigneur, greater than monarchs and Kings

Your knowledge, your prudence, your justice and your virtues, carried on the wings of renown have extended from the diocese of Hamilton and have reached as far as us.

We ask your Lordship to receive to day the sentiments of our greatest respect.

This is why, Monseigneur, the French Canadians of Peterborough are happy to receive you in our midst, they are happy to join with the Clergy of the Diocese and with the Irish congregation to repeat to your Lordship:—

"Blessed be he who cometh in the name of the Lord."

With our pastor, whom we all love, and who has only one ambition in the world, the salvation of our souls, we would be permitted, Monseigneur, to reiterate our most profound respect, our most entire submission and our most filial love.

May God, Monseigneur, pour upon your Lordship the abundance of his grace, his greatest gifts, may he accord to you long life, holiness and happiness; such is the most ardent desire of our hearts.

May we be permitted in conclusion, Monseigneur to ask your paternal benediction.

Signed in the name of the French Canadians,

(Signatures as above.)

THE REPLY.

Bishop DOWLING, replying in French, thanked the people for the kind greeting. He was glad to hear that there were a number of French people here and he hoped that, following in the footsteps of his predecessor, he would be able to secure the love of all.

Continuing in English, the Bishop said he had only to say that it afforded him great gratification on the day of his entrance to the diocese to hear such sentiments of submission and good will. He rejoiced that the memory of Bishop Jamot was held very dear by them; and one way to show that, after prayer at the altar, would be to sympathize with and assist his successor. He rejoiced that religion flourished here, and in the success achieved in the diocese under Father Laurent and in the city under Father Conway. His first act of administration since his arrival had been to appoint Father Laurent Vicar-General of the diocese, and Father Conway, Chancellor. He concluded by asking their prayers.

The Archbishop, the Bishops and the clergy then passed out, Bishop Dowling giving his benediction to the people as he passed down the aisle, and proceeded to the Convent de Notre Dame. From the Convent they proceeded to the Murray Street Separate School, where a dinner was served for the prelates and the clergy.

FROM
J. J. SHEEHY

I beg to say that contrary to announcements which appeared in the Peterborough papers for the past two months, I DO NOT intend to remove to T. Dolan & Co's Dry Goods Store, nor have I any connections whatever with that establishment. The final arrangements not being satisfactory to me, I withdrew from the projected change, and intend carrying on the Dry Goods business in my usual stand next to Lech's Hat Store.

It is my intention in the future as in the past to show at all seasons nothing but new and fresh goods in the various lines of Dry Goods and Gent's Furnishings; and by doing so, hope to retain the confidence which I am proud to say, I have enjoyed from the public since commencing business two years ago.

MECHANICS INSTITUTE

NINETEENTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE MEMBERS OF THE INSTITUTE.

Satisfactory Report of the Board of Directors—The Library and Reading Room—Mr. Corkery's Accounts—Electing Officers.

The nineteenth annual meeting of the Peterborough Mechanics' Institute was held on Monday evening in the rooms of the Institute, with the President, Mr. Wm. English, in the chair.

After the reading of the minutes the report of the Board of Directors was read as follows:—

To the members of the Peterborough Mechanics Institute.

At the close of another year, during which the progress of the Institute has been very satisfactory, your directors in accordance with the by-law to that effect, beg to submit for your considerations the following report. The change made at the quarterly meeting of the members held in November, by which tickets instead of expiring on the first of May, were made valid for a whole year from date of purchase, together with with the better advertising of the many advantages of the Institute, has resulted in an increase of membership from 281 to 336. There are 115 junior members and a great many of these are apprentices in the manufacturing and other establishments in the town. These youths cannot fail in benefiting by their connection with the Institute. Two evening classes were organised and carried on through the winter. One of these taught by Mr. John Fraser, took the subjects of mechanical and free-hand drawing. Twenty members joined this class and there was an average attendance of fourteen. Work done by this class in the previous session was shown in connection with the Canadian Educational Exhibit at the Colonial Exhibition, and a commemoration medal and diploma have been received in acknowledgement thereof. The second class under the charge of Mr. G. S. Bean, consisted of twenty-one members, and took up book-keeping and commercial arithmetic.

The directors regret exceedingly that so few of our young men avail themselves of the privileges of these classes, and would again invite the attention of those who are desirous of improving themselves to the excellent facilities afforded by the winter evening classes, held in connection with the Mechanics' Institute. The number of books issued during the year, as will be seen by the report of the Library Committee, was very large, and, although the great demand has been for fiction and miscellaneous works, still it is gratifying that there has been a very fair increase in the number of books read of a more solid and instructive character.

While this is the case it must be confessed that in a town of such dimensions as Peterborough, which is steadily increasing in population, a very much greater addition might naturally be expected to our membership and in consequence a larger issue of books. And the Directors feel certain that were our citizens to visit the Institute and see the advantages offered to the reading public, many who now stand aloof would pay the small annual fee and secure good reading for themselves and families.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

The following report of the Library Committee was presented:—

To the President of the Peterborough Mechanics' Institute:

SIR,—Your Library Committee beg to report that 240 volumes have been added to the library during the past year at a cost of $342 06, consisting of the following:—

Included in the above Works of Reference is the American Cyclopædia in 16 volumes, also the Annual, as far as published (10 volumes), this being a very valuable addition to the library, and with the Encyclopædia Britannica (as far as published), render the Reference Library almost perfect for all ordinary readers, and exceedingly useful to those members who may wish to consult it.

During the year 7,287 volumes have been issued, as follows, viz.:—

ENNISMORE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

WEATHER NOTES.—April has been a cold, backward month, although only once it was below zero, on the morning of the first, but it was throughout discouraging to farmers and others. Frost had been felt almost every night and was sometimes severe, considering the time of year. Snow or hail fell on 8 days to the depth of 2 inches, the last on the morning of the 27th. Rain fell on 7 days to the depth of one inch and 80-100 of an inch. The average temperature of the month was 37 degrees at sunrise and sunset, which is very low for April, the highest this year in the shade only reached 68 deg. It may interest some of our readers while we call to mind April, 86. In that year at 3 p. m, on the 15th, the temperature stood at 70 deg. in the shade, on the 16th at 71 deg., on the 17th at 69 deg., on the 18th at 78 deg., on the 19th at 76 deg., on the 20th at 79 deg., on the 21st at 77 deg., on the 22nd at 78 deg and on the 23rd at 80°, while everyone during the present month has experienced the difference We had two thunder storms, but little rain. Grey birds were first seen on the first, robbins on the 7th, butterflies on the 8th, cranes on the 13th, loons on the 19th, wild duck on the 21st and gulls on the 27th; frogs were first heard on the evening of the 24th; auroral lights were never visible during the month. The following are the different points from which the wind was blowing at sunrise during the month respectively, viz.: Northeast, three days, northwest 12 days, southeast eight days, southwest two days, south one day, east two days, north one day and west one day.

FALL WHEAT.—On some favored spots ploughing commenced on the 18th and sowing on the 22nd, but in general little has been done yet. Concerning the fall wheat it would be premature to give a decisive opinion. The season is so cold and late and the roots are not yet growing, we cannot tell how it will succeed. At all events some have commenced to plough it up and what will be left will not be near an average crop.

Enjoy Life.

What a truly beautiful world we life in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health, but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof, that Green's August Flower, will make them free from disease, as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy-five per cent. of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the Head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it. d90

GLASGOW, May 3.—Joseph Chamberlain, in a speech here to day, said he would willingly welcome Gladstone and his followers back to "the old Liberal party." TRIAL OF RUSSIAN PLOTTERS.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 3.—One of the persons who have just been convicted of plotting against the Czar is a student named Oullanoff, the son of a high Russian official. During the trial he displayed the highest intelligence, and maintained a most dignified bearing. Entering into a minute scientific dispute with Feederoff, a renowned chemist, he compelled the latter to acknowledge that the prisoner was entirely right, and he himself in the wrong. At the final sitting Oullanoff made a brilliant speech. He declared that neither he nor his companions feared death. He could imagine nothing more sublime than to die in an endeavor to deliver the unfortunate Russian people. Hundreds of young men would imitate him until the Czar would be compelled to change his despotic system. The prisoners, with one exception, are all intelligent gentlemen of good families. One said he intended to murder the Czar with a revolver, but afterwards he thought a bomb would be better.

Major Saunderson, speaking on a resolution affirming the necessity of definite public disproof by the Parnellities of the charges that they associate with murderers, said he hoped Messrs. Labouchere and Conybeare, when the Crimes bill passed, would carry out their threat to go to Ireland to preach sedition They would then have to preform the only useful work in their lives, breaking stones and picking oakum. Mr. Sexton, he added, had threatened to thrash him. Mr. Sexton knew his address, and would be happy to receive him and would give him a warm reception. The resolution was carried with enthusiasm.

THE LIBERAL UNIONISTS.

LONDON, May 3.—The meeting at the Devonshire House on Saturday appointed a committee, consisting of Lord Hartington, Mr. John Bright, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, Sir Henry James and others, to discuss the points of dissension among the Unionists, and to consult with the Government with the view of adjusting the differences. At a meeting to-day all the differences were arranged except with reference to the venue clause of the Crimes Bill, which Mr. Bright and the majority of the committee wish to reject, while Lord Hartington and his followers want it retained.

THE QUEEN'S JUBILEE.

LONDON, May 3.—There will be a choir of nearly two hundred and fifty voices at the jubilee thanksgiving service in Westminster Abbey. The singers will be placed in galleries on each side of the chancel. In the first gallery from the organ loft there will be the whole of the Abbey choir, including the voluntary contingent, and the remainder of the space will be devoted to the choirs of St. Paul's Cathedral, of St. George's Chapel, Windsor, of the Chapels Royal of St. James and Whitehall, of the Temple Church, of Lincoln's Inn Chapel and of All Saints Church, Margaret street, as well as numerous special singers. The Queen is to sit in the Coronation chair, with the Royalties and great officers around her and behind her. In on of the transepts will be the House of Lords, and in the other the House of Commons, placed on tiers of seats, so that Her Majesty will have the high Court of Parliament on both sides, and she will be in full view of every legislator. Accommodation has been provided in the transept for Privy Councillors who are neither peers nor members of the House of Commons.

ALLEGED DYNAMITERS.

LIVERPOOL, May 3.—It is reported that the police are shadowing a number of persons whose connection with the American dynamiters and importation of the explosives from America is all but established, and their arrest is only a question of a few hours.

O'BRIEN'S VISIT.

LONDON, May 3.—The St. James' Gazette says: "Canadians have nothing to do with Lord Lansdowne as an Irish landlord, and Mr. O'Brien's object is only to discredit him in his vice-regal capacity. The Canadian plan of Campaign is as illegal as the Irish one, and certain Canadian people will not tolerate it."

THE VOTE ON CLOSURE.

LONDON, May 3.—One Gladstone Liberal, Mr. Hanbury Tracy, voted with the Government last night to enforce closure. Thirty-three Liberal unionists did likewise.

COMPROMISING DISCLOSURES.

BERLIN, May 3.—The rumors that martial law will be proclaimed in the Reichsland are not believed. Legal proceedings against French spies will be continued, and disclosures very compromising to some of the highest French officials are expected. Russia has displayed throughout the Schnaebles affair an attitude highly friendly to Germany. Contrary French assertions are unfounded.

THE HEBRIDES QUESTION.

LONDON, May 3.—In the House of Lords last night, Lord Harrowly, referring to affairs in New Hebrides, said the presence of French soldiers there raised the question of the sanctity of international obligations. He objected to the French occupation and to the Hebrides becoming the home for released French criminals. Lord Salisbury replied that negotiations were going on between the English and French Governments, and he expected that within a week the former would receive a communication from the French ambassador.

TO CONTEST NORTH-EAST CORK.

DUBLIN, May 3.—Mr. Parnell has selected Mr. Wm. O'Brien, editor of United Ireland, as the Home Rule candidate for Northeast Cork, to fill the vacancy in the House of Commons caused by the resignation of Mr. Leamy, Home Ruler.

BRENNAN WINS HIS SUIT.

LONDON, May 3.—The trial of the suit of Sir John Brennan against Wm. Ridgeway, publisher, for libel, in accusing the claimant of being a Fenian and formerly of the Invincibles, was concluded to-day. The jury awarded the claimant £500 damages.

QUEBEC LEGISLATURE.

The Jesuit Bill Passed by a Large Majority.

QUEBEC, May 3.—In the House of Assembly last night, Mr. Mercier moved the second reading of the bill to incorporate the Jesuit society, and delivered a power-speech eulogizing the great work done by the Jesuits in the cause of civilization and colonization. Mr. Casgrain moved an amendment that Cardinal Taschereau's request to have the bill held over be complied with. The amendment was supported by Messrs. Faucher, Gagnon, Lafontaine, Flynn and Robertson, while Messrs. Lareau Lynch, Dechesnes, Giadu and McShane supported the bill. The House divided on the amendment which was rejected on the following division.—

YEAS.—Casgrain, Decehsnes (Temiscouata), Desjardins, Dorais, Faucher, Flynn, Gagnon, Lafontaine, Martin (Bonaventure), McIntosh, Morin, Owens, Pilon, Robertson, Spencer.—16.

NAYS — Baldwin, Bazinet, Beauchamp, Bernatchez, Bisson, Brassord, Cameron, Cardin, Charlebois, Cormier, Dechene (L'Islet), Duplessis, Duhamel, Forest, Giadu, Hall, Laliberte, Lapointe, Laraeu, Leblanc, Lemieux, Lussier, Lynch, Martin (Rimouski), McShane, Mercier, Nantel, Rinfret, Rocheleau, Shehyn, Sylvestre, Tessier, Trudel, Vileneuve—34.

The minority was made up of four Liberals and twelve Tories, and the majority included eleven Tories and twenty two Liberals.

Killed by Lightning.

DETROIT, May 3.—Alford Arnold was killed by lightning last night, at Marysville. At Whitmore Lake a hotel was burned by the same agency and one Lena Schlimmer was fatally injured.

Serious Railway Accident.

DENVER, Col., May 3.—The westbound passenger train on the Atlantic & Pacific Railway which left Albuquerque at 3 o'clock yesterday morning heavily loaded with passengers was derailed fifteen miles west of Goolidge, N. M., about six o'clock, and the train badly wrecked. Several persons were killed and injured.

The Havtian Difficulty.

SANTIAGO DE CUBA, May 3.—It is said the Government has fallen back upon the proposition made in the time of Lord Derby, to wit, to pay £22,000 cash and leave the balance of the Maunder claim to arbitration. Mr. Hill, the British Commissioner, is still in Hayti. There seems to be little doubt that an amicable settlement will be affected.

The Hot-Bed of Rebellion.

PANAMA, May 3.—A despatch from Guayaquil says a revolutionary party under Ruiz Sandoval was defeated in Coiche by the government forces, and that a number of them were killed and a number taken prisoners. Ruiz Sandoval is a Mexican. He has served in Columbian revolutions, and only a few days ago he left the isthmus for the purpose of making this raid.

Reciprocity Prophesied.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 3.—Representative Butterworth is very much interested in the growth of the sentiment in favor of reciprocity with Canada, and, on the opening of Congress, will again bring in the bill he introduced near the close of last session. He thinks the trouble with Congress is that it does not respond promptly to public sentiment, but waits until compelled to act by the pressure of the opinion of the country. He is confident of success.

For Children Starving to Death.

On account of their inability to digest ordinary food, Scott's Emulsion can be digested and give strength and flesh when all other food fails. See what Dr. A. H. Peck, Penn. Med. College, Petticodiac, says: "I have used and prescribed Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, and find it an excellent preparation, agreeing well with the stomach, and its continued use adding greatly to the strength and comfort of the patient." The Daily Review.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 4, 1887.

DEPARTMENTAL ASSISTANT MINISTERS.

For years past we have advocated, with very little support from our brethren of the press, the adoption of the system of Parliamentary Assistant Ministers for Canada. We are glad to see that the Dominion Administration has taken the same view, and has already introduced measures for the practical adoption of this plan. Sir John Macdonald, in explaining his measures for the proposed departmental changes, distinctly announced that they were intended to be in the direction of having Ministers of a second rank, equivalent to the Under Secretaries of State of the Mother Country, not necessarily members of the Cabinet, which thus would not be enlarged. Sir John also intimated that a further extension of this system in the future was contemplated.

We cannot but feel gratified that our views in this respect should thus have received the practical approval of Sir John Macdonald, his colleagues and supporters, and that the advantages of the system will thus be fairly tested. That the result will be favorable, and that further steps in this direction will follow we feel assured.

The new plan not only received support from the Ministerial benches, but from the Opposition in the person of Sir Richard Cartwright came hearty assent and approval. Indeed there was not a voice raised against it in the House, with one exception, that of Mr. Mills whose disapproval is another strong argument in its favor. It is true that the Hon. D. Mills is, as well as Sir R. Cartwright, one of the Board to execute the office of Opposition leader, but it is also notorious that Mr. Mills always continues to be on the wrong side in every question involving the interests of the Dominion of Canada.

The new departmental system is inaugurated under the most favourable auspices

When it was reported that Mr. F. Mowat would be appointed Sheriff of Toronto, many disbelieved it. Another report was started that the Hon. O. Mowat would not make the appointment, and many Reform papers praised him on the strength of the rumour. For instance, the Belleville Ontario said:—

"We are glad, however, that Mr. Mowat has turned a deaf ear to all these hints. No doubt had he not re-entered political life he would be a wealthier man to-day, but he cannot afford to sell the high respect in which he is held and his own self-respect for a shrievalty to his son. If the latter is a true 'son of his father' he will make his way without being pitchforked into a Government sinecure."

In spite of this, the fact is that Mr. F. Mowat's appointment was determined upon about the same time as these words were going through the press. It is now in order for the Ontario to condemn Mr. Mowat for "selling his self-repect," and "besmirching" the "principles of Liberalism."

The Ottawa correspondent of the Mail says that an inquiry is to be made as to the enforcement of Senator Ogilvie's guarantee of $100,000 deposited by the Dominion Government in the Exchange Bank. As the liquidation is still proceeding and instalments are being paid, the amount of the deficit for which Mr. Ogilvie is responsible cannot yet be ascertained. Sixty per cent. has since been paid, if we are not greatly mistaken another dividend of 5 per cent. has since been declared and even that is not the final payment. The loss of the Dominion must be considerably less than a hundred thousand dollars, without taking into consideration Mr. Ogilvie's guarantee, which shows how grossly the Opposition exaggerated when they declared the country would lose over $300,000.

In the very interesting discussion that took place in the House of Lords on the proposed mail subsidy via the C. P. R. and the Pacific ocean to the Australasian colonies, Japan and China, due credit was given to Canada for the construction of our great transcontinental railway. The energy and public spirit that brought about the so rapid construction of such an important and magnificent work has given a prestige to our country than far exceeds that caused by any other event in its history.

Mr Edgar has introduced a bill to render more secure the secrecy of the ballot in Dominion elections by requring thicker paper to be used. Mr. Edgar is known to be a very close a"y, indeed a protege of Mr. Mowat. Could he not in his ardent desire for the secrecy of the ballot induce the Ontario Premier to give up his obstinate adherence to his plan of reserving power to violate the secrecy of the ballot in our Provincial elections?

A Romantic Rothschild.

New York, May 3.—A special despatch from London says: "The Rothschils are by no means delighted at the unconquerable resolution of Miss Helene de Rothschild, only daughter of the late Baron Solomon, of Paris, to marry Capt. Van Sinessier, a young officer of the Belgian army. The opposition of the lady's mother and other relatives will prevent the ceremony from taking place before August. Miss Helene possesses and immense fortune and her "dot" will ultimately amount to $30,000,000. She has purchased the splendid mansion of the late Baron Hirsch, nerr the Champs Elysees, as the future residence for herself and husband.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT

FIRST SESSION OF THE SIXTH CANADIAN PARLIAMENT.

Secret Ballot—Indian Claims—Gazetting Members—Nova Scotia Begging—Imperial Federation—Our Fisheries.

Monday, May 2.—Several private bills were introduced.

SECRET BALLOT.

Mr. Edgar introduced a bill to amend the Election Act, the chief provisions being to ensure secrecy by thicker paper for ballots, to restrict the voting of agents and to facilitate swearing of officials.

THE LATE GAZETTING.

Sir. J. Macdonald, in reply to Mr. Mills, said if there was any correspondence with the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery as to gazetting the members it would be brought down. The Government declined to be cross examined about conversations.

BANKING.

Sir C. Tupper, in reply to Mr. Mitchell, said it was not proposed to amend the Banking Act this session.

FRANCHISE ACT.

Sir J. Macdonald, in reply to Mr. de St. Georges, said the Government did not propose to repeal the Franchise Act.

P. E. I.

Mr. Foster, in reply to Mr. Davies, said the question of better communication with Prince Edward Island was under consideration.

Sir C. Tupper, in reply to Mr. Perry, said the House would be asked to grant an addition of $20,000 to the P. E. I. subsidy.

SIX NATION INDIANS.

Mr. Paterson (Brant) moved for a special committee on the Six Nation Indians claim to lands on the Grand River. It was an old claim, and there were many difficulties connected with it, but the committee could take evidence and satisfy the Indians as to their claims.

Sir John Macdonald said these lands were not in possession of the Crown. If any portions of the lands granted to the Six Nation Indians had been deeded by Ontario to others the Province would have to make compensation, and a large sum was involved. Several Governments had declared that there was no rightful claim, and the question of title should not be decided by a committee, but by the Supreme Court on a special case. The rights of the Indians must be protected, and the papers should be brought down.

GAZETTING MEMBERS.

Mr. Tupper moved for a return as to the gazetting of members in 1874. He showed that then the Ministerialists were gazetted first when the Reformers were in office.

Mr. Mills held this to be all right in 1874 and all wrong in 1887.

Mr. Mitchell objected to any enquiry into the wrongdoings of the Reformers, but thought that somebody should be punished now.

The motion was carried.

NOVA SCOTIA BEGGING.

Mr. Jones moved for correspondence as to the financial claims of Nova Scotia. The Province wanted more money to pay its way.

Mr. Flynn thought that as a fixed revenue and growing needs for expenditure made the difficulty, there should be a new arrangement.

IMPERIAL FEDERATION.

Mr. Edgar moved for papers as to the Colonial Conference. It looked as if Imperial Federation was on the verge of becoming a practical instead of a theoretical question. He objected to the Conference, and he objected to there not being another delegate sent to it from Quebec. He held that they should build up their own confederation instead of meddling in imperial matters.

FISHERY PROTECTION.

Mr. Ellis moved for papers as to the protection of our fisheries and warning off foreign vessels. He delated upon the wrongs inflicted upon these foreigners

Mr. Foster said the information would be found in the fishery papers which would be brought down to-morrow.

Mr. Thompson said the statements quoted by Mr. Ellis were made on the invitations from Washington to anyone to bring forward complaints.

Mr. Mitchell was opposed to allowing the purchase of bait by foreign fishermen as an article of commerce.

Mr. Ellis wanted the instructions to our cruisers for the present year.

Mr. Foster in the interest of the public service declined to give them.

C.P.R. LANDS.

Mr. Watson moved for a return of lands sold by the C. P. R. to April, 1887, so as to give the municipalities an opportunity of taxing them.

Capt. Hart, of St. John N. B., is to be adjutant of the Wimbledon team. A commandant has not yet been appointed.

The Marquis of Hartington has written to the Liberal-Unionists advising them to organize as a party for the purpose of maintaining their position.

The quarantine service in the Gulf will go into effect immediately, and the precautions against the introduction of cholera will be very stringent this year.

SHIRLEY CARSTONE

By ELIZA ARCHARD.

Copyrighted by American Press Association.

Alice did not copy "plaques" from chromos. She was abroad for three years studying earnestly, in Rome in Paris, Munich and Dresden. She had come home for good now, and was to have her studio in F. She was the last of the children to be educated and provided for.

Now Shirley was to be free at last. The young birds had flown and gone their ways. There were none left in the nest but Shirley and her mother.

The first use Alice made of her ripened talent and perfected skill was to paint a portrait of Shirley. The hand of the loving sister reproduced better than any other could have done the noble, beautiful face. This was the surprise Alice was preparing for them all. The picture was to be done and unveiled before them all on Christmas day. Alice herself had devised a marvelous draping for the figure, half fanciful, and wholly pagan, that gave vivid effect to the head and face. It was a striking picture. Alice worked on it with enthusiasm. One's own family are his severest critics. With a pardonable pride, Alice wished the Carstones to see that she had not been wasting her time.

Yet with all her labors, all her enthusiasm, she could not make the portrait satisfy her. She painted partly from a photograph, partly from Shirley herself, who sat for the picture now and then.

All she could do, there remained in the eyes of the picture an unfathomable depth of melancholy. It was so marked as to be startling. It was the first expression observed and criticised by the few friends who saw the pictured face.

"It looks too sorrowful for Shirley," they said, one and all.

Alice tried to paint it out—changed it over and over again—but in vain.

The trouble seemed to be with Shirley's face in repose. Few persons had ever seen her when she was not occupied at something. But the moment she was quiet the strange, sad look came into her face. It haunted all her photographs. There was a weirdness in it like the shadow of a fate, or like the survival of a remorse for awful deeds done by bloody handed ancestors centuries agone. At any rate it was there, and would not be painted out.

"You've got the woebegonest look in this picture," said Alice. "It isn't a bit like you; but somehow it's in the photograph, too. Do what I will, I can't get it out. It vexes me so."

"I don't know why it is," replied Shirley. "I'm sure I'm a jolly person at heart."

But to this day the same sorrowful look remains in the picture.

[illegible] longing to fly. Once more her spirit beat its wings against the iron bars and looked out into the beyond as Shirley sat alone in the gray twilight of the short winter days.

It was very different now. Yet she felt within herself it was not too late. Half her lifetime was gone. But for genius and enthusiasm there is no age. She was in the flower of her intellectual life.

All these years the demands on her had been unceasing. Yet they were not without good. Her life was rich in knowledge and experience. She had grown wise through the precious discipline of failure.

In these years, all unconsciously to herself, influences had emanated from her gentle, busy life—had spread far beyond the narrow limits of Linwood, and molded and lifted up many hearts. Truly she had said long ago that she was "drawn so many different ways." It was this that was at once her weakness and her strength.

She had in her nature that inexplicable, wonderful human sympathy which unlocked all hearts, young and old, which drew them and held them bound to her forever. It was magical, because it was genuine. Young and old instinctively went to her as to a confessional, and told her their sorrows and their sins.

It may have been because the undercurrent of her thought still ran on the poem she was to have written so long ago; it may have been because of the suffering and needs she saw and learned of during those bitter years of experience, but Shirley became above all a messenger of good to women. Her heart went out above all to the toilers of her own sex.

Women far and near, the aspiring and ambitious, the sick, the weary, the starving and the heart sore, those who had broken their wings against the solid walls that shut in a woman's life, these came to her, and they poured out all their hearts to her, and besought her to tell them what they might do.

As she grew older, and her vision gradually took in all the round horizon of experience, many things were clear to her that had been dark before. It became clear to her that, limited only by the moral laws, freedom of will is the greatest good for humanity, man and woman alike.

She taught them to reverence nothing merely because it is old.

She taught them to look into the heart of things, and ask: Are courage, will, intellectual power, the strength to achieve, qualities that belong only to men?

She pointed out to them that the personal feelings and emotions of man or woman count for very little in the destiny of the race. Greater than man's nature or woman's nature is human nature, underlying all, holding all in its grasp. She showed them how absurd anatomical and physiological superstitions concerning woman's mind and body have been taught by medical men through hoary centuries. They stand only because no woman contradicts them.

Out of the strength drawn from the bitter cup she herself had drained, though they knew it not, she was able to tell them that the individual happiness or unhappiness is a pitifully small thing. That the road to wise content was to lose sight of their own emotions and sorrows in the culture of the mind, in broad human interests. Then suffering will no longer be the lot of woman.

She bade them, flinging away as far as may be their personal hopes, fears and disappointments, to keep step with the grand music of the onward cycles of time.

She told them to see to it that they did not lie like clods to be trodden under foot, or shoved out of the way, but that themselves be up and working for the progress of womankind towards the light—womankind, the laggard half of the human race. For, greater than passion and gratified petty ambition, yea, greater than love even, greater than all, is this march of humanity into the light.

Further, as they would find peace for their souls, she bade them never lose sight of resolve, never cease to will and to aspire. Every steadfast effort that a woman makes, every striving of the individual to become freer and stronger, even through disappointment, sickness and weariness, brings a moment nearer the good time which is surely coming for the sex. The woman's day is at hand. It will be a brighter, happier day than the ages have yet disclosed. She told them to be sure of that. She told them of her own unalterable faith that thus the centuries to come would develop a strong and splendid race of women, fit mates for the kings among men.

So she talked with them till their hearts burned within them. Her voice had a note like a trumpet ring. From that day on there was for them no more despair, no more looking backward. Like her they set their faces forward and pressed on. Women came to her with tears in their eyes, they sent messages from half round the world, thanking her and blessing her for all she had been to them.

Shirley the Poet became Shirley the Inspirer, the Comforter.

In giving happiness to others she lost herself and ceased to think of her own sorrows and disappointments. So she found at last, in a measure, happiness for herself.

She had somewhat of reward, the sweetest, highest reward that can fall to mortal lot. And yet—all that she had done and wrought for others could not be accomplished without some straining at the silver cord.

"To him that overcometh all things shall be given," was said of old. Shirley had overcome; yet little had been granted her. It was her nature to give out always more than she received. So at last she began to be exhausted. That was the pity of it. A sense of weariness oppressed her, a distaste for even the daily tasks she liked best. She said to herself once more that she must have change. Her life seemed wearing out.

Alas, alas! It was the helmet of iron pressing upon the golden hair. The iron pressed at last upon the golden heart, too.

* * * * * * *

One day, while she thus sighed for change, Shirley got a letter. It said:

"My wife is dead. May I come?

"DUMORAY."

Once more, past youth as she was, her heart gave a wild bound. She covered her face with her hands, as had been her wont in her childhood when powerfully excited. Then she laughed at herself in scorn, then she was vexed at her folly. After all, was it still only the same uncontrolled, passionate spirit of old? Was this all she had learned in these years of hard discipline?

She shook her head impatiently, saying to herself:

"Shirley Carstone, you are an idiot."

Be sure the gray twilight is full of sweet thoughts for her that night. The forlorn wings would be free to fly at last. Was the light coming even to her? Were peace, joy, love to be hers too, even after all these years?

It seemed too good to be true. [illegible] was no vision. It was true. Yet even in that moment the supreme dream of her life flitted across her happified vision. The poem, the poem! She would indeed write it now. The toiling for others, the weary occupation at tasks she disliked—that was over at last, at last! Nothing would come between her and her hopes.

To be Continued.

A Celebrated Horse.

Mr. W. M. Fair, of North Monaghan, has purchased that celebrated horse Johnnie Cope. For style and action this celebrated horse is unrivalled in his class. This is one more added to the already splendid stud of Mr. Fair. A few more enterprising gentlemen of his stamp in our County would much improve our style of horses. We hope he will still keep adding to his stable until he becomes the unequalled proprietor of horse flesh in midland Ontario.

Band and Orchestra.

Owing to Mr. Chas. L. Davis being ill the play "Alvin Joslin" was not presented at Bradburn's Opera House on Tuesday evening. So as not to disappoint the people, however, a band and orchestra concert was given at which the following programme was presented:—

I. March .....Little Tycoon (band)
II. Overture.....Standard (band)
III. Passing Regiment (Orchestra Selection)
IV. Triumph.....Cornet Solo by Mr. W. P. Chambers.
V. Terpsichorean.....Fantasia (band)
VI. Aria and Variations.....Nathan Carl Trombone Solo.
VII, Overture....Heart and Hand (orchestra)
VIII. .....Male quartette
IX. Bijou.....Xylophone Solo by John W. Casey.
X. Hunting Scene.....(orchestra)

The various band and orchestra selections were given with great exactness. The class of music given was high and its rendition perfect. Every member seemed animated with one idea in producing given effects, which were really brilliant, sometimes striking and even startling.

The instrumentation of the band is as follows:—3 B flat cornets, 1 E flat clarionet, 1 piccolo, 2 E flat altos, 2 slide trombones, 2 E flat tubas, one snare drum and one bass drum. Mr. W. P. Chambers is bandmaster. The instrumentation of the orchestra is as follows:—

Harley E. Hamilton, leader of orchestra. Violin primo, violin secundo, basso, flute, clarionet, 1st and 2nd cornets, 1st and 2nd ballad horns, 1 slide trombone, bass and snare drums.

THE CONVENT'S WELCOME.

Addresses Presented to the Bishop by the Children.

On Tuesday evening the pupils of the Congregation de Notre Dame presented His Lordship Bishop Dowling with addresses at a reception held in the Convent.

The room in which the reception was held was handsomely decorated with evergreens, and other devices. Mottoes were placed in prominent places, among which were the following, "Welcome Honored Guests," "Bienvenue Notre Pasteur," "The Cross and Shamrock," "Prosperity Attend Thy Way," "Loyal Children Greet Thee," "Ad mutos Annos," "God Bless Our Bishop," "God Bless The Land of Our Fathers."

There were present about 40 priests, together with the bishops and other church dignitaries. On entering a welcome was sung by a chorus of between two hundred and three hundred children.

A welcome address was then read in which special references was made to the new Bishop, Archbishop Lynch, Bishop Cleary, formerly Bishop of Peterborough, and Bishop Carberry, from whose diocese Bishop Dowling comes.

And address to his Lordship was then recited in parts by the little children which brought forth considerable amusement and applause at times.

Several selections of vocal and instrumental music followed, after which an address from the older pupils was presented.

The proceedings closed with the singing of "God Save the Queen."

IN MEMORY.

Anniversary of the Death of Bishop Jamot.

To-day being the anniversary of the death of the late Bishop Jamot, special services were held in St. Peter's Cathedral. The Cathedral was well filled with people at ten o'clock, when the services began. The auditorium and altar were draped in black and white, giving a solemn and sombre appearance to the church, as compared with the brilliant decorations of Tuesday. The cenotaph stood where the catafalque was a year ago, and was surrounded with candles and decorations.

Solemn requiem high pontificial mass was said. His Lordship Bishop Dowling was the celebrant, Father Hudon, Superior of the Jesuits, deacon; Father Brennan, Director of St. Michael's College, Toronto, sub-deacon; Father Rooney, assistant priest, and Father Rudkins and Father Halm, Bishop Carberry's Secretary, Masters of Ceremonies.

His Grace, the Archbishop, delivered the eloge in which he traced the career of the late Bishop from boyhood till his advent to the Bishopric of Peterborough. During the discourse he dwelt on the hardships endured by Bishop Jamot while doing missionary work, the virtues he possessed and his love for the church. He asked the prayers of the people for the repose of his soul. Though he might not have to suffer for personal sins, still he was responsible for the sins of the people and might have committed some negligence, not doing at some time all that he might have done for people. He eulogized Bishop Dowling first in English and then in French. He concluded with giving some good advice to the people. He told them to be honest, to seek first the kingdom of God and that in good time all other things would be added unto them. The absolution ceremony was then performed and the service terminated.

Peterborough Canoe Club.

At the meeting on Tuesday evening of the Peterborough Canoe Club, as the Peterborough Boating Club will be termed, various arrangements were made and discussed. As a number of the members were unable to attend through other engagements for that evening, there will be an adjourned meeting on Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the office of Messrs. Hatton & Wood. Changes in the constitution, election of officers and other important business will then be considered, and all members should attend if possible.

Burned on Lake Michigan.

SHEBOYGAN, Wis., May 3.—The steamer G. P. Heath, laden with hay, caught fire forward yesterday afternoon when off this port and about five miles out in the lake. She was turned towards Centerville Point, and when near that place the crew endeavored to make a landing at the pier, but the swift current carried the burning steamer north of the landing. She struck the beach about thirty yards from the shore. The crew had great difficulty in reaching shore. The wheelman, Geo. Olsen, was lost. The steamer is a total loss. She was valued at $6,000 and the cargo at $600.

The shipwrights of Belfast have struck for weekly instead of fortnightly payments.

THE GOVERNOR GENERAL.

His Welcome at the Station on Tuesday Evening.

On Tuesday evening there was a great crowd at the Canadian Pacific railway station to pay respects to His Excellency the Governor-General and his lady, who were to pass through on their way to Toronto on the 6.42 train.

When the train came dashing in the platform and around the station was packed with people. The band of the 57th Rangers, who were present in uniform, struck up a lively air. When the train stopped His Excellency and Lady Lansdowne came to the end of the parlor car, their appearance being a signal for cheers. When these subsided the band played "God Save the Queen," and the crowd stood with bared heads. After this three cheers was given for the Queen and three for Lord Lansdowne.

His Excellency then spoke the people. He said:—"I thank you all for coming to meet us. I hadn't the slightest inkling that I should find so many of Her Majesty's loyal subjects on the platform this evening. (Cheers.) But having travelled about your country a good deal I can say that I have been kindly received. Wherever the representative of Her Majesty goes he is sure to provoke these loyal manifestations which are intended for the Sovereign Lady our Queen. (Cheers.) And on this year of her jubilee no doubt your feelings of loyalty are exceptionally strong. I thank you all on behalf of myself and Lady Lansdowne for coming to meet us."

Three cheers were then called for Lady Lansdowne and were given with a "tiger." Lady Lansdowne smiled and bowed her acknowledgments seeming well pleased.

His Excellency bowed good bye to the crowd as the train moved away and the band played "For He's a Jolly Goodfellow."

AN EXCITING SCENE.

A "Times" Charge Discussed in the House of Commons.

LONDON, May 3.—There was a very exciting scene in the House of Commons tonight. Sir Charles Lewis drew the attention of the House to an article in the Times charging Mr. Dillion with wilful and deliberate falsehood in his speech made in the House on April 22nd, and in order to "draw" the Parnellites, he moved that it was a breach of privilege. The Speaker said if the House decided that the article was a breach of privilege certain words might be called to appear at the bar. Mr. Dillon were so made. Mr. Dillon said that he was perfectly willing to face the printer of the Times at the bar. Mr. W. H. Smith moved the adjournment of the debate, in order that members might see the charges. Mr. Dilion desired that the question should be settled right off. The charges, he said, were a base and atrocious calumny, and he would prove the printer of the Times a foul and cowardly liar. He objected to delay. Mr. Sexton said the persecution of the Irish party had reached a point which could no longer be endured. The Irish members desired an enquiry of the House to bring the miserable struggle to an end. Mr. Gladstone said he would oppose an adjournment, as the enquiry ought to be proceeded with immediately, and a select committee appointed to enquire into the charges if necessary. The adjournment was carried by a vote of 273 to 174. The debate will be resumed to-morrow.

SWALLOWED UP BY THE SEA.

Total Loss of a British Steamer and Her Crew of Thirty Men.

HALIFAX, N.S., May 3.—A special cablegram from Channel, Newfoundland, reports the total loss of the English tramp steamer John Knox, Captain Brolly, 1,351 tons, with all hands, some thirty men. She was from Liverpool, April 4th via Greenock, with a cargo of liquor and brick for Montreal. She dashed on the rocks at the entrance of Channel Harbour some time during the night, and soon became a total wreck. Not one of the crew escaped to tell the story of the disaster. She was an iron ship, built in 1883, and owned by M. McClean & Co., of Glasgow.

It is reported late to-night that a large steamer and a schooner, the names of which are not known, have been wrecked on the sand reefs of Sable Island. The wrecks were seen by a fishing schooner bound in from the banks, which did not go near enough to learn anything about them.

Earthquake in Texas.

EL PASO, Tex., May 3.—A shock of earthquake was felt here at 3.08 p. m. to-day, the vibrations lasting about two minutes. It was perceptible in every portion of the city, and the shock so alarmed the citizens that only invalids and the helpless were left within doors. For probably two minutes preceeding the shock many persons recognized a distinct and offensive smell of sulphur. While the vibrations lasted many articles hanging on walls oscillated and some fell to the floor, while plastering fell from the fronts and ceilings of many dwellings and business houses. Clocks were stopped, buildings cracked and horses came to a standstill in the streets. The first impression was of a vertical oscillation. This lasted only a few seconds. Then a minute's awful calm was followed by a very pronounced horizontal wave-like motion. No serious damage has resulted in this neighborhood.

The London Strike.

LONDON, Ont., May 3.—The carpenters of this city are out on strike, to the number of 200, to-day received telegraphic instruction from the headquarters at Philadelphia to stay out on full strike pay until their demands are met by their employers. What they claim is an increase of 2½ cents per hour all around on present wages. The bricklayers have received a letter from Alexander Daraagh, President of the International Union, that the union will stand by the strikers here till satisfactory terms are made. They have also received similar word from the local union in Toronto.

The Toronto Ministerial Association on Monday again discussed the question of religious instructions in the Public schools, and decided to keep the importance of the subject before the public until a satisfactory change is effected.

HOW PETERBOROUGH LOST ANOTHER BUSINESS HOUSE.

To the Editor of the Review.

DEAR SIR,—Some three weeks ago I arrived in Peterborough, fully prepared to open a Dry Goods store in your enterprising town, but, after looking the field over, I was convinced that it would be suicidal for me to embark in trade in a place where there is a business house so disgustingly aggressive and so lost to the interests of other houses as one you have located in your town. It is with surprise and chagrin that I notice that this particular house is steadily increasing its number of customers day by day, by employing methods that would make it very uncomfortable for me, if I were in business here, just as it does now for competing establishments who are striving to combat the evil.

I refer to J. C. Turnbull, George and Simcoe street, who sells a good Black Worsted, or a Scotch Tweed suit for $16, worth $20 in any other town or city. Fine unlaundried white shirts, from 35c to 50c., worth from 50c to 75c. All-Wool Tweeds at 40c, worth 50c. Fine Prints 9½c, worth 12½c. This is no place for me.

Yours in sorrow,
H. I. PRICE.

THE WILTSHIRE ADDRESS.

LONDON, May 3.—The Dublin Irish Times publishes the address which has been forwarded to the Marquis of Lansdowne, signed by 504 tenants on his Wiltshire estates, expressing sympathy with him on the attacks made by Wm. O'Brien and others regarding the management of his Irish estates. The address sets forth the great satisfaction felt by his English tenants at the treatment they have always received from Lord Lansdowne, who has not only given abatements, but built cottages for his laborers, and spent a large proportion of his rent in making improvements.

A new freight line in connection with the Canadian Pacific railway and all its connections, called the Canadian Pacific Despatch and taking the place of the Quebec Ottawa, and New England Air line, went into operation yesterday.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC

FROM

J. J. SHEEHY

I beg to say that contrary to announcements which appeared in the Peterborough papers for the past two months, I DO NOT intend to remove to T. Dolan & Co's Dry Goods Store, nor have I any connections whatever with that establishment. The final arrangements not being satisfactory to me, I withdrew from the projected change, and intend carrying on the Dry Goods business in my usual stand next to Lech's Hat Store.

It is my intention in the future as in the past to show at all seasons nothing but new and fresh goods in the various lines of Dry Goods and Gent's Furnishings; and by doing so, hope to retain the confidence which I am proud to say, I have enjoyed from the public since commencing business two years ago.

OPINI • OF THE PRESS

CORRUPT AND ASHAMED.

To a deputation who pressed him to appoint his son sheriff of Toronto, Hon. Mr. Mowat replied that he intended leaving the matter in the hands of the electors. This is another way of saying his son will be appointed. Mr. Mowat had better not leave these matters to his colleagues any longer. The Carleton registrarship appointment and the appointment of his son as sheriff will be sufficient to convince the people that filling public offices suitably is not the strong point of Mr. Mowat's colleagues.—Toronto World (Indep.).

A GRAVE BLUNDER.

In appointing Premier Mowat's son to the Toronto shrivalty the Ontario Government have committed a grave blunder.—Ottawa Free Press (Reform).

THE GRITS' PRETENCE OF HONESTY.

One of the most dangerous features of the Mowat shrievalty deal is that the rank and file of the Grit party will feel that there is no use of keeping up the pretence of honesty any longer. The party has lost whatever reputation it could claim as being better than the Tories, and the sacrifice of their reputation will probably prompt a raid on the surplus, and a general scramble for the spoils. If Mowat can use the patronage to help his family, why should not the other Ministers do likewise.—Toronto News (Indep.)

DUMB DOGS.

We can all imagine how the Grit organ would howl had it caught Sir John Macdonald appointing his son to a shrievalty, and the howl would have been echoed all along the line. But the case being altered alters the case, and so the dumb dogs will utter never a note of disapprobation of the Premier's act. It is the old story of "our side can do no wrong."—Toronto Telegram (Indep.)

HYPOCRISY EXPOSED.

The appointment of Mr. Mowat's son, Fred, to the Shrievalty of Toronto, was an action that most Reformers will regret. No doubt the great majority of the party in Toronto were favorable to the appointment and there was no moral wrong committed But the Liberal party have all along protested against the nepotism practised by the members of the Dominion Government, and Mr. Mowat has now completely cut away the ground from beneath their feet. His adversaries will not fail to make large capital out of it.—Belleville Ontario (Ref.)

THE London Advertiser says:—

"The Senate is dead enough for a fact. The trouble is that the funeral has been postponed."

Yes, the Grits are frequently troubled in this manner. Not content with scrambling with indecent precipitancy for dead men's shoes, they are in the habit of decreeing that men are dead in their eagerness to seize upon the spoils. And the trouble is that in spite of the declared death of those who stand in the way of Grit ambition there is really so much vitality that the funeral has to be postponed to the disappointment of the greedy would-be heirs.

Beat His Wife to Death.

LONDON, Ont., May 4.—The coroner's jury in the matter of the suspicious death of Mrs. W. C. Stinson, of London West, met again last night, and after hearing the evidence of Kemp, who was supposed to have heard Stinson beating his wife, but who did not, and other witnesses, returned a verdict at a late hour to the effect that the deceased came to her death from wounds inflicted by her husband, William C. Stinson.

Fell From a Church Steeple.

MONTREAL, May 4.—A young man named Alfred Labelle feel from the steeple of the church of the Sacred Heart this morning to the ground below, a distance over 72 feet, and was instantly killed.

An Earthquake Shock.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., May 4.—At 3.13 o'clock yesterday afternoon an earthquake shock occurred which lasted ten seconds.

Three cases of leprosy and three suspicious cases have been found in one family at St. Martinsville, a suburb of New Orleans.

A FEARFUL CATASTROPHE.

One Hundred Colliers Killed by an Explosion in British Columbia.

NANAIMO, B. C., May 4.—A terrible explosion occurred in the No. 1 shaft of the V. C. Coal mine a few minutes before six last evening. There are supposed to be about one hundred men in the mine. At this hour, 1 p. m., twelve bodies have been taken out. Some are dead, some seriously and others fatally burnt. There are little hopes of rescuing any more alive. A rescuing party went down, but were unable to do much as they were overcome by black damp and were obliged to retreat. One of the rescuing party, S. Huston, died shortly after coming out. The mine is now on fire, and the framework over the air shaft completely destroyed. A fire engine was brought out and well manned and the brigade saved the adjoining buildings. The scene around the shaft is heartrending.

PRESS COMMENTS

Views of the London Papers in the Enquiry into the Times changes.

LONDON, May 4.—The Cabinet will meet this morning to consider the Dillon affair. The Daily News says: "The country will not fail to note that it was the Government who shrank from an enquiry last night. If as the debate would seem to indicate, they refused, in spite of all precedents, to regard the matter as a question of previlege, it will only be because they do not themselves believe the charges against the Parnellites capable of such proof as will satisfy a committee of English gentlemen."

The Post says it hopes Mr. Lewis' motion will be rejected, as Parliament's time is too precious to waste in such discussions.

The Standard says: "Whether Mr. Lewis was well or ill-advised in raising the question, we are strongly of the opinion that it should now be thoroughly investigated. Nothing could happen in committee on the Crimes bill that would be half so pertinent to the fundamental issue as a direct clearing up of the relations of the Parnellites to the party of assassination and outrage, but the ordeal which Mr. Sexton and Mr. Dillon have declared they are anxious to face will be a farcical formality unless the untire case against the Parnellites be gone into. It will be the duty of the Government to see that the enquiry is an exhaustive one."

LONDON, May 4.—The Times, referring to Sir Charles Lewis' motion in the House of Commons [illegible] charges against Mr. Dillon, says: "We are unable to see why Sir Charles Lewis felt called upon to protest. We have no objection to the issue being raised, either in or out of Parliament; still we cannot help regretting that urgent business should be delayed, even for a day, by debates upon what we published in good faith, and with evidence confirmatory of everything we advanced. While we shrink from no form of enquiry, we do not think the house would be well advised in dealing with the question as one of privilege."

DILLON AND THE TIMES.

The Government Offer to Prosecute—A Committee Preferred.

LONDON, May 4.—W. H. Smith announced in the House of Commons this afternoon that the Government had resolved that the allegation that the statement by the London Times that Mr. Dillon told a falsehood while denying in the House of Commons that paper's utterances concerning his alleged relations with Sheridan, the Invincible, was a breach of privilege, was not sustained by precedent. It would be against the dignity of the House to summon the Times to the bar without previously enquiring into the circumstances. The gentlemen below the gangway, Mr. Smith added, asked that a select Committee be constituted to enquire forthwith into the allegation of the Times. The practice of the House had been to divest itself as far as possible of judicial duty. The Government thought that such a committee as was asked for would be unfitted to consider such grave questions as would have to be referred to it for decision. The Government feeling it to be their duty to endeavor to solve the question had instructed the Attorney-General and such others as he cared to associate with him to prosecute the Times for the libel on Mr. Dillon, who was at liberty to select such counsel as he saw fit. Mr. Smith urged the House to accept the course proposed.

T. P. O'Connor condemned the Government's proposal. He said he commiserated the Government on their humiliating and degrading position. O'Connor here produced a copy of the Times containing the libel on Mr. Dillon and flourishing it aloft, he said: "I purchased this copy of the Times at one of the book-stalls owned by the Right Honorable the First-Lord of the Treasury. It is he, speaking for the Government, who says no breach of privilege was committed. (Irish cheers.) He is, therefore, deeply interested as a party in the case against the editor of the Times. The two men ought to be in the dock together. The Irish members reject his proposal as unfair, unjust and unprecedented. The House of Commons ought not to be taken in by a collusive action."

Here DeLisle, Conservative, rose to a point of order. He said he had heard Mr. Tanner (Home Rule member for Middle Cork) say the "Conservatives are a damned lots of cads."

Irish voices: "So you are."

Speaker Peel: The Clerk of the House will please see that the words are taken down.

Mr. Tanner denied that he had used the word "damned." He repeated, however, that the Conservatives were a lot of cads.

The Speaker said he must withdraw the expression and apologize.

Mr. Tanner said he would do so.

Sir William Vernon Harcourt denounced the Government's proposal.

Sir Edward Clark, ex-Solicitor-General, moved an amendment to the Government's proposal, to the effect that the House did not consider the Times' statement concerning Mr Dillon a breach of privilege. Justifying his action in offering the amendment, Sir Edward declared that there was no record of Parliament having committed a man to custody for breach of privilege such as the action of the Times was now alleged to be. He added that he and the Attorney-General were responsible for the advice on which the Government acted. He proposed to confine himself to the legal points of the case regardless of party politics. He then quoted precedents to show that the House was not the proper tribunal to deal with such matters. No corruption had been alleged by a member, nor had any contempt of the House been exhibited such as had constituted the offence in previous cases where breach of privilege had been committed. The course of the prosecution would be left to such persons as the Irish members might nominate, both counsel and solicitors. If the Government were asked to appoint them they would interpose no objection. Sir Edward modified his amendment, making it read that the House declines to treat the Times' publication as a breach of privilege.

Mr. Gladstone intimated that in the event of the adoption of Sir Edward Clarke's motion, he would move an amendment to the main question to the effect that an enquiry be made by a committee into the charges of wilful falsehood, in a speech delivered in the House of Commons brought in an article by the Times against Mr. Dillon. (Cheers.)

The following letter from the Minister of Justice has been received by Mr. James Stevenson, M.P., Mayor of Peterborough:—

OTTAWA, April 30th, 1887.

MY DEAR SIR,—I have to acknowledge the receipt of the papers which you sent to me a few days ago, being a letter from Mr. Dumble to the County Treasurer of Peterborough, dated 27th Jan., 1886, also a copy of a resolution passed by the Council of the Town of Peterborough, dated 4th April, 1887, also a copy of another resolution passed 18th April, 1887, and a letter from the County Treasurer, all referring to the monies collected under the Canada Temperance Act, and requesting my opinion as whether such monies are to be paid over to the County Treasurer or retained by the Town of Peterborough.

I return to you all these papers excepting the letter addressed to myself.

You are aware that in ordinary cases I would perhaps not feel myself called upon to express an opinion on such a matter, as it concerns the interests of two corporations, and is not one therefore in which the public at large, or the Crown, are concerned.

Inasmuch, however, as it is stated that my opinion will be accepted by both corporations concerned, and may have the effect of avoiding further dispute, I have to state to you that in my opinion the fines, penalties and forfeitures recovered under the Canadian Temperance Act of 1878, and and amendments thereto, belong under the Order in Council of 15th November last to the "incorperated town," if such fines, penalties and forfeitures were recovered and levied within the Town.

I am yours very truly,
JNO S. D. THOMPSON.

BURNED BY NIHILISTS.

LONDON, May 4.—Advices from St. Petersburg state that on April 26th Nihilists set fire to a police station in that city and that eight policemen perished in the flames, while nineteen others were more of less injured. The day following a timber yard was destroyed by fire and several workmen and firemen were killed.

ROSSINI'S BURIAL.

FLORENCE, May 4.—The body of the composer, Rossini, was buried yesterday, in the Church of Santa Croce, with imposing ceremonies.

CHAMBERLAIN PLEASED.

LONDON, May 4.—Mr. Chamberlain, speaking at a Unionist meeting at Glasgow last night, said the enthusiasm displayed by the gathering convinced him of the growth of Unionism in Scotland. Although he had paid little attention to the threats that he would be received with hootings and rotten eggs, he confessed that he had not expected such a hearty welcome as that which he had received everywhere. As to the Parnellites, he admitted that he had advised that they be taken into the councils of the Government, but that was before Mr. Parnell rested under the burden of the present tremendous imputation. No man of honour could be content to meet such an imputation with a simple denial. It was true that the onus of the proof rested with the Times, but if Mr. Parnell shrank from taking up the challenge and compelling the Times to give its proofs, then every impartial and intelligent man would feel that Mr. Parnell had put himself in a position which made him no longer a safe or proper ally for English statesmen. (Prolonged cheering.) After repeating his complaint that the Gladstonians had refused to meet the Unionists, he concluded:—"Mr. Gladstone, by one word, could re-unite the Liberals to-morrow, but unless that word be spoken soon it will come too late to save the party from disaster."

THE CONDEMNED NIHILISTS.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 4.—The seven prisoners condemned to death for connection with the recent plot to assassinate the Czar are all men. The others who were convicted of complicity in the plot received various sentences to penal servitude, the most severe being twenty years. All the prisoners, except the student Ouliaoff, behaved quietly during the trial. It is possible that the Czar may mitigate some of the sentences.

EMPEROR AND POPE.

ROME, May 4.—The Pope has received a letter from Emperor William in which the Emperor thanks the Pope for his wise and conciliatory co-operation in settling the Ecclesiastical Bill, and expresses the hope that the present religious peace will never be disturbed.

THE GOVERNMENT TACTICS.

LONDON, May 4.—The debate in the House of Commons to-day disclosed the Government's tactics, leading to the following issues. The Government will carry an amendment to the effect that the Times accusation is not a breach of privilege and next they will reject Gladstone's proposal for a committee of enquiry and the Parnellites will thus be left to accept or reject the offer of Government prosecution of the Times with the Attorney-General assisting the Parnellite counsel. If they assented to the prosecution the Irish leaders would be subjected to an examination, in which would be exposed the whole secret history of the league since its formation. Being fully aware of the trap set for them, the Parnellities would consent to nothing but the appointment of a committee. On the other hand the Conservatives generally are opposed to a committee being appointed, because it would have to be composed of nearly equal numbers of Gladstonians and Conservatives. Witnesses are not examined under oath except in special cases. When the line of inquiry is deemed dangerous either side has the power to protest and to challenge a division. A section of the Ministerials is inclined to favor the appointment of a committee on the ground that the Parnellites will not prosecute, a committee of inquiry is better than nothing, as it will assist in sustaining the crime outcry. In the mean time, Mr. Smith is manoeuvring to force the Parnellites to a public trial. Final divisions are expected on Friday. Urgent "whips" have been set out by both sides and as absentees are being drummed in The Liberal-Unionists will support the Government.

O'Brien's visit to Montreal.

MONTREAL, May 4.—From what is heard around town to-day there seems to be some probability of a counter demonstration on the evening of Mr. O'Brien's proposed attack upon Lord Lansdowne in this city. There is in certain quarters a pretty strong feeling that whatever may be His Excellency's merits as a landlord, it is mean and cowardly to attack a man whose lips are sealed by the necessities of his official position.

The march of the 15th Hussars from Leeds to Edinburgh and Glasgow was begun on April 14th, one troop starting for each city.

The Daily Review.

THURSDAY, MAY 5, 1887.

FAIR IF MADE VALID.

FROM a somewhat hasty glance through the voluminous fishery papers now brought down, it appears that by the authorities both at Westminister and Ottawa the rights of Canada have been staunchly maintained against the aggressive proposals from Washington.

The point most immediately important is in regard to the proposed interim arrangement for the present. The suggestions from Washington were clearly inadmissible and were so treated. The counter proposition by the Canadian and imperial authorities has been sedulously misrepresented by the Opposition, for it is not a permanent surrender of any of our rights, but a temporary reversion to the Washington treaty, though without a present question of money payment, pending further negotiations or the action of a joint commission. This is a very generous offer, but we think that Canada might well agree to it out of neighborly feeling and good will, if it is duly guarded and fulfilment adequately guaranteed. For instance, if the United States entertain it, and wish it to take effect, there should be an immediate session of Congress to give validity to the agreement including the subsequent steps. We cannot accept the word of the President and his Ministers as binding the United States, for last year we showed ourselves equally liberal and generous on the strength of their assurances which were insolently repudiated by the Senate. We cannot expect them this time to have more regard for the pledged faith of the President, or for fairness in carrying out a bargain with us after they have received the benefit. If too the fishery clauses of the Washington treaty are to be temporarily revived by adequate authority there should be a clear understanding that its stipulations are not to be fraudulently evaded by such devices as taxing the packages of free goods, and that the United States fishermen are not to make the privileges accorded them a mere cover for smuggling. They should also be required to submit to such regulations as are imposed upon our fishermen also. Nor must they claim an exclusive right to a whole sea on the other coast.

If the United States wish for a friendly arrangement it is evidently open to them. If not we must maintain our territorial rights as before.

MINORITY REPRESENTATION.

THE Kingston Whig objects to our saying that Mr. John Leys, of Toronto, does not represent the majority of his constituents. It says:—

"Mr. Leys, of Toronto, is one of the three members whom the majority of the people of Toronto elected by the votes cast freely and without trammel. He led several other candidates by a handsome majority, and is not, therefore, the representative of the minority."

The Whig is strangely ignorant of Mr. Mowat's iniquitous statute. Far from Mr. Leys being elected by "votes cast freely and without trammel," it was dishonestly provided that the Conservatives forming the majority should be disfranchised as to the third seat, that they should not vote at all, either freely or trammelled, in regard to Mr. Leys. He was elected by the minority with the majority excluded from any participation in the choice for the third seat which he filled. He is thus the mere creature of Mr. Mowat's fraudulent device, and as such he has just aided in the appropriation of a grossly overpaid office for the aggrandisement of the family of his patron and creator.

The Whig continues, with reference to the Queen's County, N. B. case:—

"In one case the candidate-elect is the choice of the returning officer, in defiance of the expressed will of the people; and in the other case the member elect has taken the seat which the people rather than an election functionary awarded to him. There is both a distinction and a difference though the REVIEW, in its party blindness, may not be able to see either."

We beg to repeat that our opinion is that Mr. King should have the seat if he was substantially a qualified candidate, without advantage being taken of merely technical irregularities if they were nothing more. At the present stage, however, the question is whether the House of Commons or the law courts should adjudicate on this disputed election matter. To maintain the general policy of this country that questions as to elections should be withdrawn from the political arena of the House and confided to the impartial courts of law is very different from the Whig's course it supporting its dear friend Mowat in creating a minority Reform candidate by the aid of a complaisant legislature, his supporters in which represented only an electoral minority. Before the Whig talks of party blindness it should take the beam out of its own eye.

THE Toronto Globe advances one strong argument for the unconditional surrender of our fisheries to the United States. It says, on the assumption of a present surrender, that:—

"The Dominion Government has virtually thrown away one of the main privileges which Canada had to offer the States in a bargain for the great common advantage of unrestricted Reciprocity."

If that is the use to be made of our fishery rights—if after holding them for a time we are to give up our fisheries to destruction by foreigners, on the condition that they will also kindly come and destroy Canadian manufactures, we should hasten to abandon them without such a damaging condition. But on second thoughts we need not accept the Globe's unpatriotic suggestion—we can protect our fisheries and our manufactures also.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT

FIRST SESSION OF THE SIXTH CANADIAN PARLIAMENT.

Savings Bank Deposits Instead of Bondsmen—Banff National Park and its Wonder Working Water—The North-West via Nova Scotia.

WEDNESDAY, May 3.—Several private bills were introduced.

B. C. REPRESENTATION.

Mr. BAKER introduced a bill as the representation of certain British Columbia constituencies.

OFFICIAL SECURITIES.

Mr. MCLELAN introduced a bill to enable public officials to give the required security by means of assignment of savings bank deposits.

Mr. BLAKE pointed out that the guarantee of friends or of enquiry would be lost.

Sir J. MACDONALD said young officers would have an inducement to save so as not to be under obligation to friends or to have to pay premium as at present.

BANFF NATIONAL PARK.

Mr. WHITE moved the House into Committee on the Banff National Park Bill. He explained the slight private claims there were on the land and said the C. P. R. was co-operating with the government. About $40,000 had been spent on roads, bridges &c.

Mr. KIRK strongly protested against the whole affair, which should be left to private enterprize.

Mr. TROW as strongly supported it.

Mr. JONES objected to the expenditure of the money without previous sanction by the House.

Sir JOHN MACDONALD said if the grant had been made to the C. P. R. the Government would be fiercely assailed. The expenditure would be more than recouped by the receipts. He expatiated on the beauty and other advantages of the Park.

Mr. BLAKE thought the springs must have wonderful properties, and chaffed Mr. Trow on the effect their waters had had upon his imagination.

Sir R. CARTWRIGHT and Mr. MILLS objected to the expenditure without an appropriation.

After discussion by a number of other members the committee rose and reported the bill.

NORTHWEST SENATORS.

The House went into committee on the bill for the representation of the Northwest in the Senate.

Mr. KENNEY resumed the discussion by talking about Nova Scotian elections.

Mr. JONES followed on the same line, accusing the Government of corruption in Nova Scotia.

Mr. FRASER (Pictou) refuted Mr. Jones' charges and turned the tables upon him.

The Nova Scotian members continued to throw light upon the subject of representation of the Northwest in the Senate by fighting over again the election in Nova Scotia for the House of Commons till the House adjourned.

Arrived to day, Parasols 25, 35, 50, 75 and $1.00, really nice goods at double the money. See Sheppard for Parasols.

APSLEY.

To the Editor of the Review.

DEAR SIR,—I read a letter in your issue of the 15th April from "Traveller" concerning deer and wolves, and am sorry to say he was pretty near the mark about the killing at that time, as it was talked about a good deal and severely condemned by nearly everyone here. I think "Traveller" has been there when he speaks about eating them in August and September, and he is just about right, too, as to their being just delicious; also in getting one then—if you can, I mean by still hunting, for anyone who has tried it can tell you that one who has tramped half a day or more over burnt lands, around marshes and ponds, and gets a deer two or three miles from home, then have to pack it out, he has earned his venison; but he forgets all his trouble when he sits down to a good square meal of it. It is quite a different matter to killing them in March with very little trouble, and driving to them with a sleigh and drawing them out. Perhaps if those parties read "Traveller's" letter they may not do it again. I hope those in authority will take the hint and raise the bounty on wolves. It ought to be about fifteen dollars, and if he had said, put a bounty on every hound that runs deer between the 1st of January and 31st of December, it would have be n another good move towards protecting the deer. They have some chance of escaping the wolves in summer by taking to the water, but when hounded, and after a long chase take to the lake that has saved them from the wolf, and find almost certain death awaiting them from two or more sportsmen (save the mark) watching every loop hole of escape. The Indian must go, but a few more years of such work and the deer must go. As regards politics, if Traveller's had got right down to the true inwardness of the machine as it runs here he would have found that the seem and substence of the local politics was roads and bridges. There was once a goodly number of loyal Conservatives here, but, alas! many have, through force of circumstances, drifted out of the ranks and are now wandering in darkness. Let us hope they will yet see error of their ways and return to their old allegiance. Still you will find some staunch Tories here yet. You would smile if you heard how our friends from the front when they come up for a little pleasure and a good deal of business, tell the innocent settler what fine roads you have got and what a good and generous government it is. Result, settler promises to vote and hurrahs for Mowat, while friends drive off to secure another, remarking one to the other, "Why, Mac, you can make these people believe anything." And that's about the size of it. And yet I would like to know if it is any more than justice that some of the money collected from the back country through timber dues, etc., should come back to help improve it? But honor to whom honor is due; however money for colonization roads is spent in other places, those who have the expending of it in this municipality deserve credit for the fair and impartial manner they use it and we have good roads to show for the money. I will quit for the present. You may hear from me again and I will tell you how we get along with municipal affairs, etc.

ANOTHER HEARD FROM.

To the Editor of the Review.

DEAR SIR,—In your issue of April 28th., I notice a reply to a letter which had been written some days before, but which appears not to agree with "The Villager," stating that the village boys are not in the wrong. I must confess I wish they were not and that it was only the "country boys" who cause the disturbance. If such was the case then there would be some means to prevent it. Our "Village Boy" has never heard of stones or sticks being put on the sidewalk. I wonder where he has kept himself? Had he been up towards the railway crossing on Sunday night last as I was, and tripped over a rail placed in the fence for that purpose and chains fastened to the fence from the freight cars, he then might say the "country boys" did it all. Was it the country boys who made the disturbance in the barracks and had to be put out? Who afterwards pushed the Lieutenant of the Salvation Army over the fence? Or who placed wire over or through the fence on dark nights to noose some one for a little sport? I admit that the country boys have their faults, but they have good help when they come to the village. But they are not here all the time. And now I think that "The Villager" was not so far astray after all, if your "Village Boy" would only admit it. I hope the advice which has been given in your first issue in regard to a constable may be accepted. Our Council can provide for things less needful, why not for that? And then young and old can pass along without being either followed or insulted in any manner, and any one who may be innocent will not be blamed, and all the poor country "farmers' sons" will escape the blame not due to them.

Thanking you, dear sir,

I remain,

"ANOTHER FELLOW."

SHIRLEY CARSTONE

By ELIZA ARCHARD.

Copyrighted by American Press Association.

Once again, as twice before, she thought of the pride the master would take in his pupil's work. A wave of happiness surged across her spirit. She said to herself:

"High as he is, distinguished as he is, he shall be proud of me!"

It was like the sunset sun bursting gloriously through a mountain of cloud.

* * * * * * *

Meantime, a thousand miles away, a man impatiently awaited the creeping of the slow footed days. He could scarcely keep himself within bounds till the pokey United States mail brought him a letter. He went off to himself to read it when it came. He opened it with unsteady hands. It only said:

"Come. SHIRLEY."

Come! Only that one word.

How he would gather her to his heart and hold her there forever! Her weak woman's arms had upborne so much, and so long. Now his strong man's hands would hold hers, and strengthen them and steady them the rest of the way. He would care for her as no husband ever cared for wife before, because she had suffered so much. One of his first thoughts, too, was for the poem. Above all, she should write her poem at last. He would uphold her and encourage her while she wrote. No more weariness or self sacrifice for her, no more sorrow or loneliness for either. Light had broken for them both.

He hastened to be gone. At the moment of starting an unexpected business matter held him back till next day. He swallowed his impatience, and waited. Another letter from Shirley in the morning. He opened it and was stunned to read:

"There is great news for you. I have found your sons."

The rest of the letter left no doubt of the truth. Every point of information was supplied, even to mention of the turquoise ring. It was one he had given to Myra in the days of their brief, foolish courtship. The unfortunate woman had a passion for jewels, which clung to her even in her crazed condition. Beyond doubt, then, she had removed the children and her jewel box from the house before she fired it. The burglar, prowling there in the midnight, had taken both. It was the ring which sealed the foolish engagement that at last made it possible to trace the boys.

No, not a link was missing from this strange story. Shirley did not say where his boys were, however. She merely told him she knew where they were. Boys? Why, they must be men long since.

As he settled himself in the train he was half dazed with surprise and joy. He, the lonely and kindredless among men—wife, children, home, all that men hold dearest, were to be his at last. In a strange, happy dream he turned his face once more toward Linwood. But most of all he hugged to his heart the letter that contained only the one golden word:

"Come!"

CHAPTER XXIV.

"Robert," said Shirley, "how would it be if I knew your father?"

"And if you did, Shirley? If he was a man whom I could not be proud of, I would thank you to leave his name unrevealed. Since my ancestry is not what I thought it, let it go. I shall never seek to trace it out. It mightn't be pleasant, you know."

"How would it be if your father was an American?"

"I shouldn't mind that now. But if he wasn't a gentleman? No, no, don't tell me, Shirley."

"But how would it be if he was a gentleman, a man of power, and name, and genius, one whom his countrymen hold high in honor."

"That would make a difference, Shirley, I confess it. I shouldn't mind it if my parents had been poor. I despise the vulgar wealth which in your country sets itself up in the place of ladyhood and gentlemanhood. If my father was merely one of these vulgar rich, then don't mention his name. But if he is what you say! Tell me, Shirley, who is my father?"

"He is a man you have seen."

"You don't tell me!"

"You asked me once if I knew him. I said I had met him. I did not tell you he was one of my earliest friends."

"Now that is interesting."

"Robert, you are happy indeed. It is a pity we couldn't have the choosing of our own fathers. I always said it. If we could, we'd all be happier and better looking. But if you had the choosing of both your father and your foster father, you couldn't possibly have done better for yourself than fate did for you. Both are men for any boy alive to be proud of. Robert, your father is Philip Dumoray."

At this the young man, who prided himself on controlling his emotions, walked once across the room and back. Then he stopped and remarked merely:

"You don't tell me!"

"I have written him," continued Shirley. "He will be here to-morrow."

The young man meditated. Then he said, kindly and condescendingly:

"On the whole, I think I'll acknowledge him."

* * * * * *

Miss Simpkins was very ill. A messenger came to say that it was the one desire of her heart to see Shirley. Faithful as always, forgetful of herself, remembering others, Shirley went. It was a gray, chilly afternoon. She who had been a ministering angel to so many, shivered from head to foot as she crossed the threshold of home again, passing out of the cold and darkness into the warmth and light.

When Shirley came home, Miss Simpkins was dead. Her last look had been turned to Shirley's face; she passed into the eternal silence holding Shirley's hand. It seemed to comfort her. But Shirley was unduly shaken. The years of tensely strained life had worn on the fine strong organization more than appeared.

She was cold all through, and could not get warm. The glazing eyes of the dying woman seemed to follow her, and fix themselves upon hers, turn which way she would. It was a foolish, nervous impression, but she could not shake it off. Presently, her teeth chattered, and she shook all over. She was in a chill. She sighed and said:

"I am cold and tired. I am all gone to pieces."

Next morning she had a fever. But it occurred to nobody that Shirley was seriously ill, and needed looking after. It had always been Shirley who looked after the rest.

In the afternoon, Philip Dumoray came.

Master and pupil were together at last, with none to come between!

When he came, Shirley lay languidly across by the fire, upon one of the low couches where her mother had spent years of ornamental invalidism.

It happened that none were by to question the strangeness of his sudden arrival. He lifted Shirley in his arms without a word, and held her in a mighty embrace. Only death could take her from him now!

But of that hour of meeting, no record more than this will ever be made.

After a time she slipped softly from his grasp and lay back again upon her mother's low couch. Her hand was clasped in his, a smile of gladness hovered about her eyes and mouth.

The door opened, and Robert Dumoray came and stood beside them. Shirley turned from one to the other with the sweet, bright look in her face. She had never looked so beautiful, both of them thought.

"You have seen Robert," she said to the master. "He is the dearest to me of all the brothers, and he is your son."

She undid her fingers from the master's clasp, and took Robert's hand and laid it softly where hers had been. So they stood with clasped hands, father and son. Shirley laid her own hot, quivering hand upon their two, her eyes turned upward to their faces, still with the look of ineffable love and joy. Her face was the face of an angel.

Then her eyes closed, her fingers slipped away and fell across her breast, her breath came in quick gasps. Both men, father and son, sprang toward her. An unearthly fear compressed the master's heart.

"Good God!" said he, "she is ill."

She opened her eyes and smiled faintly back at him. Then she rallied and came to herself again. She lay there, with her cheek against his hand, and the look of a great, sweet content in her face. Indeed, it was the face of one who had not an earthly wish left to be gratified.

"Yes," said Robert, "Shirley is not well. She is a saint and a martyr, if there ever was one on earth. But she shan't work any more. I shall work for her from this on. When she gets better I'm going to take her away, across the water to England with Brownie and me. Shirley is ours, now."

"No," said his father, "Shirley is mine."

But in the morning all these thoughts were swallowed up in one supreme fear. She who had never been ill in her life lay faint and low and well nigh breathless.

A change had indeed come to Shirley.

Love, tender care, rest, hope, the brightest hopes, all had come at last. Had they come too late?

Word went abroad that Shirley was dying, Shirley, the well beloved. Once more, even as when Col. Carstone was stricken, a throng pressed about the doors of the stone house. Men and women and little children, the poor and the lowly and the weak, came to the stone house and went away weeping and saying:

"We are losing our best friend!"

The Inter-State Commerce Bill.

[illegible] Inter-state Commerce Commission a letter from the United States commercial agent at London, Ont., describing the "disastrous effect of the inter-state Commerce Bill on imports and exports to and from Canada and the United States." The letter, in detail, shows that Canadian railways are at present unable to quote rates, and trade is in consequence, disorganized, and that British firms, bein able to ascertain exact rates, can have a great advantage over United States merchants. He concluded by saying "there are now lying here 61 cars of one commodity awaiting rates over United States railways, which will probably be so high that it will be impossible to export."

Dr. Ryerson,

Of Toronto, will be at the Oriental Hotel, Peterborough, on Saturday, 7th May, for consultation on Eye, Ear, Throat and Nose cases.

Vags.

Thos. Williams and John Murphy were charged with Chief Adams with being vagrants. They pleaded guilty and were given a month apiece.

Queen's Jubilee.

We are informed that at an informal meeting last evening it was decided to ask the Mayor to call a public meeting on Monday evening next to take the necessary steps to celebrate the Queen's Jubilee.

Faint's Factory.

Mr. Faint's woollen mill and mattress factory which was burnt down a few months ago has been rebuilt and work is now going on as usual. Mattresses are being rapidly turned out.

Dogs.

The police officers are now making daily raids on the great untagged. On Wednesday five canines were spotted and made good revolver practice for the P. C.'s. They all went under and it cost $1.50 to get them buried.

The River.

The Otonabee has risen a great deal during the past two weeks. The Riverside park is flooded and high water mark has been reached. It is not expected, however, that the water will reach a damaging height unless heavy rainfalls ensue.

Around the World.

Mr. W. D. Campbell, late of McGill College, Montreal, gave an illustrated lecture in St. John's Church school room on Wednesday evening. He described places and scenes on land and water, illustrating what he said by excellent views. The audience were shown a great variety of views, embracing important features in a round the world voyage.

The Postmaster General's report for the year ending June 30th, 1886, shows that the gross revenue from the sale of postage stamps, etc., at the Peterborough Post Office was $11,795.58; salaries, $2,800; allowances towards rent, fuel and light, $440; number of money orders issued, 2,993; amount of orders issued, $41,895.96; commission received from public, $352.40; amount of orders paid, $33,057.22; compensation to postmaster on money order business, $121.55.

Personal.

English papers that have just come to hand say that the last mail from India brought particulars of the sad death of Major Neill, of the Central India House. He was shot dead on parade by an insane trooper of his regiment on March 14th. The deceased was the fourth son of General Sir James Neill, of the Madras Fusiliers, so distinguished in the Indian mutiny, who was killed at Havelock's relief of Lucknow. Major Neill was a nephew of Mr. G. Warde, of Peterborough.

Mr. Seath, Senior High School Inspector, is in town to-day inspecting the various departments of the Collegiate Institute.

Mr. Adam Hudspeth, M. P., Lindsay, registered at the Oriental on Wednesday evening.

City Clothing Store.

The old established City Clothing store has of late undergone a complete overhauling. A fine new hardwood floor has been put in, the front adorned with two additional sheets of plate glass, new counters have been built by Mr. J. Montgomery, and on them stand handsome new silver ribbed show cases. The place has been brightened by paper hanging of a rich character, the handiwork of Mr. T. McGrath. Above all the shelves have been replenished with new spring goods which are tastefully displayed by the staff of clerks. Altogether Mr. LeBrun has a clothing establishment of which he may well feel proud.

Your chance to-day to secure the best value in Ladies Jerseys ever shown in Peterborough. Sheppard is now offering some beautiful goods in black and colors at fully 50 per cent. less than wholesale prices.

OUR BIG TOWN.

Population Over Ten Thousand—Assessment Over $4,000,000.

The return of the assessment roll by the Ashburnham assessors furnish some more interesting facts regarding the progress of our de facto town.

The number of persons in the families of those registered as residents is 10,099, and the total assessment of the two places is 4,125,560. Ashburnham shows slight increase in population, but the property seems to have depreciated in value somewhat.

Peterborough and Ashburnham, except they are governed by two seperate councils, are at one as far as other interests are concerned. The one gas system lights them, and the electricity from the same dynamos illuminates their streets.

The population is amply sufficient to enable corporation as a city if such a thing is desirable. In this computation of population no "floating" population is counted. Nor are the several hundred citizens counted who live just beyond the limits of the town.

The comparative statement of the progress of each place is as follows:—

GAMBLING IN STOCKS.

BY W. CLUXTON.

My former articles having been so favorably received, I am encouraged with this to finish the series of papers on corners and cliques, and gambling in stocks.

BULLS AND BEARS,

My object is not to discourage legitimate dealing, but to endeavor to show the danger there is in buying and selling on margins. As I am not so well acquainted with dealing in stocks as I am with produce operations, I will quote largely from an interesting writer in New York who is thoroughly acquainted with this system of speculation.

OLD CUSTOM IN WALL STREET.

Merchants of the olden time were content with small stores, slenderly stocked. A shopkeeper took down his own shutters, swept his warehouse, and was ready for trade by the time gray dawn broke. A bride and bridegroom had their hair arranged by the hands of the barber the afternoon preceding the marriage, and usually slept in arm-chairs that it might not be disturbed. All marriages were duly published three weeks beforehand. Courting in Wall street was a very primitive matter. It was done in the presence of the family, and the lover was compelled to leave when the bell struck nine without a private adieu to the damsel.

MODERN WALL STREET.

"In Wall street will be found the sharp, decisive, keen, daring intellect of the nation. Its influence is felt in every portion of the land. Men corner stocks in Wall street, corner wheat, flour, and pork; cotton produce and coal. Men can produce a panic in an instant, that will be felt like an earthquake on the Pacific slope, sweep like a besom of destruction over the great lakes; be as irresistible on the sea board as the long roll of the Atlantic beating with giant strength its rock-bound coast. A Wall Street panic comes suddenly like thunder from a clear sky. No shrewdness can foresee and no talent avert it."

"Immense sums of money are sent into this street from outsiders, who, because they have been successful in dry goods, and other branches of trade, think they can turn $50,000 into $100,000 in the street as easily as they can draw a cheque. In nine cases out of ten all such investments are lost The other day a merchant called upon a broker in Wall Street, handed him $50,000, asked him to invest in a stock named. "I will do so if you wish," said the broker, "but I advise you to take a good look at the money, for you will never see it again. I have been in the business in Wall Street 33 years. During that time 98 out of every 100 who have put money in the Street have lost it."

The present style of doing business in the Street enables a man with a very small amount of money to do a very large business. With a $5,000 he can purchase $10,000 worth of stock. With $100,000 he can purchase $100,000,000. As the stock falls, if buyers do not keep their margin good, the broker must protect himself by selling the stock, and using up the money deposited.

BLACK FRIDAY.

The 24th September, 1869, must always be a memorable day in the history of Wall Street. On the day preceeding $24,524,000 in gold was sold at the gold board. On Friday the sale reached the high figure of over 500,000,000. In 17 minutes—from 11.50 to 12.16—gold fell from 1.60 to 1.30. In these 17 minutes tens of thousands of men were ruined. The ruin swept through New York, up the river, up and down the Atlantic coast, over the great lakes and prairies, carrying away fortunes like chaff before the gale.

THE GREAT PERIL.

No barriers seemed to be strong enough to protect those who threw themselves on the excitement of stock speculation. Like the cups of abomination in the Apocalypse, it seems to drunken and madden all who touch it. A young man of very brilliant abilities had an important financial position in a prominent house. His salary was liberal, his social position high, and his style of living genteel. He was a racy writer, and a popular correspondent. He took a special interest in Sunday schools, and religious and reformatory movements. He was especially prominent in the Christain associations of the land. While at a national meeting of associations, in which he bore a conspicuous part, even while he was speaking on a subject envolving soundness of doctrine, the telegraph wires were quivering in every direction with the intelligence of defalcation with which he was charged. It was the old story of dishonesty of long standing, with fraud running over a series of years, carefully covered up and ingeniously hidden, vouchers forged, and an apparently fair page, full of wrongs. Early, a little stock venture indulged in; to save that, more money was needed. A loss in one direction was to be repaired by a little speculation in another. Money borrowed for a day or two, and then the set out on a tramp in the beaten path of ruin, where so many speculators go.

Dr. C. A. McRae,

One of Dr. Kergan's surgeons, will be at the Grand Central Hotel, Peterborough, on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, May 7th, 8th and 9th, where he can be consulted free on all private and chronic diseases. The doctor is considered by Dr. Kergan to be the most thoroughly honest, experienced and skilful man he ever had on his staff, and all who have ever consulted him are of the same opinion. If unwell, avail yourself of this opportunity and consult Dr. C. A. McRae, who will give you a free, candid and careful opinion of your case.

Enjoy Life.

What a truly beautiful world we life in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health, but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof, that Green's August Flower, will make them free from disease, as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy-five per cent. of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the Head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it. d90

The Toronto Ministerial Association on Monday again discussed the question of religious instructions in the Public schools and decided to keep the importance of the subject before the public until a satisfactory change is effected.

HOW PETERBOROUGH LOST ANOTHER BUSINESS HOUSE.

To the Editor of the Review.

DEAR SIR,—Some three weeks ago I arrived in Peterborough, fully prepared to open a Dry Goods store in your enterprising town, but, after looking the field over, I was convinced that it would be suicidal for me to embark in trade in a place where there is a business house so disgustingly aggressive and so lost to the interests of other houses as one you have located in your town. It is with surprise and chagrin that I notice that this particular house is steadily increasing its number of customers day by day, by employing methods that would make it very uncomfortable for me, if I were in business here, just as it does now for competing establishments who are striving to combat the evil.

I refer to J. C. Turnbull, George and Simcoe street, who sells a good Black Worsted, or a Scotch Tweed suit for $16, worth $20 in any other town or city. Fine unlaundried white shirts, from 35c to 50c., worth from 50c to 75c. All-Wool Tweeds at 40c, worth 50c. Fine Prints 9½c, worth 12½c. This is no place for me.

Yours in sorrow,
H. I. PRICE.

COBOURG.

BODY FOUND.—The body of John McGivern who was drowned last November in Rice Lake was found on Tuesday at the place where he was supposed to have fallen in, and where his canoe was found. The exact spot where this accident occurred was opposite Margarets Island east of the Keene river.

FIREMEN RESIGN.—We understand that the town clerk is in receipt of the resignation of No. 1 Fire Co., as well as that of the Hook and Ladder Truck Co. The immediate cause of this action was taken no doubt on the arrival of the better terms offered to them by the Town council, which they did not think was sufficient for their requirements.—Sentinel Star.

ENGLAND.

London has thirty-seven theatres, twenty-seven music halls and fifty-eight concert rooms.

The Rt. Hon. C. N. Newdegate died at his seat in Warwickshire on April 9th at the age of 71.

The total property of the life insurance companies of the United Kingdom amounts to the enormous sum of £184,000,000.

The Pickwick Inn, Cobham—one of Charles Dickens's most favoured resorts—has been partially destroyed by fire. The front and side of the house are alone left standing.

The Channel mail packet Victoria, from New Haven to Dieppe, went ashore off Cape Ailly on April 13th during a fog, and 12 to 15 of the passengers appear to have been drowned through leaving the vessel in small boats.

Mr. James Grant, the well-known military novelist, lies dangereusly ill at his residence, Tavistock Road, Westbourne Park, London. Mr Grant's first work, "The Romance of War," was published in 1846—forty-one years ago.

The most noted torpedo-boat builders of the world are Messrs. Yarrow and Messrs. Thornycroft, of London. Each of these great firms employs from 1,000 to 1,200 workmen, and can turn out at least one completed boat per week.

Sir P. W. P. Wallis, G. C. B., senior Admiral of the British fleet, has lately entered his 97th year, and is still on the active list. He won high honors in the Chesapeake-Shannon fight in 1813, and has completed 87 years of actual service.

One of the greatest ironclads of the British navy was launched on April 9th from the Elswick works of Sir W. Armstrong, Mitchell & Co. The ship—a twin screw steel armour-plated turret ship, with a displacement of 10,470 tons, and engines of 12,000 horse power, was named the Victoria.

For Children Starving to Death.

On account of their inability to digest ordinary food, Scott's Emulsion can be digested and give strength and flesh when all other food fails. See what Dr. A. H. Peck, Penn. Med. College, Peticediac, says: "I have used and prescribed Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, and find it an excellent preparation, agreeing well with the stomach, and its continued use adding greatly to the strength and comfort of the patient." Put up in 50c. and $1 size.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

ANNOUNCEMENT!

We Have Always Carried Out Our Promises With the Public and Intend to Do So Still.

The Dry Goods Business heretofore carried on by T. Dolan & Co, and disposed of on February 1st to Mr. John Corkery—and John Corkery only—at 90 cents on the dollar, and afterwards assuming the name of Sheehy & Co., has been taken back by the old firm, owing to the illness of Mr. Corkery.

It is the intention of T. DOLAN & CO. to sell the stock out at 100 CENTS ON THE DOLLAR—allowing 10 per cent. for running expenses. Now is the time to get bargains.

FROM

J. J. SHEEHY

I beg to say that contrary to announcements which appeared in the Peterborough papers for the past two months, I DO NOT intend to remove to T. Dolan & Co's Dry Goods Store, nor have I any connections whatever with that establishment. The final arrangements not being satisfactory to me, I withdrew from the projected change, and intend carrying on the Dry Goods business in my usual stand next to Lech's Hat Store.

It is my intention in the future as in the past to show at all seasons nothing but new and fresh goods in the various lines of Dry Goods and Gent's Furnishings; and by doing so, hope to retain the confidence which I am proud to say, I have enjoyed from the public since commencing business two years ago.

FRIDAY, MAY 6, 1887.

THE Globe in some advice to Returning Officers says among other things that:—

"Mr. Hodgins shows clearly that it is the duty of Returning-officers in all cases to return as duly elected the candidate who has received the majority of votes."

Either the Globe is misquoting Mr. Hodgins, which is most probable, or Mr. Hodgins is strangely ignorant of the law on the subject with which he is dealing. In 35 [illegible] any such member of a Provincial Legislature shall, notwithstanding his disqualification as in the preceeding section mentioned, receive a majority of votes at any such election, such majority of votes shall be thrown away, and it shall be the duty of the Returning Officer to return the person having the next greatest number of votes, provided he be otherwise eligible."

It is evident that "the duty of Returning Officers to return as duty elected the candidate who has received the majority of votes" does not extend to "all cases," whatever the Globe or even Mr. Hodgins may say.

THE COLLIERY HORROR.

A Survivor's Graphic Account of the Terrific Explosion.

NANAIMO, B. C., May 5.—A collier named Jules Michael, who was injured in the explosion in No. 1 shaft, of the Vancouver Coal Gas mine, says he was sitting in the cabin at supper in No. 2 shaft when he felt the concussion All scrambled out but became insensible, and only one was saved of his four companions whose dead bodies came up in the cage with him. Several could hardly appreciate their miraculous escape owing to the dazed feeling which all felt who came out from the deadly pit. He represents the explosion as having been terrific. Everything became dark at once. John Lynch, who was badly injured about the face and head, and had his hip fractured, has been demented ever since the explosion occurred. His talk is about work in the pit. It is thought he will not recover having inhaled the gas. The others were not seriously, though all were badly shaken up. Samuel Hudson's heroic death is unaccountable. He was a miner of great experience, while those who went down with him to rescue their fellows were comparatively inexperienced. He died from the effects of after damp. His brave end was one of the bright things in the "Carnival of misery."

All day yesterday gangs of men endeavored to extinguish the flames in No. 1 shaft, and it is believed the fire is under control. The Merryweather steam fire engine did good work in pumping water from the harbor down the air shaft. It is absolutely impossible to think of getting at the imprisoned men until the fire is subdued. There is danger of gas being driven into the fire, and of a second explosion. Even now fears are entertained that the whole place will be blown up. If this should occur the catastrope would be the greatest recorded in the history of coal mining All hope of rescuing any one in the mine has been abandoned, It was proposed to cut a ditch to the salt water so as to attempt to put out the fire in the No. 2 shaft by turning a stream of water into it, but the scheme was abandoned. The mines extend out from the shore more than a mile beneath the waters of the harbor, and as one looks over the waves it is hard to imagine that beneath are imprisoned many dead fathers and sons of this city.

Around the shaft the scenes are harrowing in the extreme. Mr. Riden and Mr. Scott, of the Wellington mines, went down yesterday afternoon at the risk of their lives in an endeavour to make an investigation as to the manner of procedure. Mr. Chandler, of the Wellington mine, has been indefatigable in his efforts to assist in the work of rescue. Several physicians are in attendance tendering all the assistance in their power. The business houses are all closed, the collieries shut up, and the entire population is gathered at the scene of the disaster. Wives, terror-stricken, crying children and sorrowing fathers hover in the vicinity and mourn their terrible affliction. Occasional showers of rain cast dreariness over the ghastly scene. The imprisoned miners were all old settlers, their faces were familiar on the streets, and there will be a void in many homes. The cause of the explosion is unknown. It is generally supposed to have been an explosion of coal dust. The tale will probably never be told.

NANAIMO, B. C., May 5.—The fire in the mines has considerably abated. A dense volume of steam arises from the air shaft, and until the fire is completely subdued it will be impossible to enter the workings to ascertain whether the unfortunate men shut in are living or dead. Fresh relays of working parties are being sent from Wellington, and ships in the harbor have also supplied about sixty men, who are working nobly.

Arrived to day, Parasols 25, 35, 50, 75 and $1.00, really nice goods at double the money. See Sheppard for Parasols.

Right now is the time to use a good Blood Purifying Medicine. Lose no time in getting a bottle of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It will do you good. Sold by all Druggists 50 cents.

GOVERNING BY THE SWORD.

LONDON, May 5.—Sir William Vernon Harcourt, speaking at Southampton, and Mr. Herbert Gladstone, in a speech at Chiswick, strongly denounced the Government tactics on the Times affair. The former said the Government's course would result in the governing of Ireland by the sword, and he was not sure that that was not the object of these proceedings. He supposed Mr. Chamberlain's real grievance lay in the fact that the Liberals had failed to install the anti-Pope in the Pope's chair.

FORTIFYING METZ.

BERLIN, May 5.—The work on the new fortifications at Metz is being pushed rapidly forward.

AN IMPORTANT POINT.

LONDON, May 5.—Lord Hartington, speaking at Leeds, said he was not inclined to express an opinion in the absence of certain knowledge of the doings of Parliament. But it seemed to him that the point of the greatest importance—greater than the question whether they had associated with criminals in the past—was the charge, apparently substantiated by [illegible] evidence, that the Parnellites have continued and still continue to associate with persons in America who openly advocate the commission of crime for the purpose of attaining their political objects. Regarding the Crimes bill, he said he had never disguised his opinion that a recourse to such a measure would be necessary, after Mr. Gladstone had offered the bribe of Home Rule to Irish disaffection. The measure was requisite to suppress the tyranny of the National League. There was no room in the British Empire for two governments or two executives.

LANSDOWNE'S TENANTS.

LONDON, May 5.—Mr. O'Brien's charge of bad faith against Lord Lansdowne in repudiating his agreement with his tenants is met by a letter to the Times from Lord Lansdowne's agent, Mr. Trench. The terms were suggested by the sub-agent, Mr. Denning, and forwarded to Mr. Trench in London, who at once telegraphed his dissent. They were never communicated to Lord Lansdowne. They were practically as follows: First, judicial leaseholders, who asked 20 off to get 15, and non-judicial ones, who asked 30 to get 20; second, all evicted tenants to be reinstated on the payment of half a year's rent minus the abatement; third, no costs to be borne by the tenants; fourth, all leases to be broken so as to allow tenants to enter the land court.

DUBLIN, May 5.—An application for the release of Father Keller, the priest of Youghal who was imprissoned in Kilmainham for refusing to testify regarding his connection with the "plan of campaign," has been dismissed.

OUTSIDE PUBLIC OPINION.

LONDON, May 5.—Mr. Goschen, speaking at East London last night, denied that public opinion outside of England was on the side of the Home Rulers. To Americans, influenced by the Irish vote, he would say: "We follow your example rather than your abstract resolutions." The country would draw its own conclusions from the fact that the Parnellites refuse to believe that they could obtain justice from a British judge and jury.

"ON TO BERLIN."

PARIS, May 5.—Anti-German demonstrations continue to be made in various parts of this city. A procession carrying a banner inscribed "To Berlin," to-day marched to the palace of the Elysee, the residence of President Grevy, where it was dispersed by the police. Twelve persons who took prominent parts in the demonstration were arrested.

A SERIOUS AFFAIR.

LONDON May 5.—The Telegraph describes the anti-German demonstration in Paris yesterday as serious. It says the mob in the neighborhood of the Eden theatre where Wagner's "Lohengin" was being performed, shouted "a bas l'Allamagne," "Vive La France," "a bas Bismarck," and "Give us back our clocks," referring to Strasbourg. Last evening the demonstrations were renewed. A mob composed of students and gamins marched about the city shouting. They halted in front of the army and navy club and there cried out "Vive l'arme Francaise," "Vive Boulanger," "a Berlin." Another mob went to the building occupied by the Russian embassy shouting "Vive la France," "Vive la Russie," "Vive l'alliance Russo-Francaise." The leaders of this mob then proposed to their followers to march to the German embassy. The mob proceeded in the direction of the Palace la Concorde, singing the air "Lamplons" to the words of the song, "Nos Pendulus" (our clocks), but it was stopped by the police and turned away before it could reach the German embassy. The mob then returned and dispersed.

Count von Munster expressed pleasure at returning to France. Flourens, replying, said pacific sentiments had never ceased to inspire the action of the French Government during the entire controversy.

A STATION ON THE RED SEA.

MYDRID, May 5.—The Government has authorized the establishment of a coaling station on the Red Sea, in the bay purchased from the native chiefs in 1882, with the idea of forming a settlement. AT THE WILD WEST SHOW.

LONDON, May 5.—The Prince and Princess of Wales and their daughters, the Marquis of Lorne and the Princess Louise, and the Comtesse of Paris, accompanied by brilliant suits, visited the Wild West Show and the grounds of the American Exhibition to-day. Buffalo Bill and his company gave a special performance for the benefit of his royal guests.

ROYAL VISITORS.

LONDON, May 5.—Most of the royalties from abroad will be the queen's guests at Buckingham Palace during their stay in London, but, except the near relatives from Germany, none will remain for more than the inside of a week. The King and Queen of Denmark are to be the guests of the Prince and Princess of Wales at Marlborough House, as well as the King of Greece, who is coming to England for the Jubilee. The Grand Duke and Grand Duchess Serge of Russia, who are to represent the Court of St. Petersburg, will stay at Clarence House with the Duke and Duchess of Edinburg. None of the foreign royalties will stay at Windsor. They are to accompany her Majesty thither on the afternoon of Wednesday, the 22nd June, as her return to the Castle is to be an affair of state and ceremony. She will drive from Slough through Eton and Windsor. There will be a grand banquet at the Castle in the evening, in St. George's hall, and all the guests will return to London afterwards.

THE DILLON AFFAIR.

Discussion Continued in the Commons —Gladstone's Amendment.

LONDON, May 5.—In the House of Commons this afternoon the consideration of the question of breach of privilege in the Times-Dillon case was resumed. No member rising to speak on the motion of Mr. Lewis, that the conduct of the Times was a breach of privilege and that the House take notice of it,

Mr Speaker Peel put before the House the amendment of Sir Edward Clarke, Solicitor-General, that the House decline to treat the Times' publication as a breach of privilege. The Parnellites at once challenged a division. This resulted in a vote of 297 in favour of the amendment to 219 against it. The amendmeet thus became a substantive motion, and Mr. Bradlaugh resumed the debate.

Mr. Gladstone, who on rising was loudly cheered, moved an amendment that a committee be appointed to enquire into the charge of wilful falsehood made against Mr. Dillon in the Times on Monday. He said that he did not intend to suggest that the enquiry go beyond the article referred to.

ASLEEP ON A RAILWAY TRACK.

One Young Man Killed Instantly and Another Fatally Injured.

KINGSTON, Ont., May 5.—Yesterday a sad accident occurred at the crossing of the Canadian Pacific Railway, near Arden. Two youths about nineteen years of age, one the son of the late Wesley McConnell, and the other the son of Eldrige Walker, had been to a sugar social, and on the way home sat down on the track and fell asleep. The night express came along and struck the boys, cutting off the top of the skull of McConnell, who died instantly. Walker is living, but cannot survive, one leg being crushed and his skull badly fractured. They were found lying on the track by the driver of a freight train after the express had passed.

The Daily Review.

FRIDAY, MAY 6, 1887.

OUR NATIONAL FUTURE.

THE Hon. James Young in a second letter to the Globe discusses Imperial Federation and assails the Federationists and their views. It is evident from the arguments he uses that his inimical position arises in a great measure from his not having taken the trouble to acquaint himself with the platform of those he criticises. For instance he sets up a man of straw and then proceeds to knock it down, by declaring that Canadians would never agree to give to any other body but its own Parliament controll over its commerce. If he had read the constitution of the Imperial Federation League he would have known that it contains the provision that "No scheme of Federation should interfere with the existing rights of Local Parliaments, as regards local affairs," among which are included the right to frame commercial tariffs. Again he takes it for granted that "the project necessarily involves the creation of a Federal Parliament," and attacks his own figment. No such necessity exists or is recognized by the Imperial Federation League. At the present moment there is in active operation an incipient advisory council under the guise of the Colonial Conference, in which the Cabinet Ministers of the Three Kingdoms are discussing with gentlemen from the different colonies questions of Imperial interest, to be submitted after having been thus elucidated to the Colonial Legislatures which may be concerned. Why should not such an advisory council be placed upon a more regular and permanent basis? The questions discussed are such as are now settled between the Home and Colonial authorities by agents or by correspondence, each matter being treated individually as the necessity arises, and legislation by both Parliaments interested being required to validate any arrangement. A permanent advisory council would avoid much of the inconvenience of these piecemeal negotiations, would facilitate them where three or four constituent portions of the empire were concerned, would give the great advantage of general discussion and consultation, and while doing would leave as at present the final determination to the Legislatures concerned. In process of time, with the growth of common interests, the continual reference to the Colonial Legislatures should be found to grow cumbersome, and more or less complete legislative or executive powers were by degrees conferred upon the advisory council, is not this the very manner in which the British constitution and the Canadian constitution have been gradually formed? Such a growth with the consent and approval of those interested, would adapt itself to their requirements and would have a prospect of permanency with due modifications when needed. Meanwhile there is no desire to interfere with our rights of local self-government, or to frame closet-born constitutions such as we have seen some countries adopt, discard and replace with new ones in infinite variety and with none of the stability of natural growth.

Mr. Young concludes his letter as follows:—

"But as certainly as the son reaches manhood and leaves the parental roof, as certainly comes the day when powerful colonies attain their majority. This lesson is written all over the world's history. That day came for Britain's first-born, the United States. It is now approaching for this great colony, and it ought to be the prayer and aspiration of every citizen that at the proper time and in cordial alliance with Great Britain, Canada may fulfil Lord Monck's prediction by peacefully and gracefully taking a place among the nations, which, by its resources, people and institutions, it will be amply fitted to adorn."

Let us take Mr. Young's illustration. The son on attaining his majority may adopt one of three courses. He may go into partnership with his father, he may set up for himself in competition with his father, or he may form a partnership with his father's rival. So with a nation. Now Canada is in no hurry to set up for itself, like the United States; it has no craving to become the partner of the United States, and it would greatly prefer a partnership with the Mother Country and its sister colonies. Such an association would obviously have an unprecedented weight and power among the nations of the world, yet the different members of it would retain their freedom of action as to their own affairs. The fact that a small but noisy band is endeavoring to cajole and "bulldoze" Canada into forming a partnership with the United States in antagonism to the Mother Country is a very strong reason why all loyal Canadians should strive to maintain and consolidate the unity of the great Empire of which our Dominion is a most important part.

THE Toronto News, in an article advocating that the House of Commons should intervene in the Queens, N. B. election and not leave the matter to the Courts, writes as follows:—

"As party majorities in the past have notoriously been guilty of flagrant injustice in dealing with election cases, whenever by so doing they could score a point for their side, there will probably be little difficulty in obtaining precedents enough to justify the rankest partisanship."

Even making allowances for exaggeration, the News thus supplies a very strong argument why such questions should be decided by the Courts and not by the House. Justice should be done, and the Courts will do it.

THE CHILD MOSES.

EXPLANATORY NOTES BY S. I. CURTISS, PH. D., D. D.

Lesson VI of the International Series (Second Quarter), for Sunday, May 8. Text of the Lesson, Ex. ii, 10—Golden Text, Ps. cxxi, 5.

The methods used by Pharaoh to check the growing population of Israel failed. The king resorted to a new expedient in attempting to have all the boys destroyed at birth, but with only partial success. In God's hands this cruel edict was the means of training the future leader of Israel.

THE LESSON.

The Birth of Moses (vs. 1, 2)—A certain man of the tribe of Levi, which was to be the priestly tribe, took a wife of the daughters of his tribe. They had a son. He was such a beautiful babe that his mother used extraordinary means to save his life. She hid him three months.

The Ark of Papyrus (v. 3)—But she could not hide him any longer. She therefore made a little ark of papyrus, which she rendered firm by daubing it with bitumen ("mineral pitch") and water tight by the use of vegetable pitch, and put the little boy in it and placed it among the flags on the brink of the Nile. All this corresponds well to the time of Ramses II. The royal residence had been at Memphis, where, on account of the swift current of the Nile, it would have been impossible for the child to be left in any safety. But at Tanis Zoan, which was the royal residence at this time, the case was different. The Tanatic arm of the Nile at this point is narrow, the current slow and the flags thick. It is not improbable that the Hebrew mother selected the particular place in the river to which the Egyptian princess might be expected to come.

Vs. 4, 5. She stationed his sister, probably Miriam, near by to see what would happen. The plan was successful. Not long after Pharaoh's daughter, perhaps the eldest of the princesses, came down to the edge of the river, quite in accordance with the custom of ancient times, to bathe, attended by her maidens. She saw the little ark at a distance. Her curiosity was aroused and she sent one of her maidens to fetch it.

V. 6. She raised the lid of the little ark and saw a beautiful child weeping (Hebrew). Her heart was touched with compassion, but she recognized at once that it was one of the Hebrew children.

The Faithful Sister (vs. 7, 9)—Meanwhile the sister of the babe, who had been eagerly watching and who had seen the interest which the princess manifested in him, appeared at the right moment and made a suggestion to the heart of Pharaoh's daughter, although very likely she had not thought of it until then. "Shall I go and call thee a nurse of the Hebrew women, that she may nurse the child for thee?" The maiden perhaps trembled with anxiety to hear the reply, but the answer came, "Go." She went and brought the babe's mother, and Pharaoh's daughter told her to nurse the child for her and she would give her wages.

Moses' Education (v. 10)—The mother kept the boy until he was weaned, and perhaps even longer. She then brought him to Pharaoh's daughter and he became her son. We do not know whether the Egyptians practiced adoption, but we have every reason to believe that his education was like that of a prince of that time, and that there is no exaggeration in the statement in Acts vii, 22, where it is said that "Moses was instructed in all the wisdom of the Egyptians."

This wisdom included, according to Canon Rawlinson, "orthography, grammar, history, theology, medicine, arithmetic, geometry, astronomy and engineering." It is likely that his education would include not only these branches, but also a knowledge of the Phœnician language, which was then the language of commerce, much like the French and English language at the present day. The Phœnician, however, as modern investigations have proved, was essentially the same as Hebrew. The future lawgiver of Israel, as the adopted son of Pharaoh's daughter, thus had a remarkable preparation for his future work.

It is probable that he had at least some familiarity with the following subjects: 1. With the legal system of Egypt. 2. With the theological works of the Egyptians, including the Book of the Dead, which furnishes some striking parallels with the Ten Commandments. 3. With the ritual, including the regulations regarding the priesthood. 4. With the art of writing.

All these considerations are at least favorable to the antiquity of the Pentateuch and to the theory of its authorship by Moses.

Pharaoh's daughter called her adopted son Moses, which is a common name among the Egyptians in the form Mesu, which signifies child, although it comes from a root to draw forth, and therefore would seem especially suited to Pharaoh's daughter as the name of this adopted son.

POINTS TO BE REMEMBERED.

1. Nothing is small in God's plan. The destinies of nations once depended on the fate of a little infant, and this was determined by the faithfulness and tact of a little girl who spoke the right word at the right time.

2. God co-works with human instrumentalities in the execution of his plans. Under his providential guidance everything conspired in a perfectly natural way to prepare Moses for the work which he had in store for him.

3. God does not despise human learning. When God raised up his servant Moses, he sent him to the best school of antiquity and gave him the education of a prince.—Sunday School World.

Physicians' Success in Persia.

The Persians have one never failing subject of conversation. That subject is their health. The pleasure of talking about the weather is denied to them; for, as eleven months out of the twelve are fine in Persia, the subject does not present sufficient variety. But a Persian, to whatever class he may belong, is never tired of talking about his ailments, real or supposed. In his eyes all Feringhis (Europeans) are doctors, and the European doctor is the very best of all. For many years at Shiraz there lived an old Swede who had walked into Persia in his youth. He knew nothing of medicine on his arrival; but, finding that the natives constantly solicited his advice, he bought a few medical books and literally acquired a certain amount of knowledge by carrying out the good old principle of "Fiat experimentum in corpore vili."

Happily the Hakim Sahib also believed in the "vis medicatrix naturæ." As a rule, his drugs were harmless. "I have different colored liquids," said he, "and so long as there are bread and water to be had I am never at a loss for a pill." The pills were floured for the common people and gilded for the rich. At 70 years of age the Hakim Sahib died. He held the position of physician to the forces of the province, and was deservedly respected by natives and Europeans.—St. James' Gazette.

Chihuahua, Mexico, is rapidly being settled up by Mormons, who are flocking to that city by hundreds from Salt Lake City.

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowlede of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there was a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—"Civil Service Gazette."

SHIRLEY CARSTONE

By ELIZA ARCHARD.

Copyrighted by American Press Association.

Within its walls Brownie, the wayward, the self-indulgent and light of thought, flung herself down and wept most bitterly of all.

Into the blameless, marvelous life had passed the music of the poem which Shirley had never written.

One by one the friends who were the nearest crept with awe stricken faces to the room with the western windows, out of which Shirley had gazed so often and so wearily, and longed to fly away and follow the sun in his flight. Shirley knew them all. The clear, great brain never lost itself. But most of all her eyes turned wearily toward the sky where the western sun was going down. Clouds of gold and purple, of crimson and opal lay all along the way, like unto the opening of the gates of the celestial city.

She turned her eyes back upon her dear ones. Her glance wandered a moment, then fixed itself on a little locked ebony box, of quaint, antique workmanship. It had been her father's.

"Bring that," she said to Harry.

She gave it into the hands of Philip Dumoray. She spoke faintly and with difficulty.

"There are some papers," she said to the master.

The old doctor was beside her, dumb with a grief that not all his long years of professional training could control. The Presbyterian minister was there. He was very aged now, and trembling and shadow like. He was her faithful friend. For twenty years they two had been brave comrades in good works. Was he to be left alone now?

His wavering fingers stroked the long, shining hair as it lay loose across the pillow, they rested in benediction upon her dying head. Unconsciously he murmured the blessing of brave old John Bunyan:

"'The king whom you love and serve make you as your father, and bring you where he is in peace.' Amen!"

Shirley seemed to be thinking of something else. She spoke presently, but only those nearest her heard what she was saying. She was looking at Philip Dumoray. He listened intently:

"I have begun my poem. Won't you read what I have written, and tell me what you think of it to-morrow—when I am not so tired, Mr. Morrison?"

"She thinks you are Mr. Morrison," said Harry in a choking voice. "She had a teacher of that name once, long ago, and she was very much attached to him. Let her think so, Mr. Dumoray. It pleases her."

But he, the man who stood there with breaking heart, watching with an awful fear lest his last, fairest earthly hope drift away from him out upon the ocean of eternity—he knew better.

Her eyes turned once more to the sinking sun. Her lips moved again, but those about her heard no sound. The master bent lower, if haply he might catch a word. She seemed to be repeating something. He listened with tense ear. He heard her murmur a fragment of verse. He knew afterward that it was from her unfinished poem, the last two lines she had written.

Her last earthly thought seemed to be for the poem which was not written.

That faint, fluttering breath, was it indeed the last?

The master fell upon his knees and buried his face in the pillows beside her face. One mighty sob broke from him as if his heart was bursting. He lifted his head and said brokenly:

"Would God I had died for thee!"

Whatever might have been, was it never to be? Whatever she had borne so long in silence, of disappointed hope, of heartache, of pain and weariness, of sacrifice, yea, of martyrdom, was it over now?

CHAPTER XXV.

ADDENDUM.

After all Shirley did not die. Thank God for that!

The beautiful spirit touched the border, yes, even looked through the portal into the beyond. But the love and outstretched, clinging arms of hundreds of praying souls brought it back to earth again.

Shirley came back as one from the dead. In June, when the bluegrass on the lawn was brightest and the roses reveled in their richest bloom, she was married to Philip Dumoray. A long journey followed. They sailed to isles of far southern seas, to lands of palm trees and paradise birds, lands where it is always morning.

Shirley has not yet quite recovered. The break down of her strength was too complete. And the poem is not yet written. She speaks of it sometimes, and then the master says:

"Shirley, dear, your life is a poem. You or any other could have written none greater than that."

The master will pass into history as one of the great men of his day. He stands among men a knight without fear and without reproach. Wise through suffering, tolerant to all weakness but his own, strong as a lion, yet gentle and chivalrous and kindly to all mankind, tender and helpful to the weak, to women and to children—who is there like him?

In Robert Dumoray's house you will see a picture. It shows you a splendidly beautiful face, full of inspiration and power, with a look of unfathomable melancholy lingering in the eyes. They draw you with a strange, resistless magnetism, these dark gray eyes; they follow you and look into yours, whichever way you turn, like those of a portrait by the old Venetian. They haunt you forever. You would say it is an ideal head if you did not know.

It is the portrait of Shirley, the one Alice painted. Above the picture hangs a wreath of silver laurel leaves. It is the crown the Linwood villagers placed on the poet girl's head when she was 16.

There are signs of late though that the lost inspiration is returning. There are faint yet clear hints that into the new life which was given her from the grave itself will come dreams and visions sweeter, grander than any the old time knew. When these are fully revealed the poem will be written.

Then too, where she so nearly failed through her heroic unselfishness, others will win.

Even now it is not as though Shirley had never lived. Her thoughts are working in many brains, her strong, ringing words are shaping many a destiny. Yet again there will be brave women who succeed. The new revelation will be. The kingly woman of Shirley's fancy, strong and shining and free, the bringer of good tidings, the herald of the perfect day to the race, will yet be realized on earth. Doubt it not.

A SICKLY PERIOD.—An epidemic of measles of a malignant type, accompanied by bronchitis, is raging among the children and young persons of the village and vicinity, and scores of families have been visited. In some cases the disease has terminated fatally. Many instances might be given of two and three ailing ones of a household, in and one family in the village four of its members have been very ill, three of the members being over fifteen years of age Mr. Geo. Hawken and his wife have been brought into deep sorrow by the removal of both their children by the disease, one four and a half years of age, and the other one and half years. An infant has been taken from the home of Mr. R. J. Eley, another from Mr. P. Shapter's family, and yesterday morning a child of Mr. W. H. Ashton, a bright little boy, was taken away by inflammation of the lungs. The fifteen year old daughter of Rev. T. Walker has been very low with the measles, and it was feared she could not recover. Parents are taking the precaution to brevent the spread of the contagion, and to look more to the ailments of their children.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

War.

So far there has been no let up in the crusade against the untagged. The police are getting short range shots down fine. They can drop their prey on the run Thursday's record was 3 killed and none wounded. The burial cart followed in the wake and the carcasses were interred outside the town limits.

Dr. C. A. McRae,

One of Dr. Kergan's surgeons, will be at the Grand Central Hotel, Peterborough, on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, May 7th, 8th and 9th, where he can be consulted free on all private and chronic diseases. If unwell, avail yourself of this opportunity and consult Dr. C. A. McRae, who will give you a free, candid and careful opinion of your case.

Concert Company.

There is a probability of the Lansdowne Rowing Club succeeding in securing the great Listeman and Fanny Kellogg Concert Company, of Boston, for one grand vocal and instrumental concert. The Lansdowne Rowing club are negotiating with this concert company, who return to Winnipeg on the way to Boston during the month of July, where they were engaged by the Winnipeg Operatic Society for concerts. The manager of the company has agreed to stop on his way east on July 13th to give a concert at Peterborough under the auspices of the Rowing Club providing they can secure about three hundred tickets subscribed by May 25th. A subscription list will be opened at once for that purpose.

The Nicholls Hospital.

At the regular meeting of the Nicholls Hospital Board held on Thursday afternoon the proposal of building a new hospital was discussed by the members present. The position at present is this: Owing to the inability to comply with Government requirements, except at great cost, the hospital does not receive any aid from the Government. It is proposed that a new building be put up, complying with Governmental regulations, and that the present hospital and grounds be sold. Mrs. Nicholls has agreed to pay the difference, should there be any, between the cost of the new building and what is realized from the old, setting, of course, a limit on the amount of difference which she will pay. It is expected that this arrangement will make the hospital more commodious and efficient, and besides it will cost the Board less to run it.

PALATIAL.

Proposed Change in Hall, Innis & Co's Establishment.

Plans have been prepared showing the changes which Hall, Innis & Co., contemplate making in their present premises. The carrying out of the plans will produce a dry goods establishment, which for size and completeness will not be found in Canada outside of Montreal and Toronto.

The most noticable change will be the improvement in the front. The windows will be all remoddled, the first and second flats will be built almost altogether of plate glass, there being no fewer than twenty-two large sheets to be used besides those used in the doors. The third story will be raised considerable and an ornamented pediment with dentils, pannels and scrolls will crown the building.

The extension of the premises will consist in taking in the vacant store next to the Ontario Bank. This will be converted into a carpet department. The present drygoods and tailoring departments will be thrown into one. Shelving and counters will run around the walls, an elongated circular counter will stand in the centre of the spacious place, and the cutter's room and the office will be at the rear.

In the second flat the millinery department will occupy the most prominent place. That department and the ladies' parlor will be at the front, while a mantle department and a suite of fitting rooms will be to the rear. Between the fitting rooms and the ladies parlor the lavatory will be situated. A new department is to be added to the already copious list, that of dressmaking.

Among the conveniences which will be appreciated is the passenger elevator. This will be situated at the west part of the building and will ply between all the flats.

Tenders are to be asked for at once, and the work will be commenced without delay.

THE GOVERNMENT MAJORITY.

A Vote of Confidence—Majority of 43 with Conservatives Absent.

OTTAWA, May 5.—The Administration was sustained by a vote of 109 to 66 on the Deputy-Speakership. In a full House the majority would be still larger, as of the 40 votes required to make up the 215, a majority would be Conservative.

Peterborough Canoe Club.

The adjourned meeting of the members of the Peterborough Boating Club is to be held in the office of Messrs. Hatton & Wood at 5 o'clock this afternoon, when the organization of the Peterborough Canoe Club will be considered.

The Golden Eye.

The Golden Eye came up to the Little Lake to-day looking as bright as a new pin. During the winter she has been renovated from stem to stern and Commodore Calcutt says that she is now a better boat than ever. Regular trips will be commenced next week. Capt. McDonald, of Lindsay, will stand at the helm this season.

We May Expect.

—Some one to start a city incorporation campaign.

—Straw hats.

—A grand concert under the Lansdowne Rowing Club's auspices.

—The tender blades of grass to spread themselves and make the country emerald.

—The novice at the bike to sprawl himself and convince everybody that he is also emerald, somewhat.

—Circumspect ones to practice in the back yard.

—More moribund canines.

—Jubilee celebrations.

—Navigation.

—Court Peterborough, C. O. F., No. 29, to discuss the jubilee celebration at the meeting to-night.

Heavy Sentence for Libel.

QUEBEC, May 5.—Mr. Maguire, of the Mercury, was sentenced to a fine of $200 and six months imprisonment for libelling Major Langelier.

Execution in New York.

NEW YORK, May 5.—Peter Smith, the murderer of John Hannon, was hanged at the Tombs prison at 7.30 o'clock this morning. The procession arrived at the scaffold at 7.25 a. m., with Father O'Connor and Father Duranquet on either side of the prisoner. They knelt in prayer under the scaffold. At 7.27 o'clock Smith kissed the crucifix and the drop immediately fell. He died instantaneously.

Mr. Wiman's Scheme.

NEW YORK, May 5.—At a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce for the election of officers, held to day, an invitation was accepted from the President of the Canadian Club to attend a lecture by Hon. Benjamin Butterworth of Ohio on "Commercial Union between the United States and Canada," to be given on May 19. The announcement was received with cheers and other marks of evident interest.

Worse Than a Gatling.

WILMINGTON, N. C., May 5.—This morning six negro boys, from 13 to 17 years old, were at the wharf of the Wilmington Express preparing to go across Cape Fear River to shoot rice birds. One named Grant Best had borrowed a double-barrelled gun from a negro man which he says had no caps on. An accidental discharge of the weapon caused the death of four of the boys and badly hurt a fifth, Best alone escaping injury.

A Reception in New York.

NEW YORK, May 5.—The Municipal Council of the Irish National League held a meeting Tuesday night in the hall, corner of Eighteenth street and Fourth-avenue for the purpose of making arrangements for the reception of Wm. O'Brien next Sunday morning. After considerable discussion it was agreed to meet again at the Hoffman House and hold a conference with the Hoffman House Committee of the Irish Parliamentary Fund.

THE MARKET REPORTS.

Visible Supply.

The visible supply of wheat is not being reduced as rapidly as was expected. The stock in Canada and the United States is now 47,313,476 bushels, which is 4,064,000 more than was in stock at this time last year. Large clearances at Atlantic ports are expected during the next few weeks, however.

Cheese.

The Montreal Gazette has reckoned up the amount of cheese shipped from America in 1886, and compares it with that shipped in 1885. The Gazette finds that there has been a large falling off in the exports. Its figures, representing the number of pounds shipped, are as follows:—

	1885-6.	1886-7.
New York	79,651,767	69,034,158
Montreal	70,776,186	58,873,610
Boston	3,000,000	9,560,000
Total	156,427,953	136,467,768

English Requirements.

It is computed that the wheat crop of England, Ireland and Scotland for 1886 is 63,347,885 bushels, against 79,635,769 for 1885, and a still larger amount for 1884. Deducting the customary 6,000,000 bushels for seed the amount left for consumption is 57,347,885. The average consumption is about 208,000,000 bushels, so that about 150,760,000 will need to be imported to supply the demand. Out of this 90,000,000 or over have already been imported and 14,720,000 bushels are now on the ocean bound for European ports. Allowing ten per cent. for diversion of this amount to the Continent Britain will have imported 104,000,000 bushels in round numbers. Thus over 40,000,000 bushels is still wanted which will be supplied largely by America.

Live Stock.

There has been little change of a substantial character in the British live stock trade, which has remained steady, although according to our special cables of to-day's date the feeling seems to have improved compared with a week ago. Receipts from all quarters have been somewhat larger, reaching fair proportions, but there has been no surplus of consequence as the demand has been fair. At Liverpool to-day there was a steady trade at unchanged prices. Prime steers went at 11c., good to choice at 10¾c., poor to medium at 9½c and inferior and bulls at 7 @8¾c. London cables report that owing to the bad condition of refrigerated beef, hindquarters have advanced to 3s 8d, with forequarters at 2s 4d per 8 lbs. by the carcass. —Montreal Gazette.

HOW PETERBOROUGH LOST ANOTHER BUSINESS HOUSE.

To the Editor of the Review.

DEAR SIR,—Some three weeks ago I arrived in Peterborough, fully prepared to open a Dry Goods store in your enterprising town, but, after looking the field over, I was convinced that it would be suicidal for me to embark in trade in a place where there is a business house so disgustingly aggressive and so lost to the interests of other houses as one you have located in your town. It is with surprise and chagrin that I notice that this particular house is steadily increasing its number of customers day by day, by employing methods that would make it very uncomfortable for me, if I were in business here, just as it does now for competing establishments who are striving to combat the evil.

I refer to J. C. Turnbull, George and Simcoe street, who sells a good Black Worsted, or a Scotch Tweed suit for $16, worth $20 in any other town or city. Fine unlaundried white shirts, from 35c to 50c., worth from 50c to 75c. All-Wool Tweeds at 40c, worth 50c. Fine Prints 9½c, worth 12½c. This is no place for me.

Yours in sorrow,
H. I. PRICE.

FATAL RAILWAY DISASTER.

An Intercolonial Express Wrecked by a Snowslide.

MONCTON, N. B., May 5.—To-day's express from Quebec was five hours behind time. The delay was caused by a fatal snowslide three miles west of Trois Pistoles. The west-bound accommodation struck an avalanche which had dropped on the track from a high bank in a clay cutting, and both engines and the four first-class cars ran off the track and piled in a heap of ruin. The fireman of one of the engines named Pierre Levasgeur was killed, and a brakeman named Alfred Lavard was so badly scalded that he died in a short time. The two engine-drivers and one of the firemen crawled out from the wreck with scarcely any injury. Their escape is simply miraculous. Mr. McDonald, the superintendent, was on board, and immediately sent for medical aid and for the auxiliary cars of St. Flavie and River du Loup. Owing to the awkward position of the wreck between two banks fifty or sixty feet high, leaving no place to dump the debris, the clearing of the line was a difficult manner. The accident was one which it was impossible to foresee, nothing of the kind having been known to happen before. The bank that fell is an enormous one, and is composed of snow as hard and heavy as clay.

COLONIES AND EMPIRE

The Lord Mayor's Banquet to the Colonial Delegates.

LONDON, May 5.—The Lord Mayor, Sir Reginald Hanson, entertained the Colonial delegates in the Mansion House last night. Sir Henry Holland, President of the Conference, said that the Conference had been successful, in actual work, in the practical outcome, and in the general results which would flow from that work. They had arrived at important decisions on questions affecting the material unity of the Empire, and others, pointing in the same direction, had been fully discussed in the hope of arriving at a speedy decision. Formerly the impression prevailed that the Colonial Secretary was a kind of Downing street demon, placed in office to thwart all the wishes and aspirations of the colonies; but this impression, like the belief in other ghosts and bogies, had disappeared, and the Colonial Secretary was found to be a very common creature of flesh and blood. In himself the colonists had one who thoroughly and heartily sympathized with their interests, and who desired, consistent with Imperial interests, to meet colonial aspirations.

Sir Alexander Campbell said there never was a body presided over with more patience, energy and success than the conference under Sir Henry Holland. He had dealt with the many subjects Canada had maintained before the delegates with the greatest courtesy, and he and his colleagues generally are admitting the reputation she had striven to maintain for some years for desiring to procure by her own exertions what was due to herself. The delegates now had a better knowledge of the colonies than ever before.

Mr. Deakin, chief secretary of Victoria, testified to the success of the Conference.

Lord Rosebery, referring to Imperial federation, said he could not now detail the scheme for the representation of the colonies in the House of Lords. It had never been suggested that they should be represented in the House of Commons. He was afraid that, coming free from the colonies, the members might be corrupted by their connection with the Commons, but in the House of Lords ample opportunities would be afforded to them for discussing colonial questions without the attendant dangers of the House of Commons. Regarding the colonies as Imperial, and not of merely local interest, their present position and future policy would be found in the direction of union with the Mother Country rather than independence.

Mr. Peel, Speaker of the House of Commons, said he believed the colonists would resent any assault on their independence. The colonists had done us the honor of imitating us in many things, and it was almost touching to see small details of the forms of procedure of the House of Commons reproduced in the distant positions of Her Majesty's Empire. We gloried in the growth of the colonies, we rejoiced in their greatness, grew young again in the spectacle of their youth, and saw with a deep-felt satisfaction, our mighty offspring carrying the instincts and bearing the traditions of the Mother Country into the remotest corners of the earth.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC
FROM
J. J. SHEEHY

I beg to say that contrary to announcements which appeared in the Peterborough papers for the past two months, I DO NOT intend to remove to T. Dolan & Co's Dry Goods Store, nor have I any connections whatever with that establishment. The final arrangements not being satisfactory to me, I withdrew from the projected change, and intend carrying on the Dry Goods business in my usual stand next to Lech's Hat Store.

It is my intention in the future as in the past to show at all seasons nothing but new and fresh goods in the various lines of Dry Goods and Gent's Furnishings; and by doing so, hope to retain the confidence which I am proud to say, I have enjoyed from the public since commencing business two years ago.

Mr. Morgan's Princely Gift.

NEW YORK, May 6.—The Tribune's London special says: Mr. J. S. Morgan, the American banker, who offered Gay's Hospital $50,000 on condition that $150,000 more was subscribed by May 1, has cancelled the condition and given the money outright. The President and governors of the Hospital acknowledged yesterday with gratitude what they well call the princely gift.

Attack Upon Sara Bernhardt.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., May 6.—A sensation was created at the Hennepin Avenue M. E. Church yesterday, by the Rev. Sam Small's bitter attack on Mlle. Sara Bernhardt. He said that common decency should keep everybody away from the Opera House from seeing a woman whose only notoriety was filthiness and who flaunts the spirit of infamy in the faces of decent people. The revivalist's diatribe does not prevent Bernhardt from having enormous houses.

Revolutionists Executed.

GUAYAMAS, Mex., May 6.—At sunrise, yesterday, Colonel Arvizu, Lieut. Gniterez and Louis Bencon were executed according to sentence. The men faced death bravely, all refusing at first to have their eyes bandaged, but finally, on the appeal of Colonel Yarruli, the men allowed themselves to be blindfolded. A volley was then fired at the condemned men, and the examining surgeon a few minutes later pronounced all dead.

May Crop Prospects.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 6.—The American Rural Home special crop reports the oat crop has made a fair stand, and is doing as well as could be expected. The spring wheat outlook is good. There is no improvement in the condition of winter wheat. The Western Mississippi River region has a tendency to the development of insect life. The corn crop is practically all planted, with a show of smaller acreage than usual. In the hog districts there is still great dread of hog cholera. Stock of all kind is coming out of winter quarters in excellent condition.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT

FIRST SESSION OF THE SIXTH CANADIAN PARLIAMENT.

A Good Majority on a Test Vote—The C. P. R. Mail Route—Blue Books—Money Warrants.

THURSDAY, May 5.—Some minor bills were advanced a stage.

SOUTH VICTORIA.

Mr. HUDSPETH was introduced by Sir John Macdonald and the Hon. Thos. White, and was received with cheers.

C. P. R. MAIL ROUTE.

Sir JOHN MACDONALD, in reply to Mr. Edgar, said that it had been proposed to the British Government to give a subsidy of £60,000 to the Pacific mail service if Canada gave a quarter of that amount. The offer was being considered.

PROTECTION OF WOMEN.

Mr. CHARLTON'S bill for the protection of women was considered in Committee.

Sir R. CARTWRIGHT thought a lad of 18 might require protection from a woman of 21 as likely as the reverse.

Mr. CHARLTON consented to make the age limit 21 for both sexes, and the bill so amended was reported.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S WARRANTS.

Mr. WELDON (St. John) resumed the debate on Governor-General's warrants, defended the Mackenzie Admidistration, yet condemned the system.

Mr. FOSTER showed the hypocrisy of the Opposition from their own practice.

Mr. MITCHELL was opposed to both Administrations and thought both did wrong.

After some further discussion the return was ordered.

DISCHARGE OF INSOLVENTS.

Mr. EDGAR moved the second reading of his bill for the discharge of insolvents, as he thought it unfair to keep them bound and that it encouraged fraud.

Mr. JONES thought this conrse should only be exceptional and not made permanent.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant) said an honest insolvent could new get a discharge from his creditors and that the change was not required.

Mr. SPROULE believed the business community was in favor of the step.

Mr. BEAUSOLEIL supported the measure [illegible] amendments were made.

Mr. BECHARD opposed it and repudiated the idea that the farmers wanted to be included in it. The great majority of insolvents were not honest.

Mr. CASEY and Mr. WHITE (Renfrew) supported the bill.

Messrs. CURRAN, KENNY, DUPONT and HESSON opposed it.

It was referred to the Committee on Banking and Commerce with the understanding that the principle was not conceded.

THE WARRANTS.

Sir R. CARTWRIGHT moved for a return of expenditures under Governor-General's warrants.

Sir C. TUPPER willingly consented.

WELLAND CANAL BRIDGE.

Mr. BLAKE objected to a change in a bridge at Welland over the canal and asked for papers.

Mr. POPE says the change was necessitated by the canal improvements and that the order for the removal was made in 1879 when the gentlemen opposite were in power.

BLUE BOOKS.

Mr. CHARLTON moved to abandon the practice of reserving blue books till the opening of Parliament.

Sir JOHN MACDONALD consented and said that he found no legislation would be necessary.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER.

Mr. FISHER moved to abolish the office of Deputy Speaker which he held to be unnecessary.

Sir JOHN MACDONALD said Parliament had come to a different conclusion. In the Imperial and Colonial Parliaments such an office had been found expedient. He would propose a Deputy Speaker to-morrow and he called upon the House to vote down Mr. Fisher's motion.

The motion was put and rejected by 109 to 66, a ministerial majority of 43 with 40 votes, the greater part Conservatives, not recorded. The following is the list:—

THE COLONIAL DELEGATES.

An Effort to Induce Them to Pass Through the United States.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 6.—Messrs. Thomas Cook & Sons cabled last week from London to Messrs. J. D. Spreckels & Bros., of this city, stating that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company had offered free transportation over its lines to delegates to the Colonial Conference, now sitting in London, and asking what the Oceanic Steamship Co., of which they are owners, would do in the matter of reducing rates from San Francisco to Sidney. The Canadian Pacific, it is said, hopes to obtain the mail contract now held by the Oceanic Company, when it expires next year. Mr. Spreckels is desirous of maintaining the service via San Francisco, also of continuing the commercial relations that exist between the United States and the Colonies, he therefore endeavored to obtain assistance from the United States railways to induce the gentlemen now in England to return to their homes through the United States. Owing to the Inter-State Commerce law Mr. Spreckels will have to take them through the United States at his own expense, and yesterday cabled offering the delegates free passage from New York to Sydney if they should decide to travel through the United States in preference to Canada. Mr. Spreckels will arrange to meet the delegates in New York and accompany them across the continent.

DILLON AND THE "TIMES."

A Committee of the House Denied the Nationalists.

LONDON, May 6.—The debate was resumed in the House of Commons this evening on Mr. Gladstone's motion to appoint a committee to enquire into the Times' charges against Mr. Dillon.

Mr. Healy said every possible question seemed worthy of enquiry by the House except a question affecting the character of its members. The Parnellites did not care whether they got this enquiry or not, but if the Government majority refused this inquiry the name of British gentlemen would be placed on a level with that of the Indian thug. The Parnellites challenged the Tories to combat at once on this question. They would stand on no technical reference, but would meet any charges brought against them. From the decision of the majority of the House the Parnellites would appeal to the people on this side and to other nations. The Irish people never sent them there to beg favors but to demand their rights.

Major Saunderson said he did not wonder that Mr. Gladstone tried to whitewash his Irish friends who were now supplying his policy. He challenged Dillon to disprove the Times' evidence.

Mr. Dilon: "I have offered to enter into the charges fully before a committee. I shall no longer exchange the lie with members of the House over them." (Cheers.)

Henry Fowler (Lib.) said the Parnellites did not desire to limit the inquiry. He had a telegram from Mr. Parnell stating that he was quite willing to extend the inquiry so as to include the forged letter published by the Times. (Cheers.)

Mr. Gladstone's motion was rejected by a vote of 317 to 233, and Sir Edward Clarke's motion, that the House decline to treat the Times' publication as a breach of privilege, was agreed to.

A Canadian Murdered.

AMHERSTBURG, Ont., May 5.—On January 25 last was published a despatch from Baltimore, Md., stating that a sailor named Thomas Mowell, of Detroit, had been murdered on board the schooner Walter C. McGeely, by John Dix, the master, and Robert L. Redding, sailor. The despatch described the man as weighing 216 pounds. It is now thought that the murdered man was Thomas Morvell, of Texas Landing, near this place. Morvell was mate on the steam barge D. M. Wuson at the close of navigation last fall and left Amherstburg in November, since which time he has not been heard from. Morvell weighed 216 pounds.

A National Library.

If Canadian literature is to take its place in future history among the literatures of the world, it is the highest importance that such works as have already been produced by our own writers should be preserved. It is the rule in many European countries that copies of all new books be sent to some central national library, such as the British Museum or Bibliotheque Nationale. As to the aid which such collections of national literature must be to authors and students, no discussion is necessary. There is so much excellent general literature produced all over the world at the present day that cosmopolitanism in reading is apt to crush out the desire of maintaining a national independence in this respect. Would it not be well that compulsory care be taken of the Canadian books published from year to year? They may now be regarded as ephemeral, but in years to come, when this great Dominion shall have accomplished her destiny by becoming a great nation, such a collection of literature would be of inestimable value.—Arcturus.

NEWS NOTES.

Navigation was opened on Lake Champlain on Thursday.

A despatch from Rangoon says a cyclone has done much damage to the shipping there.

Grand Trunk railway stocks fell in London on Thursday from a half to one and a quarter.

The colonial delegates will address a meeting to be held in the London Mansion House on Monday on the question of British trade with the colonies.

The traffic receipts of the Canadian Pacific railway for the week ending April 30th were $251,000, a decrease of $39,000 compared with the corresponding week last year.

Mr. Wm. O'Brien's paper, United Ireland, says only a fool or an enemy of the Irish party would recommend the Parnellites to legally prosecute their slanderers.

Mr. Samuel Platt, ex-M.P. for East Toronto, died suddenly from heart disease at his residence in Toronto. Mr. Platt only returned from Bermuda on Tuesday, and was at his office on Wednesday in good health.

LATEST CABLE NEWS

EVICTIONS.

DUBLIN, May 6.—Since Monday last policemen, emergency-men and sub-sheriffs to the number of 300 altogether, have been evicting 35 families, comprising 125 persons, on Lord Granard's estate in Longford. The Earl of Granard is an Irish, East-British baron, whose wife was a great heiress.

HINT FOR BISMARCK.

PARIS, May 6.—Le Paris states that France has concluded a defensive alliance with certain other powers, and that henceforth France will not be alone in the event of aggression against her.

A TRANSIENT COALITION.

It must be manifest to every one who reads the debates of the Legislative Assembly that the great majority of the members on both sides of the House are speaking any acting only with reference to the effects on their constituents at the next elections. The House is pretty evenly divided, and the Government, which is but a coalition one, is only united on a sort of compromise policy, which may prove impracticable on some occasion, in which case there would probably be a split with the result of a defeat of the Government. An early appeal to the people of the Province is therefore probable, and both parties are preparing for it.—Montreal Witness (Reform.)

MR. PARNELL WANTED.

LONDON, May 6.—Messages have been sent to Mr. Parnell urging him to attend the meeting of the House of Commons to-night.

THE NEW HEBRIDIES.

LONDON, May 6.—Sir Henry Holland's proposals in the Colonial Conference regarding the New Hebridies has created a furore among the colonial delegates, who denounce it in unmeasured terms.

THE "TIMES" CHARGES.

LONDON, May 6.—It is stated in London that Mr. Parnell has consented to include the Times letter among the other charges to be considered in committee.

WASTE OF TIME DEPLORED.

LONDON, May 5.—The Standard, commenting on the debate in the House of Commons, deplores the waste of time, to no purpose, for which both sides are alike blamable. The Government, it says, has made a serious mistake in withholding from the Nationalists the chance they profess to be willing to utilize to purge themselves of suspicion.

THE PARIS MOB.

LONDON, May 6.—A Paris despatch to the Standard says: On Wednesday, [illegible] marched down the Rue Royal, shouting "A Berlin." The mob moved rapidly across the Place de la concorde, evidently intending to reach the German Embassy. The police charged upon them and dispersed the crowd, which soon reformed, however, and started for the Elysee. Another charge was made by the police, and the mob scattered in all directions. Some papers deprecate the withdrawal of "Lohengrin." The Liberte says the rioters are a disgrace to France, and a hishonor to Paris. The National demonstration merits contempt rather than anger. Such patriotism is false and disastrous to art. The Lanterne urges the Government to discover who paid the organizers of the riot. It regrets, however, that the Government allowed the production of "Lohengrin" so soon after the Schnaebeles affair.

YOUTHS ARRESTED.

PARIS, May 6.—The Government, having learned that the Strasburg statue was to be the rendezous for students, patriots and Bonapartists, had strong guards of police stationed in the vicinity last night, in anticipation of anti German manifestations. Guards were also placed around the German Embassy, the outer portal of which was kept closed, the attaches of the embassy having professed to feel alarm. Several arrests were made. The prisoners are almost all youths under twenty years of age. The new papers with insignificant exceptions, condemned the outcry against Wagner, and blame the police for their weakness in failing to stop the proceedings of the rioters.

RETURNED TO THE FOLD.

LONDON, May 6.—The following Unionists voted with the minority on Sir Edward Clarke's amendment in the House of Commons yesterday: T. R. Buchanan, member for West Edinburg, Sir Thomas F. Grove, Wilton division of Wiltshire, A. B. Winterbotham, Cirencester division of Gloucestershire, Christopher Talbot, Glamorganshire and Sir Henry Vivian, Swansea. These five members are now classed by the Government whips as Gladstonians. Mr. John Bright was absent. Lord Hartington voted with the majority.

ITALY'S EASTERN INTERESTS.

ROME, May 6.—In the Chamber of Deputies yesterday Signor Dezerbi gave notice that he would question the government respecting the action of the Spanish government in authorizing the formation of a coaling station on the Red sea. The Italian authorities have asked Spain for an explanation. It is believed the site chosen belongs to Italy.

SEVEN PASSENGERS MISSING.

PARIS, May 6.—The collision between the steamer Asie, plying from Barcelona to Marseillee, and the steamer Agaedio, which resulted in the sinking of the former vessel yesterday, is attributed to the fog which prevailed. One seaman and seven passengers belonging to the Asie are missing.

THE NEW HEBRIDES AFFAIR.

LONDON, May 6.—Sir Henry Holland, Secretary of State for the Colonies, announced in the Colonial Conference here on April 27 that the Government hoped to arrange with France for a joint naval commission for the government of the New Hebrides. The commission, it was stated, would have power to protect the settlers, traders and missionaries, and would also be empowered to land marines to punish the natives for committing outrages and to maintain order, the marines, however, to be withdrawn when the special work for which they landed was accomplished. If the scheme proposed was accepted by France it was to be arranged that the French garrisons now occupying the chief harbors of the New Hebrides should retire.

AN ALLEGED UNIONIST SPLIT.

LONDON, May 6.—Besides the five Liberal Unionists who voted against the Government in their division, in the House of Commons, yesterday, on Sir Edward's Clarke's amendment that the House decline to treat the Times' publication as a breach of privilege, twenty-seven Liberal-Unionists were absent. The action of these Liberal-Unionists is regarded as a further indication that the split in the Unionist ranks is growing.

The Daily Review.

SATURDAY, MAY 7, 1887.

FISHERY PRESERVATION.

WHATEVER arrangements may be made as to our fisheries, there is one matter which should be borne in mind and upon which action should be taken. There is an instructive lesson in the fact that the eagerness of the New England fishermen to pursue their avocation in our water arises mainly from the havoc they have wrought in their own fisheries by their reckless and improvident methods. Such laws and regulations should be made and strictly enforced as will preserve our fisheries from a similar fate, either at the hand of foreigners, if they are admitted, or of our own people, so that one of the most important industries of the Dominion may not be destroyed. Canadian fishermen should not object to such rules as may be necessary to preserve the fisheries from deterioration, and certainly foreign fishermen, if allowed to enjoy our property, should neither wish nor be permitted to set at naught regulations equally binding upon our own people. It would be as well to make any necessary amendments in the law at once, before there is any arrangement to admit foreign fishermen, who could not then look upon any restrictions as being aimed specially at them. Indeed, if by any compensating privileges granted to us, the United States should acquire an interest in our fisheries, they should gladly aid in enforcing regulations for the common good. In the past however, their fishermen have more than once shown that they held themselves free to disregard Canadian laws binding upon our own people. This certainly should not be tolerated.

It may seem to some that the supply of fish is practically inexhaustible, or at least that is not a question that need not concern the present generation. The history of our neighbors should warn us of the danger of such security, proving that fisheries may be soon deteriorated unless properly preserved. The protection, too, should be afforded not only to the fish caught for food, but equally to the smaller fish, which are classed under the name of "bait," a nomenclature which blinds many to the bearing of one important branch of the subject. The diminution of the food of the more valuable fish would be as prejudicial as the destruction of these fish themselves.

Neither should we lose sight of the fact that there are fisheries on the Pacific as well as the Atlantic coast, even if they have not been so fully developed. Any arrangements that are made should contemplate this fact, and as to the question of preservation the United States authorities are there more alive to the common interest. Indeed, as regards the seal fishery they have manifested their desire for protection in a manner so peremptory that they had to retreat from the position they had assumed.

Then there are the Hudson Bay waters which ought to be taken into consideration, for they are of great and growing value. The whole question should be dealt with at the same time.

MR. MILLS' HURT DIGNITY.

THE London Advertiser says:—

"The Peterborough REVIEW defends Mr. Pope, the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, on the ground, as alleged, that he did the gazetting trick in 1874."

In the first place we have not thought of defending Mr. Pope, who probably is quite able to defend himself, if he is attacked in a more serious shape than that of vilification by certain Reform members, whose self-conceit has received a shock by their not having been given a foremost place. Secondly, we have never alleged that Mr. Pope committed any trick in 1874, or at any other time. We leave to the Advertiser such dirty practices as fraudulently altering the record, as it did in regard to both Peterborough and Victoria, in order to bring a false charge against an honorable official. We mentioned the fact of Reformers being gazetted early under the Reform Administration in 1874, to show the absurdity of Mr. Mills assuming that there was any corrupt arrangement as to the gazett- in 1887. If Mr. Mills objects to the practice, he should advocate its change whether his friends or opponents are in power. If he takes that position we can fully concur with him. But we cannot oblige either the Advertiser or Mr. Mills by joining in vilifying a gentleman far more honorable than his accusers. When he publishes falsified lists upon which to found an attack upon an adversary, as they did, he may bring himself down to their level.

THE division on the Deputy Speakership, the first regular vote of confidence this session, shows the utter absurdity of the claim of Mr. Blake's friends that he had prevented Sir John Macdonald and his colleagues from obtaining a working majority. In itself a majority of 43 is amply sufficient to sustain an Administration in a House of 215, and with every vote recorded the majority would be larger. Every Province and Territory with the exception of little Prince Edward Island pronounced in favor of the Government and against the ambition of Mr. Blake and his lieutenants

Wonderful value, think of it, 27 inch white twilled sheeting, 22½ cents, 72 inch twilled unbleached sheeting 20 cent, and 1¼ white quilts 75 cents, at Sheppard's.

The English Board of Trade returns for April show that the emigration from Great Britain reaches the enormous total of 56,955, against 40,719 last year, and of that number 7,312 went to British North America compared with 3,963 in 1886.

MR. MOWAT'S BLUNDER.

The Whig objected to the appointment of Mr. Fred. Mowat, son of the Hon. O. Mowat, to the shrievalty of Toronto. It took this position because the appointment was certain to injure those who made it. The liberal party had vigorously protested against the practices of the tory leaders in filling public offices with relatives of every sort, and for a liberal leader to do likewise was to make wreck of one's professions and forever close the party's mouth upon the subject of nepotism. And lest it should appear that the Whig, as a liberal journal, is exceptional in the opinions it expresses, we append the editorial comments of the Ottawa Free Press, whose loyalty to the Mowat government no one dare question who is aware of the strain that was put upon it by the Coffee appointment:

"It appointing Premier Mowat's son to the Toronto shrievalty the Ontario government has committed a grave blunder. It is no doubt true that Mr. Mowat, jr., is well qualified to fill the office to which he had been appointed, and that the public interest will not suffer. It is also true that Premier Mowat has rendered great service to his province, and that the proposal to make his son a sheriff did not come from himself but from the Reform member for Toronto and the party leaders in that city. It is also true that almost every one of the members of the tory dominion government has been providing for his sons, brothers, nephews, uncles, son-in-laws and other relatives with lucrative offices, but still the provincial government should have had better judgment than to afford any foundation for a charge of neptoism against Mr. Mowat; or for degrading him to the level of the Langevins, Popes, Costigans, McLelans, Carons and Chapleaus. As might have been expected, the tory organs which urged that Mr. Mowat's son should be made sheriff now assail the Ontario government for making the appointment. No doubt these organs feel a sort of satanic triumph in being able to charge Mr. Mowat with nepotism."

And by the way, was the appointment not hurriedly made? A deputation waits upon the attorney-general in the morning, and urges it; he says he will not interfere with the actions of his colleagues and to them the question is referred. In the afternoon there is a cabinet meeting, attended by just two others besides Hon. O. Mowat, and these make Mr. Fred. Mowat sheriff of Toronto, and order the publicity of the fact. In contrast with all this haste is the action of the government with regard to other appointments. Still more, men deserving of the government's favor have had a difficulty in getting their claims fairly understood, and even then they don't count for much if they are not among the sisters and the cousins and the aunts of members of the government. If Mr. F. Mowat were not a relative of the premier less would have been heard about his usefulness to the party.—Kingston Whig (Reform.)

Montague speaks of "reposing upon the pillow of a doubt." Better repose upon the certainty that Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" will cure all chronic female diseases with their attendant pains and weaknesses.

DEAR SIR,—Your "Favorite Prescription" has worked wonders in my case. It gave immediate relief.
MRS. M. GLEASON, Nunica, Ottawa Co., Mich.

BOBCAYGEON.

LITTLE BOB.—The Little Bob Mill on Saturday fractured a shaft, and one of the gates have been thrown out of work. By an ingenious arrangement of shafting, the power of the various wheels can be used separately or combined. The work was cleverly performed and is found to be a great improvement. Mr. W. Hickey, who has been mill-wright for several years, is about leaving, much to the regret of his numerous friends. Mr. Hickey is a good citizen, a thorough mechanic, a genial companion and above all he can twirl a stane with any spalpeen that ever wore a bonnet.

PERCHERON.—Mr. Boyd has given another evidence of his interest in agriculture, by the purchase of a thoroughbred Percheron horse. Clovis, that is the horse's name, is no slouch, when Clovis steps around he does so with the obvious knowledge that he comes from the old country, and wants the blooming natives to make a note of it. He is a dark grey 16½ hands high and weighs 1800 lbs. There are no onion tops about him, his blood is of the pure quill without a plebian trace. In June last he stood third at the Great National Concourse, of France, in a class of fifty-two three year olds, and was afterwards purchased for importation to America, for $2,600. His present residence is at the Little Bob stables, and the farmers should take an opportunity of seeing him.

LIGHT HOUSE.—The opening of Sturgeon Lake brought disaster to the light house at the mouth of Scugog. Usually the ice blows down to this end of the Lake when opening, but this year, the wind of Friday drove an immense field of ice down on to the Light House, swept it off and carried it several hundred yards away. The sight of the ice driving on to the drowned land is said to have been terrific. Great sticks of timber thirty feet and more in length were upended, and broken like pipe stems. The old stumps and stubs were torn out, and the ice piled into magnificent confusion. The Light House will have to be replaced, as the clearing of the stumps makes it more neccessary than ever. Some others might also be built, one at the entrance to the Cut, and another above Mr. Petrie's Mill.—Independent.

Astonishing Success

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive at least to try one bottle, as 70,000 dozen bottes were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about it Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers, in the United States and Canada. d90

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills, Salts, &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists.

DYEING!

WANT OF CONFORMITY TO CHRIST.

Oft through my mind there flashes
The thought, how is it we Who've named the name of Jesus
Should so unlike Him be?
Great teachers, imitators
Among their followers find,
Saints manifest Christ's likeness
As they possess His mind.

If we are Christ's should earthly
Allurements prove so sweet,
Should we not find our purest
Joys where His followers meet?
No wonder we our Saviour's
Love little realize,
When with the world that hated
Him we so compromise.

We know the soul's true value
By its redemption cost,
Then why are we so idle
In the midst of sinners lost?
Why do we act as dreamers
Or those but half awake?
When for ourselves and others,
Eternity's at stake.

If love supreme to Jesus
Our mind and will controls,
Will there not be His yearning
Compassion for lost souls?
Christ-like self-surrender,
And willingness to bear
The burden of the weary
Our unobtrusive care?

Why are we so enamor'd
With treasures that decay?
That tangle and impede us
Upon our heaven-ward way?
That bind to earth and hinder
Our soaring to the skies,
And when we should be gazing
On God, bedims our eyes.

Do we like Christ as pilgrims
Ourselves on earth confess,
And seek by separation
The path of holiness?
Like Enoch walking closely
With God, the world will know
Us less, as we Diviner
Companionship will show.

Partakers of Christ's glory
In heaven we hope to be,
Alas to suffer with Him
On earth how loath are we.
We talk with glowing rapture
Of when He shall appear,
Are we as those that hasten
That glorious time anear?

As heirs of bliss immortal
Should not its prospects bright,
To higher contemplation
Of sacred things invite?
As those whose mein betokens
The varied landscape scanned,
Scenes yet beyond our aspect
Should be Immanuel's Land.

CANAL TRAFFIC.

A Good Precedent for the Trent Valley Canal—Railways Outdone.

The following extract from the Albany (N. Y.) Journal, presents a very strong argument in favor of pushing forward the completion of the Trent Valley Navigation. If the Erie Canal, a mere ditch, with insufficient water on the high level and easily injured bank which will not permit speedy navigation, can take into New York more grain than all the vast network of railways centreing in that port, what may not our magnificient waterway be expected to do for Canada? The Albany Journal, which is well informed on such matters, says:—

"The opponents of the Erie Canal and its improvement have so persistently maintained that the canal has been superseded and no longer plays an important part in the transportation of the country that many persons have doubtless accepted the statement as the truth. The New York board of trade and transportation, which is doing much to promote the improvement of the canal, has set to work to correct this misapprehension, and the statistics it presents are worth careful study.

During the seven months of 1886 in which the canal was open 43,619,355 bushels of grain reached New York from the canal, while during the same period only 31,986,766 bushels were received by rail. The entire receipts for this period for the three years, 1884-5-6, were 110,550,453 by canal and 92,440,154 by rail. The receipts by rail for the entire year 1885 were 65,500,000 in round numbers and for 1886 were 59,200,000, showing a falling off of 6,400,000, while the receipts by canal rose from 29,926 879 to 43,995,885. It was the Erie Canal thus that maintained the volume of New York's grain business. The receipts by canal for 1886 at New York were, as has been said, 44,000,000, while the total receipts at Baltimore were 29,400,000, at Boston 19,900,000 and at Philadelphia 17,200,000.

The Erie Canal thus gives to New York city, in part at least, its prominence as the commercial centre of the country. The prosperity of New York city means prosperity for the whole state. The greater its volume of business the greater the opportunities for lucrative employment for labor and for profitable investment of capital."

The members of the Colonial Conference will be present next Wednesday at the meeting of the colonization Committee of both Houses, which will be provided over by Mr. William H. Houldsworth, the senior member of Parliament for Manchester.

Industrial Education of Children.

Industrial education is the foundation, and until it has, in its broadest and deepest sense, become the portion of every child born on American soil, that child has missed its birthright. With the many who accept it, it stands merely as an added capacity to make money, and if taken in its narrowest application this is all that it can do. Were this all, it would simply be an added impulse toward the degeneration that money making for the mere sake of money inevitably brings. But at its best, perfected as it has been by patient effort on the part of a few believers, it is far more than this. Added power to earn comes with it, but there comes also a love of the work itself, such as has had no place since the days when the great guilds gave joyfully their few hours daily to the cathedrals whose stones were laid and cemented in love and hope and a knowledge of the beauty to come, that long ago died out of any work the present knows.

The builders had small book knowledge. They could be talked down by any public school child in the second or third year. But they knew the meaning of beauty and order and law, and this trinity stands to-day and will stand for many a generation to come as an ideal to which we must return, till like causes work again to like ends. The child who could barely read saw beauty on every side, and took in the store of ballad and tradition that gave life to labor. We have parted with all this willfully. To the Puritan all beauty that hand of man could create was of the devil, and thus we represent a consecrated ugliness, any departure from which is even now by some conscientious souls regarded with suspicion.—Helen Campbell.

The Food of "Our Daddies."

"Throw away your cigarettes and eat a good bowl of mush and milk for your breakfast," said the learned doctor, "and you will not need any medicine. Indian corn is essentially an American institution. As the staple food of 'our daddies' it can really be said to have helped to lay the foundation of this great republic. With its product, the hog, it was in the not very remote past the sole food supply of the rural districts, and the dishes that can be prepared from its various forms are of much greater variety than can be prepared from wheat. Like Sambo's rabbit, it is good to roast, to bake or to boil, and can be fermented and turned into whisky, but its stimulating qualities are best procured by making it into a mush. It contains a large amount of nitrogen, has qualities anti-constipating and is easily assimilated. Though originally the poor man's food, it has come to be the rich man's luxury. It is cheap and has great nutritive properties. A course of Indian meal in the shape of johnny cake, hoe cake, corn or pone bread and mush, relieved by copious draughts of pure cows' milk, to which, if inclined to dyspepsia, a little lime water may be added, will make a life now a [illegible] and [illegible] no other treatment to correct your nervousness, brighten your vision and give you sweet and peaceful sleep."—New York Mail and Express.

Beecher's Habits of Labor.

Mr. Beecher's powers of work have been frequently spoken of. Maj. Beecher was saying the other day that he thought them at times unlimited. "Just look at what he did this last year," the major added. "A man of 73, he preached and lectured eighty-three times in the three months he was in England, and then returned to resume his work here without a break. He has preached here twice a week since, and lectured on Fridays and made many public addresses."

Though methodical in his habits of labor he could never work when he did not feel in the humor for it. "I can't work unless the sap flows," was his common remark when urged to finish the "Life of Christ." His correspondence was immense. If away for a few days his table would be covered with letters from all over the world. He was punctual in replying to all that he found worth answering. This was about the only writing he was accustomed to do at night.—New York Tribune.

Stylish New York Women.

There is an air of chic and style about the New Yorker which is unmistakable. Her lithe and supple figure lends itself readily to any style of garment, however grotesque or strange, and transforms it at once from a caricature into the most elegant thing imaginable. Whatever she puts on becomes her. Huge hats, which stagger fashionable women in other cities, have a peculiar grace and charm upon the heads of the stately beauties who promenade Fifth avenue. High bonnets cease to be ridiculous, and the man who loves to crack cruel jokes about the absurdity of modern headgear is silent when he sees the bewitching effect of lofty quills and ribbons surmounting an arch and piquant face. The tremendous tournure, which looks so exaggerated anywhere else, suddenly strikes us as a picturesque and beautiful addition to the feminine toilet when the New Yorker adds to it her draperies of silk and tulle. No other woman can approach her in style. The famous French milliners vow that their work becomes a pleasure when the daughter of a New York millionaire puts herself into their hands with a carte blanche. They can turn her out a divine being without a rival on earth, for what nature has forgotten to do in the way of beauty art can very readily supply in her case. There are a dozen beauties in New York society who would make their way immediately in any court in the world, and whose loveliness commands instant homage.—Cor. Providence Journal.

An Innocent Man Released.

James Hitchcock, of Ingham county, Michigan, was sentenced thirty-three years ago to imprisonment for life for murder. He turns out to have been innocent, and he wants the legislature of that state to support him in his declining years, as a partial compensation for his unjust confinement.—Harper's Bazar.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING

EPPS'S COCOA

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there was a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

The Sisters of Agnes Strickland.

The New York Critic says:—"Miss Jane Strickland's memoir of her sister Agnes, author of The Queen of England, has just appeared from the press of the Blackwoods. The work had long been in manuscript, but its appearance was delayed owing to the ill health of the writer, who is now eighty-seven years of age. Before the publication of the book, a paragraph appeared in some of the papers of this country, stating that the author was the last survivor of the family. But this is not so. Mrs. Trail, well known to English and Canadian readers, is still living in the picturesque village of Lakefield, Ontario. The family stood thus in order of birth. Elizabeth, Agnes, Sara, Jane, Catherine Parr, Susanna, Eleanore who died in infancy, and two brothers, Samuel and Thomas. Catherine Parr (Mrs Trail) and Susana (Mrs. Moodie) went to Canada in 1832, and settled first in Peterborough, on the banks of the rapid Otonabee, from whence they moved to Lakefield. Mrs. Trail was the first of the sisters who appeared in print. In the summer of 1818, when only sixteen years old, she wrote a little series of stories for children. The manuscript was seen by a friend, and unknown to the author was sent to Harris, of St. Paul's Churchyard, London, who accepted it at once and sent her a check. Before she left England she wrote many juvenile books, and since her arrival in Canada her pen not been idle. Among the best known of her works are Letters from the Backwoods, by an Officer's Wife; Afar in the West, and The Canadian Crusoes. The last is still a very popular book among young readers. It was reprinted by Francis, of New York, and by Crosby, of Boston. Mrs. Trail's latest work is Studies of Plant Life; or Gleanings by Forest, Lake and Plain. It was published it Ottawa in 1884. It is entirely original in style, and deals with the native productions, not as a manual of botany, but as the natural history of the forest—in other words it is a readable floral biography. The illustrations are from the hand of Mrs. (Col.) Chamberlain, a daughter of Mrs. Moodie. Mrs. Moodie, who died a few years ago, was the author of many popular stories and sketches. For the past two years Mrs. Trail has been engaged in writing A Family Record, which is still in manuscript. Though in her eighty-sixth year, she is full of energy, and of vigorous intellect."

Special from Ottawa.

The Wright petition was dismissed by the Minister of Agriculture, and the three Edison patents belonging to the Bell Telephone Company were sustained, thus settling the question of patents on transmitters. This is the most important victory ever gained by the Bell Telephone Company in Canada.

Walter Kerr.

Just before the Police Court opened this morning a white apron and a pair of straw cuffs appeared in the door of the station. "Say," said the wearer, "has that 'talion got any right to get next to my stand.' The Clerk said that the Italian only had one license and that he couldn't run two peanut stands. Walter then went off and at noon the Italian vacated Walter's corner. Walter says that he "run out" the Italian.

Progressive Peterborough.

The Toronto Mail says:—"A few days ago we had occasion to mention the rapid growth of the town of Woodstock. Another progressive town is Peterborough, which, with Ashburnham, has a total population of 10,099 and an assessment of $4,125,560. This is an increase in population, since last year of 544, and in assessment of $467,560. Ashburnham, though a separate municipality, is practically one with Peterborough, which will probably be the next 'baby city'."

Mr. Edward's Canoe.

The canoe which Mr. E. B. Edwards ordered from the Ontario Canoe Company for use in the coming race was shipped to-day, and will reach England in about three weeks. It is a handsome looking craft. The body is cedar rib and the top is of butternut. It is 15 feet long, 31 inches across the beam, and has a 36 inch Radix centre board. The bow is round and the stern square. It is fitted with deck and foot-steering gear and a drop rudder. It will carry 100 square feet of canvas.

THE BUSINESS COLLEGE.—The Sawyer Business College closed its first course this morning, when certificates and diplomas were distributed to the successful students. The valedictory address was read by B. Walker, whose standing at the head of the school threw that office upon him. A pleasing feature of the proceedings this morning was the presentation by the students to Mr. Sawyer of a very handsome inkstand and pen, with an address. Mr. Sawyer replied briefly. The competition for essays on business success was won by A. R. Brown who was accordingly awarded the first prize—a copy of the "Life of Garibaldi."—Times.

THE NANAIMO CALAMITY.

One Hundred White Men and Fifty Chinamen in the Mine.

NANAIMO, B. C., May 6.—This is the saddest day ever known in the history of British Columbia. There are 101 white men and fifty Chinese still in the mine. Forty-seven of the whites are married men with families. Some of the young wives with small children are frantic with grief, standing around the mouth of the fatal shaft. Dense volumes continue to ascend from this shaft. A large gang of men principally sailors, is down this shaft fighting the fire with the desperation of despair. It is hoped the fire will soon be under control. It would be madness to penetrate the mine, as another explosion might occur. The worst has yet to come when the bodies are brought up. The people do not realize yet the dreadful catastrophe that has blighted the city. The mouth of the shaft is eagerly watched hour after hour by an eager crowd—men, women, children, Chinese and Indians, all too much terrified to talk above whispers. Relief is much needed and cannot come too soon, as the destitution will be terrible. Many of the men had large families who have not the necessaries of life.

HOW PETERBOROUGH LOST ANOTHER BUSINESS HOUSE.

To the Editor of the Review.

DEAR SIR,—Some three weeks ago I arrived in Peterborough, fully prepared to open a Dry Goods store in your enterprising town, but, after looking the field over, I was convinced that it would be unwise for me to embark in trade in a place where there is a business house so disgustingly aggressive and so lost to the interests of other houses as one you have located in your town. It is with surprise and chagrin that I notice that this particular house is steadily increasing its number of customers day by day, by employing methods that would make it very uncomfortable for me, if I were in business there, just as it does now for competing establishments who are striving to combat the evil.

I refer to J. C. Turnbull, George and Simcoe street, who sells a good Black Worsted, or a Scotch Tweed suit for $16, worth $20 in any other town or city. Fine unlaundried white shirts, from 35c to 50c., worth from 50c to 75c. All-Wool Tweeds at 40c, worth 50c. Fine Prints 9½c, worth 12½c. This is no place for me.

Yours in sorrow,
H. I. PRICE.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC

FROM

J. J. SHEEHY

I beg to say that contrary to announcements which appeared in the Peterborough papers for the past two months, I DO NOT intend to remove to T. Dolan & Co's Dry Goods Store, nor have I any connections whatever with that establishment. The final arrangements not being satisfactory to me, I withdrew from the projected change, and intend carrying on the Dry Goods business in my usual stand next to Lech's Hat Store.

It is my intention in the future as in the past to show at all seasons nothing but new and fresh goods in the various lines of Dry Goods and Gent's Furnishings; and by doing so, hope to retain the confidence which I am proud to say, I have enjoyed from the public since commencing business two years ago.

STABBED TO DEATH.

Deliberate Murder in New Westminster, B. C.

NEW WESTMINSTER, B. C., May 6.—Between nine and ten o'clock this morning J. E. Muir, who had been engaged for many years logging at Semiahmoo, was murdered on the railway wharf in this city by a man named Wm. Shearer. The cause of the trouble between them is supposed to be of long standing. Shearer, who was discharging lumber from a scow, deliberately waited upon the wharf where Muir was standing, and without any words stabbed him repeatedly. On Muir attempting to get away Shearer caught him by his coat-collar and forcibly held him till the murder was accomplished. The murderer then threw his knife into the water and quickly gave himself up. Muir died in a few minutes, and on examination eleven stabs were found between the neck and the lower part of his body.

DILLON DEFIANT.

The Government Refuse Investigation by Committee.

LONDON, May 7.—In the Commons last night, Mr. Goschen warmly defended Hon. W. H. Smith against the attacks of the Parnellites. If the House undertook the charge of the character of its members, he said, it would need a permanent committee, and the editor of United Ireland would be in constant attendance at the bar of the House. If Mr. Gladstone had treated charges against ministers, while Earl Spencer was in office, as privileged questions, the editor would have always been before the House. The Times might consider itself slandered by the Parnellites. The proper tribunal to decide what was and what was not slander was a court of law. Mr. Gladstone in this case appeared to be disposed to appeal to the classes in preference to the masses.

Mr. Dillon denied that there was any parallel between the case of the Times and that of United Ireland. Parnellites were not in the habit of reading the latter paper to Parliament. The Times had made charges for years, but he had not thought it his duty to repudiate them until they had been repeated in Parliament. The controversy had been forced upon the Parnellites. If they had avoided it they would have been taunted with being cowards and cravens. He was acting solely in the interest of the House. He did not care for his own reputation except in his own country, where it was unassailable. They were willing that the committee should inquire into every definite charge which the Times had brought. Further, they believed they had clues which would enable them to trace the forger of the Times' letter and expose the whole conspiracy in its nakedness to the British public.

Sir William Vernon-Harcourt said he was sure the country would regard M. Dillon's appeal as a serious matter. He maintained that experience had shown the futility of political prosecutions. Such enquiry had never before been refused when the honor of a member was impeached.

Hon. W. H. Smith said the government had the strongest desire for impartial inquiry under the authority of parliament, but they were prepared to resist reference of the matter to a committee of partisans.

Mr. Morley, on behalf of Mr. Gladstone, said the Liberals fully accepted the extension of the inquiry which Mr. Dillion had suggested.

MOSES, THE MAN OF GOD

HIS LIFE AND CHARACTER—HIS GRATNESS.

Three Periods of his History — The Highest Object of Life and how Attained—Lessons Adduced.

On Sunday at the morning and evening services at St. Pauls Church there were large congregations, on the occasion of the anniversary of the opening of the church. The Rev. T. W. Herridge, of Ottawa, preached the sermons. In the evening he invited the attention of the congregation to 1 Chronicles XXIII 14—"Moses the man of God."

In this unpromising chapter, simply of names, he said, we might scarcely expect to find anything of much importance. But it contained one inimitable touch. The writer of Chronicles singles out the name of Moses after 400 years had passed away and exalts him with fragrant praise. A title was given to him which marked his pre-eminence and told of the secret of his immortal greatness—"Moses the man of God." It is a curious expression—Moses the man of God, but it gave more clearly than anything he could think of the keynote of the character of Israel's great lawgiver. Through his changeful history he showed a strong current of faith in the invisible. He was not a man of the world—a man of circumstances—a man of self-seeking. He was a man of god. The career of Moses seemed naturally to divide into three equal parts—40 years from his birth till his flight to the land of Midian; 40 years in the solitudes exile from his kin, and 40 years extending from the time of his coming back till his death on Mount Nebo. Concerning the first period of his existence the divine record is somewhat meagre But it was not at all necessary to follow the career of a man step by step, a single event oftimes served to reveal the direction which one is going and the goal most likely to be reached. Tradition told us that the Egyptian princess, in the water of the Nile, on finding the child was struck with his [illegible] and determined to make him her own son from the first he

REFUSED TO BE NOURISHED

by the enemies of Israel. When a crown was jestingly offered to him he buried it to the ground. On reaching manhood he declined an alliance with a wealthy princess, and spurned all opportunities of acquiring wealth or political renown. These details were all unnoticed, but the Apostle brought out all this in a few graphic touches:—"By faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season." There were few lives in which greater opportunities were offered, or greater perils abounded, than in that of Moses. At that time Egypt was the intellectual centre of the world. No doubt this earnest Hebrew gifted with great mental powers, would find strange fascination in the romantic pursuits of the Eastern sages. Ample scope was given to study national life. He was a learned man. If great advantages were given, so were they beset with grave dangers. Besides being the intellectual centre of the world, Egypt's court was also the centre of splendour and voluptuousness. But Moses passed safely through the perils of his way. At discreet years he refused to be the son of Pharaoh's daughter. This was the beginning of his history. Life begins with renunciation—when we have learned to say "No" to that which is evil. He did not take it that the expression "when he was come to years" meant the measure of days and hours, but marked the time of the attainment of the spiritual majority. Every act of determination to resist evil marked an epoch in the progress of the soul, and we remain in till we learn to abhor that which is evil and cling to that which is good. Moses refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter and chose rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than enjoy the pleasure of sin for a short time. He had dwelt in dazzling splendor. Everything that appealed to the senses or intellect was not wanting. There was beauty and activity at the palace of the Pharaohs. We wonder that his brain was not almost maddened with the brilliant pageants. There must have been a fierce struggle within him to resist such strong temptations. He must have had a glimpse of the invisible glories of God that he might see that the vain show was not worth living for. The sacred narative passed over all details of the battle; it simply recorded the final victory "when he was come to years he refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter." The brilliance of the palace which was enough to dazzle the eye of the beholder, visions of splendid enticement, gay company, the lore of the sages,—all these Moses could have enjoyed. But the first glimpse of the eternal reality was sufficient to dispel all such thoughts. This was the crisis in Moses' history as there was a crisis in the history of every young man.

IMBECILITY AND CHILDHOOD

THE BATTLE GROUND

is arrived at. Angels and fiends are the witnesses of the struggle. The issue is yes or no. There is a great conflict within. For a long time the issue is undecided, but at length with a might that seems to rend body and soul asunder the answer comes in a decisive "no." That man's soul is saved.

The second or middle period of Moses career was the time of the period of his exile in the land of Midian. He slew the Egyptian, and in fear of Pharaoh's wrath went his way to Midian. The sacred biography passed lightly over his virtues, but told with faithfulness all his misdeeds. Even patriotism does not justify the homicide. Stephen defended Moses on the ground that it was the resistance to tyrany by which the Egyptian came to his death, but there was no such defense here. A superficial look at the 40 years of Moses' exile would lead to the belief that it was a blank in his life—a time spent to no purpose. But looking beneath the surface it was found that this was the crowning epoch of his life. In Egypt he was taught to be strong; here he was to be given inspiration. Generally education came first and then trial; but with Moses the trial came first and then the education. In such solitudes other great men have been filled with great purposes. David was, Elijah was, John the Baptist was, and so were others. And in this age, when we act so much and think so little, would it be wasteful to us if we were compelled to stop—by reason of sickness or misfortune — and think Moses, when he watched the flocks on the hillsides, his soul was filled with great and patriotic purposes. At length the call came and he went forth to be the deliverer of his people.

The third period of Moses' career was the climax. After being prepared he entered upon his great life's work. He entered upon his great work of national emancipation, and all knew the result. They knew of his trials in leading the children through the wilderness. They knew of the many strange events that happened till the time Moses was called to ascend the heights of Mount Nebo. We could easily imagine the man in his 120th year with "eye undimmed and natural force unabated," ascend with quickened step while the people watched him from below, till a thicket or crag hid him from their view. Moses did not ascend the mountain as a baffled warrior, but rather as the hero of a hundred fights, now about to gain the crowning victory. Even in chastisement God is full of compassion, and it might be his mercy just in such hours to hold us back from the enjoyment of

SOME WORLDLY PARADISE.

Perhaps Moses looked forth upon the promised land as a weak, imperfect symbol of the ultimate reward. He had walked by faith and not by sight all his life; was sight to triumph now? Alone in Nebo, looking with lustrious eyes upon the promised land the earthly vision fades and the Heavenly vision succeeds. The Eternal One cradels him to His arms and kisses his spirit to rest.

Concluding the preacher reviewed the life and prominent traits of Moses' character in glowing language, showing how the people of to-day might follow his example with profit to their own characters.

ANSWER TO WOLSELEY.

Jefferson Davis replies to Wolseley's Laudation of Lee.

NEW ORLEANS, La., May 7.—Mr. Jefferson Davis has written a caustic review of General Wolseley's laudatory sketch of General Robert E. Lee. He describes it as containing more romance than history, and he takes particular exception to General Wolseley's allegation that General Lee was kept out of the chief command of the Confederate armies until near the close of the war. Mr. Davis says that on the contrary, he gave General Lee full command at the outset, and though General Lee was afterwards put in active command of the army of Virginia, he still retained also the command-in-chief. It was only after repeated and urgent requests from Lee to be relieved of one of the commands that Mr. Davis finally consented to give General Bragg the command of the army of Virginia, simply because that was the most important one on account of the position of the two at the time Lee had found the burden of the two commands together too onerous to be borne. Later he again accepted the command-in-chief. The warm friendship between Lee and Davis was never impaired Mr. Davis speaks with contempt of Lord Wolseley's comments on the administration of confederate affairs, and expresses wonder that a man, ranking so high in military estimation, should make such blunders in writing about military movements that the least reference to facts disproves his statements.

CAVE BATHS AT BANFF.

Improvements at the Wonderful Springs at National Park.

Mr. Stewart, superintendent of the Banff National park, gives us some particulars of his alterations at the cave. The tunnel is now completed into the cave, and is about 100 feet in length. The basin of water has been enlarged to almost double of its natural size and all the fragments and angularities of rock have been taken out so that the bottom is as smooth as possible, and there will be an average depth of four feet of water. All around the circular basin of water there will be a platform, which will give great facilities to bathers. As much of the natural beauty of the cave as possible is to be preserved. The stalactites depending from the roof are to be cleaned and polished, so that when the electric light as introduced they will glisten with great brilliancy. Immediately at the entrance of the tunnel a building is to be erected giving ample accommodation for separate ladies' and gentlemen's waiting and dressing rooms elegantly furnished. Attendants are to be engaged whose duty it will be to preserve perfect order and keep everything scrupuously clean, and a nominal charge of 10 cents each will be made for bath tickets. Only a certain number of bathers will be allowed in the cave at once, and probably alternate hours will be allowed for ladies and gentlemen. Mr. Stewart believes the scheme will give entire satisfaction and that the cave will become the most popular bathing place in the the National park. He expects also that the temperature will be heightened by the alterations made.—Calgary Tribune.

The Daily Review.

MOEDAY, MAY 9, 1887.

THE SENATE AND REFORM.

More important matters having received their due priority, we have deferred till now any reference to Mr. Mills' change of base in regard to the Senate of Canada. In the debate in the House of Commons on the representation of the Northwest Territories in the Upper House of the Canadian Parliament he adopted a line of argument very different from his usual abuse of one of the two chambers, which under our constitution compose with the Crown our legislature. Of course, having clamored for representation for the Northwest, he opposed it when proposed by the Administration, but that would pass as the mere customary ebullition of Grit disgust at Conservatives being trusted with the management of our affairs. But another turn of his coat was more novel and more suggestive.

Part of the old stock-in-trade of Mr. Mills, which he has ventured to air more freely since the death of Senator George Brown has relieved him from the fear of being rebuked for his presumption, has been violent and indecorous abuse of the Senate. But now Mr. Mills, who has a considerable amount of tricky sharpness, has made the discovery that the last Act of the Imperial Parliament, unlike the British North America Act, places no limit upon the number of Senators it authorizes for the Northwest. On this ground Mr. Mills threatened in the House that if his party came into power it might remove an adverse majority in the Senate by appointing Northwest Senators by the score.

This reminds one of the action taken by Messrs. Mackenzie & Blake, who, though they abused the Senate when they were in opposition before and since, changed their minds and pestered the home authorities for authority to appoint more Senators.

It is obvious that the pretended hostility to the Senate manifested by Mr. Mills and other Reform leaders is mere hypocrisy for use when in Opposition. When in power they take the contrary view, and would take power to increase the number of Senators. What they really object to is not the principle of a Senate, but the fact that the Senators really represent the people by being Conservative. Their real grievance is with the people of Canada for entrusting Sir John Macdonald and his colleagues over and over again with the power of managing [illegible] Senators the Union.

On a proposal by the Government to assume and complete the Oxford and New Glasgow Railway, Mr. Blake made a fierce personal attack upon Sir C. Tupper for corruption. In reply Sir Charles showed conclusively the benefit of the proposed course, and then retaliated upon Mr. Blake by exposing the corrupt promises of his lieutenant, Mr. Anglin, to do anything that Nova Scotia wanted if it would vote for Mr. Blake. He also dealt with Mr. Blake's own corrupt course, especially in regard to the tariff, raging against the protective duties and then promising to retain them. The effect was so great that Mr. Blake was driven to adopt the cowardly device of putting up Mr. Mills to move the adjournment that he might make a second speech. He repudiated Mr. Anglin and his promises on his behalf, argued that his Malvern speech really meant nothing, and renewed his charges against Sir Charles. And after all Mr. Blake showed how hollow was his charge of corruption, and how beneficial was the proposed action, by not venturing to oppose it.

TORTUGA ISLAND.

England, France and the United States Competing for its Possession.

Washington, D. C., May 7.—The State Department is in receipt of information to the effect that the French Government has sent two men-of-war to the Island of Hayti to enter an official protest against the seizure of Tortuga Island, which the British authorities contemplate. For the past two weeks various attempts at a settlement of the difficulty between the Haytian Government and Great Britain have only resulted in a failure to come to any definite understanding. The French Government recognized the fact that the seizure of Tortuga by the British would leave the American Panama trade at the mercy of Great Britain in the case of war. Tortuga lies directly on north-eastern coast of Hayti and controls the windward passage through which the south bound ships pass. Should the British authorities fail in their endeavor to secure the Island, in payment for the Malinder claim, which is now pending, an effort will be made to purchase it. To this arrangement the United States will not agree, even as a satisfaction for the claim, or otherwise it would practically give to Great Britain the control of the West Indian passage and be ruinous to the United States. In the event of war Portuga would be valuable to any country with western interests as a coaling and naval station. Great Britain has offered to settle the Malinder claim for $125,000 and leave the remainder to arbitration. The total claim against Hayti is in the neighborhood of $1,000,000.

Nominalism.

Brevity produces some very remarkable specimens of what the philosophers call nominalism. One of our correspondents had occasion to go into a store to enquire for Dr. Abercombie's works, "The Intellectual Faculties," and "The Philosophy of the Moral Feelings." When asked for them the bookseller solemnly replied—"I know I haven't any moral feelings, and I doubt whether I have and intellectual faculties!" Christian Advocate.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT

FIRST SESSION OF THE SIXTH CANADIAN PARLIAMENT.

The Estimates and Budget—Nova Scotian Railway and Politics—Mr. Blake's Tactics—Slanders of Indian Agents.

Friday, May 6.—A number of private and public bills were advanced a stage.

THE BUDGET.

Sir John Macdonald said the estimates would be brought down on Monday, and the budget speech would be made on Thursday, if Mr. Watson was willing to postpone his disallowance resolution.

HOLIDAY.

Sir John Macdonald said a majority of both the Opposition and Ministerial members had asked that the House adjourn on Wednesday, May 18th, till the following Wednesday. Only two working days would be lost.

NOVA SCOTIA HAILWAYS, &C.

Mr. Pope moved the House into Committee on a resolution to assume and complete as a Government work the Oxford & New Glasgow Railway. The contractors had fallen into difficulties and abandoned it. The additional cost would be $1,000,000.

Mr. Blake accused Sir Charles Tupper of being responsible for the failure of the contractor, and of undertaking the road to corrupt the Nova Scotians.

Sir Charles Tupper showed the great benefit that would result from the road, and the wisdom of the proposed course. He denied the charges of corruption. He proceeded to administer a severe castigation to Mr. Blake for his wholesale attempts at corruption, showing for years the utmost hostility to every Nova Scotian claim and then sending to the Province his lieutenant, Mr. Anglin, to promise in his name that he would do anything for the Nova Scotians if they would only vote for him. He also dealt in scathing terms with Mr. Blake's tergiversation as to the tariff, bitterly assailing the N.P. and then promising to maintain it, as well as other renunciations of principle to secure support.

Mr. Blake made a second speech by the trick of having the adjournment moved by Mr. Mills. He disowned any connection with Mr. Anglin and his promises, endeavored to explain away his tariff oscillations, and made a second attack upon Sir Charles in regard to the elections in Nova Scotia.

Then the House went into committee and passed these "corrupt" resolutions without dissent.

TRAVELLING EXPENSES.

Mr. Somerville moved for a detailed return of the expenses of Sir John Macdonald and his colleagues while travelling in the Jamaica Pullman car, making some dirty little insinuations, such as that Mr. Foster drank, and so on.

Sir J. Macdonald said he was welcome to the information. He was not in the habit of saddling the country with his personal expenses.

AN INDIAN OFFICIAL.

Mr. Somerville asked for a return of date of John Creighton's appointment as Indian agent at Sangeen and of his dismissal with the cause.

Sir J. Macdonald gaves the dates, the dismissal being two years ago, but declined to give the cause unless Creighton asked it or there was a charge made against him.

Mr. Somerville said he wished to know if it was some such misconduct as had been charged against Indian agents in the Northwest.

Sir J. Macdonald declined to satisfy diseased curiosity.

Mr. Blake and Mr. Mills insisted upon Parliament receiving the information.

Mr. Davin denounced the false charges made by Mr. M. C. Cameron, who was now politically on his bier from too much Porter against the Indian officials. These falsehoods had done more than anything else to elect him and the other Northwest members.

Sir J. Macdonald, as the Speaker was about to put the question for a division, proved from the Parliamentary Procedure that the Government need not give the cause for the dismissal of an official appointed during pleasure.

Mr. Somerville withdrew his motion.

Sir J. Macdonald then explained that Creighton was dismissed for trading with Indians while an Indian agent.

NORWOOD.

A Large Building.—From the Register we learn that Messrs. John Finley & Son are erecting, in connection with their large factory, an immense storehouse. It is 80 feet in length, by 30 feet in width.

Accidents.—Mr. Thos. Buck, of Norwood, was injured at Port Hope on Wednesday of last week. While loading timber a rope caught his foot and jerked him over two sticks of timber and on the car, badly bruising him. He was removed to his home and is recovering. While Mr. W. H. Stephenson was getting on a train at Havelock he slipped between the platform and the train, severely injuring one of his legs.

Serious Accident.—On Thursday Mrs. W. E. Roxburgh was standing on trestles while house cleaning. It is supposed that she fell and struck her head against a washstand, inflicting a deep cut in the base of the brain on the back part of the head. She was found lying on the floor in a pool of blood and in a state of unconsciousness. Dr. Pettigrew was speedily called and on arriving bled the patient which apparently gave great relief. Other restoratives were applied and although everything is being done that medical skill can suggest she lies in a very precarious condition.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little suffere at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

"By a thorough knowlede of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epds has provided our breakfast tables with a pelicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendancy to disease. OPINIONS OF THE PRESS

FROZEN OUT ROGUES.

The net result of the Reform party taking up the Riel cry has been a gain of a few seats. But the party is still out in the cold. —Toronto Telegram (Indep).

THE TORONTO SHRIEVALTY.

If the rumors be true that Mr. Mowat has appointed his son Sheriff of Toronto he has made the mistake of his life. As "Ranger," whose letter was in type before the rumor was current, truly puts it, the appointment is unwise and improper, both as to party tactics and patriotic principle.—Toronto News (Indep).

PERSONAL PLUNDER.

Mr. Mowat has yielded to the temptation of providing for his family at the expense of the people, and treating the extensive public patronage in his hands as personal plunder. The system of making appointments to strengthen the party is bad enough, but it is infinitely more defensible than the bestowal of lucrative offices on family connections.—Toronto News (Indep.)

A FOX IN TEARS.

Certain it is that men were urged to join the deputation which waited on the Attorney-General to press him to appoint his son, with an assurance that it was a mere compliment, and that Mr. Mowat was sure to decline the proposal. For a parallel to the spectacle of Mr. Robert Jaffray urging the Attorney-General to grant his son the sum of six thousand a year for life at the public expense, and Mr. Mowat declaring with tears in his eyes that he would leave the whole matter to his colleagues, it is necessary to search the pages of Moliere.—Toronto World (Indep.)

SILENT SYMPATHY.

The Globe is so silent upon the shrievalty question that the good Deacon might hear a pin drop. That is the sort of a hairpin he is.—Toronto World (Indep).

CONSERVATIVE FINANCING.

Canadian three and a half per cents. have reached par. This is quite an event in the financial history of the country. The next issue of our bonds should be at three per cent.—Toronto Globe (Reform).

THE SHRIEVALTY OF YORK.

The appointment of young Mr. Mowat to the shrievalty of York can only be characterized in one way. It was an act of gross favouritism and injustice; favoritism, inasmuch as it made large and life-long provision for a man who has never done anything for such a windfall of good fortune; and injustice, inasmuch as it nullified the claims of deserving men who have strong claims upon Mr. Mowat and his government. This single act will do more to smirch the high reputation of Ontario's premier than any or all which he has committed during his many years of office. With what face can he or his government henceforth censuse Sir John Macdonald or Sir Charles Tupper? Neither of those gentlemen has hitherto done anything quite so indecent as this. At any rate they have not done it openly, and as though it were not a matter to be ashamed of or apologized for—Arcturus (Indep.).

RIVAL AUTHORS.

Hanover is about to celebrate the centenary of Baron Munchausen who has the honor of being known as "the greatest liar that ever spoke." His book of adventures certainly does compare well with the despatches of the Ottawa correspondents of the United States press.—Toronto World (Indep.)

WIT AND WISDOM.

Spend less than you earn and you will be rich.

Young artist—"Well, Charley, what do you think I ought to get for this painting?" Charley—"Six months."

"How is Smith getting along? Is he as regular in his habits as he used to be?" "No; he was sober twice last week."

A maiden lady says that if single life is bad it stands to reason that double life is twice as bad. But ladies rarely understand mathematics.

The mind is but a barren soil—a soil which is soon exhausted and will produce no crop, or only one, unless it be continually fertilized and enriched with foreign matter.

A new style of boys' trousers has been invented, with a copper seat, sheet-iron knees, rived down the seams, and waterproof pockets to hold broken eggs and worms for fishing.

"Would you marry an old man for his money?" asked Mildred. "Well, I declare," exclaimed Laura with a startled air, "you surely don't suppose anything else would induce me to marry him?"

"No," said a fond mother, speaking proudly of her twenty-five-year-old daughter—"No, Mary isn't old enough to marry yet. She cries whenever any one scolds her; and until she becomes hardened enough to reply vigorously she isn't fit for a wife."

"I hope, my dear, that you don't intend to go to the theatre alone?" "No, indeed; I never go unless I am chaperoned." "Unless what?" "Chaperoned." "That's just the way with me. I always like to have a chap around."

The Schoolmaster at Home.—Schoolmaster:—"Well, Bobby, my little fellow, what is your eye for?" Bobby:—"Seein' wi'." S:—"And your ear?" B:—"Hearin' wi'." S:—"And your nose, Bobby?" B. (after a pause):—"For takin' the cauld wi'."

A gent courted a lady for twenty-eight years and then married her. She turned out to be a perfect virago, but died in two years after the wedding. "Now," said the bereaved one, in a self-congratulating tone, "see what I have escaped by a long courtship."

Mistress—"The coffee is so strong this morning that it is absolutely bitter, Kathleen." Maid—"Yis, ma'am. The policeman on this bate do be complainin' av the wakeness of it all winter, an' durin' the cowld winter cook is after humorin' the poor fellow a bit."

"Look here, Smith," said a rich fellow to his former school mate, who had asked for aid, "this is the second time you've applied to me this month. I'm afraid you don't live within your means." "Ah," said Smith, "I'm just trying to get the means to live within."

Queen's Jubilee Offering;—Collector "Well Mrs.——, I am collecting for the Queen's Jubilee Offering." Mrs.——, "Well, mem, I see nae muckle gweed in it, but I never pat a peer body awa' frae the door without gi'en them something, and I sheerly cudna pit awa' the Queen."

Gentleman who has lately presented his manservant with a pair of badly fitting trousers:—"John, when I wore those trousers myself I thought they were very badly made indeed; but now I see them on you I am disposed to think otherwise." John, intending to be complaisant;—"Oh, I dare say! But there's folk ne'er look weel in anything."

An effort is being made with the Dominion Government to get another company of garrison artillery for Toronto.

FARM AND GARDEN.

With good management, and good locality and seasons, bees will more than double in numbers every year.

The number of farms in Kansas was more than quadrupled from 1870 to 1880, and and the number of farms in Minnesota doubled.

Five or six years is the average term of duration of rasberry plantations; if retained longer the fruit is small and but little of it.

In the extreme south-west corner of Louisiana lies the largest producing farm in the world. It runs 100 miles north and south and 23½ miles east and west, and is owned and operated by a syndicate of Northern capitalists.

No lawn can be long maintained in good order without successive rolling. Mowing alone will not secure a good bottom without that compression which the roller tends to give. Rolling ought to be done early, before the ground becomes dry.

Never cut down a tree in a field that is to be cultivated, but dig around it and cut off the roots, when it will fall over and the stump can be removed at once. A stump in a field or garden is as bad as a rock, and harder to dig out, but if taken out with the tree the job is not a difficult one.

If all the forests were cut off from the American Continent the greater part of it would become, in half a generation, a howling wilderness incapable of supporting man or beast. A certain ratio, between twenty and thirty per cent. of the whole agricultural region of any country, must for the good of the rest, remain forest land.

THE CHAMPION POTATO.—It is a well-known fact that all the different varieties of potatoes invariably become less valuable as croppers after being a few years in use. The "Rock" was a great success in its day, but its day is long past. After it the "Champion," originally grown by Mr. Robertson, Newmill, was even more successful, but of late it has been steadily falling in favor with potato growers. Mr. Robertson, however, has been looking to his laurels, and on his new farm—Hilton of Arbikie—he has lately been growing a new variety, which for quality and cropping powers is fully equal to the Champion in its palmy days. The introduction of this new variety is exciting great interest among practical farmers.—Dundee Advertiser.

Astonishing Success

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive at least to try one bottle, as 70,000 dozen bottes were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about it Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers, in the United States and Canada. d90

A meeting to discuss the manner in which the Queen's Jubilee will be celebrated is to be held in the Council Chamber this evening. The public are invited.

Obit.

Word has been received of the death on Saturday of Mr. O'Brien, barrister, of Prescott, son-in-law of Mr. M. Flanagan, of Kingston, and brother-in-law of Mrs. (Dr.) John O'Sullivan, of Peterborough.

Shakespeare Class.

The class in connection with the Young Men's Christian Association under Mr. B. Earle, is now taking up "Macbeth." It will meet to-night at 8 o'clock and is open to all.

A Square Clean.

Street Inspector Pope has got the market square cleaned up, and it has now got on its summer face—clean, cheery and ready to bear up under a large volume of business.

Health Matters.

The letter from Dr. Clarke, which appears in another column, should be read and the facts stated carefully noted. Attention to the matters referred to are necessary in the interests of health and comfort, and also to avoid a visit from the police or an appearance in court.

Jubilee Picnic.

The members of the congregation of St. Peter's Cathedral will hold a grand Jubilee Picnic on June 21st, in the grounds of the Murray Street Separate School. A large committee has been formed and preparations made on an extensive scale to make it worthy of the day set apart to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the Queen's ascension to the throne of the British Empire.

Baseball.

The first local baseball match of the season was played on the P. A. A. A. grounds on Saturday afternoon between the Peterboroughs and the Bankers. Cameron and Billings were the battery for the Bankers, and Fitzgerald, a new addition to baseball timber here, and Sandy, for the Peterboroughs. The score stood 16—6 in favor of the Peterboroughs. Fitzgerald pitches some nice curves.

Arrived to-day, Parasols 25, 35, 50, 75 and $1.00, really nice goods at double the money. See Sheppard for Parasols.

Jubilee Meeting To-Night.

The meeting called by the Mayor in the Town Council Chamber to-night, to consider the celebration of the Queen's Jubilee on June 21st, should be well attended. Already various suggestions have been made through the newspapers, but combined action is required. If representatives of the military, the bands and choirs, public bodies, schools and societies, are present this evening, and give their views, it should not be difficult to devise some joint action in this matter that would would give general satisfaction.

Died on the Way Home.

Last October Mr. Francis Robert Bennett, of North Monaghan, went to Florida for the benefit of his health, as he was suffering from lung trouble. For a time he appeared to be benefitted by the change, but latterly his letters did not breathe so hopeful a spirit. About three weeks ago he became worse and his brother, Mr. George Bennett, went to bring him home. At first he was too weak for the journey, but becoming stronger they started, as he was anxious to reach home again. They arrived in New York early on Saturday morning, but on Saturday at 6 o'clock Francis died in St. Paul's Hospital. The body will arrive this evening and the funeral will take place from the residence of Mr. Pope, Donegal street, at 3.30 o'clock on Tuesday afternoon. The deceased was 28 years of age and unmarried. He was well thought of and respected by his acquaintances. The Messrs Bennett were accompanied on their homeward journey by Mr. George Clementi, who has a residing in Florida.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE

THE SPRING SITTINGS OF THE ASSIZE COURT.

Mr. Justice O'Connor Presides—The Calender a Larger One Than Usual—His Lordship's Address.

The Spring Assizes opened at the Court House at one o'clock to-day, Mr. Justice O'Connor presiding.

The following named were impannelled as the Grand Jury:—

Thos. E. Fitzgerald, foreman.

Thos. Blezard	Wm. Irwin
Robt. Dench	David Kelly
A. W. Dafoe	H. LeBrun
Wm. Ferguson	John Lean
Jos. Forster	D. D. McIntyre
Robt. Graham	R. W. Muncaster
Dennis Hurley	W. E. Roxburgh.

The bar was represented by: B. B. Osler, Q. C., Toronto; N. G. Bigelow, Belleville; C. W. Sawers, E. H. D. Hall, W. H. Moore, R. E. Wood, County Crown Attorney, J. Green, W. A. Stratton, E. B. Stone and Geo. Edmison.

The docket was as follows:—

JURY CASES—CIVIL DOCKET.

BOUCHER v. SAWERS—The plaintiff, a physician, sues the defendant, a lawyer, for his account. The plaintiff refused to accept the offer made by the defendant of one-half, and brings action for the whole amount. This the defendant refuses to pay, and alleges that the plaintiff was careless and unskilful. Drs. Richardson, Aikins, Bethune, Fulton, and Cameron, of Toronto, and Drs. King and Halliday, of Peterborough, and Dr. Douglass, of Lakefield, are the expert witnesses on behalf of the plaintiff, and Dr. Fred. Sawers, of Rochester, N. Y., Dr. Might, of Port Hope, and Drs. Clark and Kincaid, of Peterborough, are the expert witnesses for the defendant.

COX v. CAVANAGH—An action to recover hotel premises.

COCHRANE v. HAMILTON PROVIDENT ASSOCIATION—An action to recover damages for the wrongful sale of lands.

BERALY v. WOOD—An action for non-compliance with revised statutes of Ontario, sec. 3, chap. 9.

NO JURY CASES CIVIL DOCKET.

DUMBLE vs PETERBOROUGH REAL ESTATE INVESTMENT CO.—An action to compel defendants to deliver over a demurative mortgage or payment of amount due.

PESERBOROUGH vs MIDLAND RAILWAY.—An action to compel the defendants to grade Bethune street according to law and to [illegible] the space between the rails on this street.

STARR vs LASHER—An action to recover certain property.

CRIMINAL DOCKET.

The criminal docket consists of the Holbrook infanticide case and the Warner perjury case.

HIS LORDSHIP addressed the Grand Jury, congratulating them that the docket was so free from criminal cases. He spoke of the two cases on the criminal calendar and directed the jury as to their duties in each case. He was grieved to find so many lunatics confined in the gaol. Lunacy seemed to him to be on the increase in this country and he was unable to account for it. The country was prosperous and contented and he was utterly at a loss to find a cause for this apparent increase. He was also sorry and surprised to learn that there were seven vagrants confined in the gaol. This appeared to be a strange thing in a land where everyone willing to work could earn a livelihood. He pointed out to the jury that it was a part of their duty to examine into these matters and to comment on them as they thought fit. He then dismissed them to inspect the county property.

Masonic Excursion.

We learn that arrangements have been made for an excursion under the auspices of the Masonic fraternity of Peterborough on Thursday, June 9th. The excursion will be to Toronto via the Grand Trunk Railway, and tickets good for two days, obtainable at stations between Campbellford and Uxbridge, will be granted at greatly reduced fares, to be announced hereafter. This is the first excursion announced for the season, and the fact that the management is in such good hands is a guarantee that it will be so conducted as to induce many to avail themselves of such an opportunity.

Personal.

The Midland Free Press, of May 5th, says that Mr. T. R. Hewson, P. & D. L. S., was in Midland last week surveying station grounds for the G. T. R.

The Rev. W. T. Herridge, of Ottawa, who preached in St. Paul's Church on Sunday, gives evidence of being one the rising lights of the church. His sermons were very able and were delivered in a forceful manner.

Mr. J. C. Curtin, of the editorial staff of the New York World, has been paying a visit to his friends and relations in this neighbourhood. Mr. Curtin was born in Douro, and resided there till 12 years ago. He expresses himself as surprised and pleased with the great progress made in the vicinity of his old home, and more especially in this town, but at the same time he thinks we might do far more to utilize our exceptionally excellent water power.

The Boston Transcipt says:—"At an entertainment given at the Home for Intemperate Women, last Sunday evening, Miss Delaney of Canada, (Peterborough) made a very creditable appearance as a vocalist." Miss Delaney was encored several times during the evening.

The Rev. T. B. Angell and Mrs. Angell, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., are in town on a visit. He took part in all the services in St. John's Church on Sunday, being celebrant at the early Communion and preaching in the evening.

Salvage Waggon.

The new salvage waggon, built by Messrs. Fitzgerald & Stanger, for the Fire Department, is a serviceable conveyance, admirably suiting the purpose for which it is intended.

Better Rates Still.

The correspondence carried on of late between the Oddfellows' Reception Committee and the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific Railway Companies has resulted in better terms being obtained, the same rates for the general public extending as far east as Ottawa and Brockville. The railway companies have given rates which are very satifactory to the Committee, and which at the time of the big celebration will doubtless be appreciated by the people. A meeting of the Committee will be held on Wednesday evening.

The Brigade Camp.

The Kingston Whig says:—"Col. Villiers D. A. G., received a letter from the Minister of Militia asking him as to where would be the best place to hold the brigade camp for our district, and the most convenient date as well, and he replied, mentioning Tuesday, the 14th of June, as the date and Kingston at the place. If the camp is begun on the 14th of June it will be here during the celebration of the Queen's jubilee. Another thing, it should not be forgotten that the 47th battalion, with ten full companies, and the Kingston field battery are almost on the spot, and the city council will supply all he necessary site facilities."

SANITARY.

To the Editor of the Review.

SIR,—Allow me to give a few extracts from the Health by-lay, relating to sanitary work necessary at this season of the year.

Section 13 states that all wells shall be cleaned out before the 1st day of July in each year.

As to disposal of sewerage and refuse, Rule 3 says that all reservoirs, cesspools or privy vaults shall be cleaned out at least once a year, on or before the 15th May, and from 15th May to 1st Nov. they shall be thoroughly disinfected by adding once a month not less than 2 lbs. of sulphate of copper (bluest one) dissolved in two pailfuls of water, or other suitable disinfectant.

Rule 5. All putrid and decaying animal or vegetable matter must be removed from all cellars, buildings or yards on or before the 15th May in each year.

Rule 6. All garbage shall be burned or placed in a proper covered receptacle for swill and house offal, the contents of which shall, between 15th May and 1st November be regularly removed as often as twice a week.

The lateness of the present season and probability that very hot weather will come on suddenly necessitate the completion of spring sanitary work as soon as possible. Add to this that the town is constantly becoming more crowded and the importance of such work is seen. Ice is still lingering in many yards the melting of which should be hastened by clearing the surface from day to day. The greatest care should be needed to keep down diptheria and typhoid fever.

HOW PETERBOROUGH LOST ANOTHER BUSINESS HOUSE.

To the Editor of the Review.

DEAR SIR,—Some three weeks ago I arrived in Peterborough, fully prepared to open a Dry Goods store in your enterprising town, but, after looking the field over, I was convinced that it would be suicidal for me to embark in trade in a place where there is a business house so disgustingly aggressive and so lost to the interests of other houses as one you have located in your town. It is with surprise and chagrin that I notice that this particular house is steadily increasing its number of customers day by day, by employing methods that would make it very uncomfortable for me, if I were in business here, just as it does now for competing establishments who are striving to combat the evil.

I refer to J. C. Turnbull, George and Simcoe street, who sells a good Black Worsted, or a Scotch Tweed suit for $16, worth $20 in any other town or city. Fine unlaundried white shirts, from 35c to 50c., worth from 50c to 75c. All-Wool Tweeds at 40c, worth 50c. Fine Prints 9½c., worth 12½c. This is no place for me.

Yours in sorrow,
H. I. PRICE.

PORT HOPE

STRANGLED WITH A ROPE.—The community of Duck Pond, about seven miles out of Port Hope, were shocked and grieved over the news that awaited them on Friday morning. It was that Thomas Johnston, a single man of fifty-eight years of age, who lived with his brother Robert, a well-to-do farmer, had been found dead near his brother's house. Deceased had been for years a great sufferer from asthma, and its ravages left him very much enfeebled. On last Tuesday he fell backwards from the floor in the barn to a mow. Falling on his head and neck, his spine was hurt. He seemed dazed and hardly conscious. Remedies were applied but seemed to have no effect. In this state he remained. On Thursday morning he rose about nine o'clock and dressed and went out to the barn and whiled away the time still complaining of pain in his head and seemingly half awake, until about five o'clock, when he was noticed going down a lane. That was the last time he was seen alive. He did not appear for tea, but no alarm was felt until between eight and nine o'clock. Then enquires were made of the neighbors. No one had seen him and a search was instituted with lights and lanterns. Until far into the night the search continued, but without success. At five o'clock on Friday morning it was resumed and the body was found in a clump of bushes about forty rods from the road. It was in a kneeling position, with the hands hanging down by the sides. A rope was placed around the neck, and tied to a slender bough. The body was leaning over to one side with sufficient pressure to strangle the unfortunate man. There can be no doubt of his insanity, the fall, the physicians think, must have touched his reason. The deceased was a most estimable man, and had hardly an enemy. The coroner did not think it necessary to hold an inquest.—Times.

THE "TIMES" LETTER.

A Committee Believe it was Written by Richard Biggott.

LINCOLN, Neb., May 8.—The following is furnished the Associated Press by Mr. Jno. P. Sutton, secretary of the Irish National League of America. John Fitzgerald, President of the Irish National League of America, recently submitted the London Times fac simile of the alleged Parnell letter, together with documents in possession of Patrick Egan, in the handwriting of Mr. Richard Piggot, formerly proprietor of the Dublin Irishman, to a committee consisting of Governor Thayer, Treasurer Willard, Auditor Babcock, Mayor Sawyer, Postmaster Watkins, and the cashiers of the city banks. To-day the committee reported as follows:—"We, the undersigned, have carefully examined the fac simile published in the London Times of the 16th ult., alleged to have been written by Charles S. Parnell, also letters signed Richard Piggott, addressed to Patrick Egan, dated June 25, 1875, Dec. 6 and 22, 1880, Jan. 14, 1880, and March 9, 1881, also an enclosure contained in said letter of March 9, 1881, and we have no hesitation in saying that the alleged fac simile of the letters and enclosure were written by the same hand. The documents referred to were letters from Piggott, wherein he tried to blackmail the League through its treasurer, under the pretence he had been offered money by alleged agents of Dublin Castle to publish fictitious articles in relation to the League fund, prepared for the purpose of discrediting the League and the letter to him from these agents which he enclosed as proof of his statement. In his letter to the treasurer of the league Piggot said he was on the verge of financial ruin and must have money. He would suppress the Dublin Castle article if the League would supply him with a temporary loan of $300. These letters and the fac simile of Parnell's alleged letter the committee above named believes to be in the handwriting of the same man."

THE NANAIMO HORROR.

A Total of 189 Lives Lost by the Explosion.

NANAIMO, B. C., May 8.—The exploring party broke through into the mine yesterday and discovered the dead lying in all direction. All hope is now given up of saving any of them alive. Thirty-five bodies were recovered from the mine yesterday. The fire is still burning but is under control.

The total number of persons known to have perished is 189, of whom 82 were Chinese and 107 whites. More than half of the white men leave families.

Loss of Life in Mexico.

CITY OF MEXICO, May 8.—The Government to-day received information of a disastrous earthquake, which occurred on the [illegible] Chihispe, district of Montezuma, State of Sonora, during which one hundred and fifty persons lost their lives. There were also twenty killed at Oputa by the falling of the buildings. Many people were injured at Granadas and Gusabar, which towns were almost completely destroyed. A volcanic eruption began in the neighbouring mountains, lighting up the sumits for a long distance. Shocks were felt the same afternoon throughout the State. Scientists predict than Mexico is about to undergo a general seismic convulsion.

I beg to say that contrary to announcements which appeared in the Peterborough papers for the past two months, I DO NOT intend to remove to T. THE ROSS SELECTIONS.

To the Editor of the Review.

DEAR SIR,—It must be with a feeling of pain that all lovers of peace and harmony read the controversy between the Rev. Mr. Bell and Mr. J. B. McWilliams. Is it possible the time has come when ministers of the gospel are not allowed to express opinions regarding the use of the Bible without being accused of entering into politics? If they are not at to discuss this question to whom are we to look?

Mr. McWilliams knows that the part he has taken in this discussion is distasteful to a large majority of his friends, and is considered by them inconsistent with his obligation as an Orangeman, and it is to be hoped he will take back that unprovoked, uncalled for and ungentlemanly statement he made before the School Board. In the past the study of the Bible has always resulted in promoting good and the public needed not to be told in what families it was read and respected; then from whence this revelation that certain portions are to be forbidden in the future? All true lovers of virtue are of one mind in this matter, therefore it is useless for Mr. McWilliams to shield himself behind test cases and church dignitaries, who will never outlive the license they have given to sceptics. The Loyal Orange Association (of which he has the honor of being a distinguished officer) is made up largely of men holding Conservative views, therefore Mr. McWilliams' position amongst them is a proof of the non-political principles of that Society. Its principles are religious liberty, Roman Catholics not excepted (as some very wise people would have you believe), an open Bible and that in total, and it will not allow either assumed friends or open enemies stand in the way. But what influence can it have if it permits its champion to declare himself an enemy to the very first principles of its constitution and to be the direct cause of such language as is being used by the Bobcaygeon Independent, and we think it very independent especially of good judgment. "Back Pew Layman" seems to have been in possession of his senses particularly in choosing his name, nothing could be more suitable excepting, "Out of Hearing," or "Away from Influence."

Yours truly,
HAMILTON LACKEY.
Fraserville, May 7th, 1887.

BELLEVILLE.

A LARGE FISH.—Mr. W. Kelly, Sidney, was in the city on Friday morning, and brought with him intelligence of a large fish that was captured in the Trent river near Gilmour & Co's water privilege. The envied fisherman is Milton Vandewaters, of Sidney. Together with a number of other young men he was fishing at an early hour in the morning—about 3 a. m.—when the tackle got entangled in what he thought was a rock. He soon found that whatever he had captured was possessed of too much animation for a rock, and summoned others of the party to his aid. His brother, Marsh Vandewaters, sprang into the water, and discovered that an immense sturgeon had been captured. The fish fought madly for liberty, but through the united efforts of the party was finally landed. It measured 6 feet 9 inches in length, and weighed 168 pounds. Old fishermen say it is the largest fish ever captured in these waters. About 1 o'clock in the afternoon the fish passed down Front street in a light waggon. The tail hung over the back board and almost touched the ground. It attracted crowds of spectators.—Intelligencer.

A Significant Incident.

QUEBEC, May 9.—A significant incident took place in the Assembly this evening. A member moved for copies of the Provincial archives from the "Conquest to Confederation." This seemingly innocent motion caused a storm, and Faucer de St. Maurice moved that the word "Conquest" be changed to "Cession," as the country was never conquered.

Reception of the Governor-General.

OTTAWA, May 9.—The mayor has called a public meeting for Thursday night to consider the proposal to give a reception to the Governor-General on his return from Toronto, as a protest against Mr. O'Brien's visit.

More Miner's Bodies.

NEW YORK, May 9.—A despatch from Nanaimo, B.C., says 35 bodies were recovered from the mine yesterday. Up to noon 17 white men had been brought up, and more were coming.

Menaced by Prairie Fires.

GRAND FORKS, Dak., May 9.—A fierce prairie fire is raging 15 miles north of this city, endangering many settlements. A large warehouse of the Minneapolis & Northwestern Elevator Company has been burned.

Hudson River Tunnel.

NEW YORK, May 9.—Work has been resumed on the tunnel under the Hudson River after four years suspension. One hundred men are at work. The company having control of the enterprise has been reorganized, and it is said that they will push it to completion.

Fatal Result of a Feud.

WINNIPEG, Man., May 9.—Yankton, an Indian, was maliciously shot and killed on Friday night on the reserve, seven miles from Deloraine, in Southern Manitoba, by another Indian named John Studhorse. The shooting was the result of an old feud between the two Indians.

O'Brien at New York.

NEW YORK, May 9.—The steamship Umbria, with Wm. O'Brien, editor of United Ireland, and Bishop Ireland, of Minnesota, on board, was unable to cross the bar at high water this morning on account of the fog and will now remain at anchor outside until six o'clock this evening.

Reduced Freight Rates.

CHICAGO, May 9.—The decision of the Interstate Commission not to suspend for the benefit of some of the North-Western roads the operation of section four of the interstate law, and thus enable them to compete on through traffic with the Lake Superior routes, settles the long and short haul question for the North-Western roads. The managers of the North-Western roads have therefore agreed upon a reduction of the present East and West through traffic tariff of two to five cents per 100 pounds.

About Fizzled Out.

WINNIPEG, May 9.—Four Blood Indians, suspected of firing upon mounted policemen recently, has been arrested and taken to Lethbridge, where they await identification. A MacLeod despatch says: "Inspector Saunders and thirty men went to the Blood reserve yesterday to arrest seven Indians, supposed to have fired on Mounted Police and teamsters recently, but the Indians could not be found. The Chief volunteered to assist to make the arrests and accompanied the police." The annual spring scare has about fizzled out. Lieut.-Governor Dewdney on being interviewed at Regina, said that some of the young Blood Indians, with some of the South Piegans, were probably off the reserve as usual in spring, and that one of the horse stealing expeditions might have fired off their guns as a warning not to approach nearer, but not for the purpose of killing any one. There was not the slightest occasion for alarm.

Feeding Bees in May.

Large quantities of brood are reared this month, and after the red buds of the soft maple have put forth their heads there will be plenty of natural pollen for the bees to gather. If there are no maples or willows in your immediate vicinity, take some dry unbolted rye-flour, mix it with saw-dust or cut straw, and set in a sunny corner, sheltered from the wind, when, if the bees require it, they will carry it freely. In localities where there is honey in the blossoms at this season, the bees will gather it very rapidly, and the more honey they get the faster the stock increases. Where there are not enough honey-producing flowers, by all means feed, at the entrance, say about a gill of hot feed every night. By feeding thus, your stock will increase very rapidly, and when the honey begins to flow, you will have strong stock to gather it. Again, should there be honey in the blossoms, and cold and rainy weater set in, feed as above, for should the weather continue cold, the bees would naturally commence to destroy the work already accomplished, by tearing out and destroying the hatching brood. If you keep your bees for increase only, feed them every night, and continue to do so until honey can be gatherdd in abundance. —American Agriculturist.

Game Killed on the Rail.

A veteran engineer of the Erie railroad in speaking of his experience said:—

"You would be surprised to see the number of small animals and birds killed on railroads. It is surprising to see game which hunters find most difficult to catch meet death under the wheels of the often times slow-going coal and freight trains. Woodchucks, skunks, snakes, nearly all kinds of squirrels, racoons, and even the fleet-footed rabbits and foxes are frequently run over.

"The other afternoon a rabbit started to cross the track at Vail's Gate, on the Erie, in front of my No. 6 accommodation. A freight train reached the spot on the down track at the same time, and the poor little rabbit was caught in such a way that the wheels of my train clipped his head of as clean as though it had been done with a sharp axe, no part of his body being bruised.

"Last fall an old racoon having four young ones in tow, tried to cross the track near Pine Hill, on the Erie. The mother was knocked to pieces, while her children escaped. A compassionate trackman killed the four little ones with a spiking hammer and took them home to eat. He said they tasted like nice turkey.

"Telegraph wires are also death traps for winged game. Quail, partridges, woodcocks, and smaller birds that are not game are often killed when flying in flocks by striking wires."

If the Sufferers from Consumption, Scrofula and General Debility, will try Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, with hypophosphites, they will find immediate relief and a permanent benefit. Dr. H. V. Mott, Brentwood Cal., writes "I have used Scott's Emulsion with great advantage in cases of Phthisis, Scrofula and Wasting Diseases. It is very palatable." Put up in 50c and $1 size.

A MESSAGE FROM THE DEAD.

Bringing up the Bodies of the Frightful Vancouver Disaster.

NANAIMO, May 9.—Thirty-five bodies were found yesterday. Up to noon sixteen white men have been brought to the surface. They were: James Thomas, John Richards, Thos. Martin, Edward Wilkins, William Bane, Joseph Bane, Joseph Watson, James Milton, Edward John, John J. Smith, Edward Benton, Joseph Thompson, David Morgan, Jno. C. Fallen, Jonathan Bramley, jr., Arthur Ellis and James Campbell. More bodies are coming up, and all of the balance of the 35 discovered yesterday morning will be up soon. A shovel was found on which was written with chalk,

"Thirteen hours and now dying in misery."

(Signed) "John Evans." This was a young fellow 22 years of age. The men were evidently conscious, then, thirteen hours after the explosion and many survived that time five or six hours. They were all found in No. 1, level. They had come as far as the half-way switch and found the cave in and the air bad. They then set to work with picks and shovels, and barricaded the passage to shut out the after-damp. They retraced their steps to the air shaft where the fire-damp had caught them, and all succumbed. They tried hard to barricade this passage also, but did not succeed very well. The poor fellows had made a desperate struggle for life and when all hope was gone they must have known a terrible disaster had occurred, or help would have reached them. That plucky young boy had left the message quoted above. Other messages may be found, some supposing they may have scratched a few words on their dinner cans. The fire is now under control, and it is hoped all the bodies will be recovered within the next few days. Nothing was to be seen yesterday on the streets but people silently moving restlessly back and forth between the mine and the town; all kinds of waggons bearing linen wrapped corpses to their late homes or funeral processions winding their way to the cemetery. The following additional bodies have been brought up:—Geo. Bowden, Geo. Simmons, John Stevenson, Wm. Gilbert, David Ellis, John Malcolm, John McGuffie, Wm. Popplewell, Rob. Buffington and ten Chinese making 25 whites and ten Chinese recovered yesterday. Some Chinese writing has been discovered on a door, but no Chinaman could be got to go down to translate it. The bodies of twenty-five men are now lying in the school house being washed and prepared for burial. The bodies are viewed for the last time by hundreds of sorrowing relatives and friends and buried as fast as they can be taken to the cemetery.

SAD HAVOC

Caused in Mexico by Tuesday's Earthquake—Immense Loss of Life.

NOGALES, Ariz., May 9.—The earthquake last Tuesday created sad havoc in the northeasterly portion of Sonora, Mex. This portion of the state is far from railroad or telegraphic communication. The following despatch was received here from Luise Torres, Governor of Sonora:—

"HERMOSILE, Mex., May 8.—The earthquake caused terrible damage in Montezuma. It destroyed several villages, but those in the Northeastern part suffered most. Terrifyopute had all its houses destroyed and one hundred and fifty people were killed. Houses were levelled to the ground. A new volcano appeared, and its eruption destroyed all the timber and pastures of the adjoining valleys and mountains. Further details are expected hourly."

The volcano mentioned is in the famous Sierra Madra mountains. In this place a pretty severe shock of earthquake was felt this morning at two o'clock.

TACHEREAU AND MERCIER.

A Letter from the Cardinal on the Jesuit Bill and the Premier's Reply.

QUEBEC, May 9.—The correspondence exchanged between Cardinal Taschereau and Premier Mercier since the passing of the Jesuit Bill is published this morning, and shows that something very like a complete rupture has taken place between the two. In his last letter the Cardinal says:

"It is in vain after this that you assert your great respect for me personally and the other Canadian prelates and your submission to their simplest desire on religious matters. I cannot admit that the question is so completely a civil one, that the bishops have nothing to do with it. I do not reproach you for your devotion to your old professors, but I complain of the language you used towards the episcopacy and your persitence in refusing to them a thing altogether right and which, without hurting anybody, could only contribute to the maintenance of peace between Church and State."

In his final reply the Hon. Mr. Mercier says:

"It is evidently useless for me to try to explain myself to your Eminence. You will have it that I am in the wrong in daring to defend the cause of these holy men. In a Catholic House in France the legislators expel the Jesuits and refuse the rights of other citizens. In the Province of Quebec legislators protect and grant them civil rights. In France the legislators are rightly censured by the religious authorities because of this iniquitious persecution. In this province legislators are threatened with the displeasure of a prince of the Church because they have deemed it their duty to sustain the Jesuits.

I must avow that I cannot understand these strange anomalies. But no matter. I shall not the less remain submissive to the religious authorities."

Programme of the Meetings.

MONTREAL, May 9.—At a meeting of the committee appointed to make arrangements for the reception of Mr. Wm. O'Brien held to night, a slight change was made in the dates in which Mr. O'Brien is to visit the different cities. He is to lecture here on the 11th, Quebec on the 12th, Ottawa on the 14th, Kingston on the 16 and Toronto on the 17th. Invitations from Hamilton and Pembroke had to be declined, as Mr. O'Brien can only spend ten days in this country.

LATIN AND GREEK CHURCHES.

ROME, May 9.—It is stated that the Pope and the Czar are negotiating, through a noble Lombard monk, with a view to the reunion of the Greek and Latin Churches. As the Pope is willing to let the Greek Church retain its own manner of worship it is expected that the negotiations will be successful.

THEY FOUGHT WITH PISTOLS.

LONDON, May 9.—A duel was fought at Pesth on Saturday by two students. One was shot dead, a ball passing through his liver.

PAPER WHEELS DISCONTINUED.

BERLIN, May 9.—So-called American paper wheels for railways have proved unfit, hence all German railway managers have discontinued their use.

RUSSIA AND GERMANY.

FRENCH ARMY MOBILIZATION.

PARIS, May 9.—General Boulanger has drafted a bill for the experimental mobilization of the French army next October.

FORTY PERSONS BURNED TO DEATH.

VIENNA, May 9.—A hot sirocco blew the whole of last week throughout Hungary, parching vegetation and rendering it inflammable. At Torocezko 300 houses were burned and forty lives were lost. The conflagration lasted two days. At Ruskberg a church and thirty-seven houses were destroyed. Many houses were burned at Meregyo. At Eperies all the churches and public buildings were destroyed, and the cemetery devastated. It is estimated that the total loss will exceed $2,500,000. Rain is now falling.

COLLISION.

HAVRE, May 9.—The collision between the steamers La Champagne and Ville de Roi took place about noon in a fog. The shock was so violent that the Champagne was thrown almost completely over upon the starboard bow. A wide [illegible] two yards long, was opened in the latter [illegible] near the [illegible] The captain, finding it impossible to return to Havre, ran the steamer aground on a sandy beach in order to save the lives on board.

THE AMEER MEDITATES FLIGHT.

LONDON, May 9.—The government's latest advices from St. Petersburg concerning the rupture of the commission which was negotiating the question of the Afghan frontier are simultaneous with news via Lahore of the imminence of a total breaking up of the Ameer's government. The Ameer has sent the greatest portion of his treasure into India for security, and meditates flight as the only chance of personal safety left him. The India government is reported to have advised the home government to assent to an advance of the British troops to Candahar. The Russian advance to Herat has been long delayed already.

THE PARIS EXHIBITION.

LONDON, May 9.—The Post says that the English Government has declined to take part officially in the French exhibition, but will give every possible facility to British exhibitors.

THE FRENCH EXHIBITION.

HAVRE, May 9.—Prime Minister Goblet opened the Maritime exhibition here yesterday and delivered the inaugural address. After commenting on the progress of France under a republican form of government, he concluded as follows:—"May this exhibition prepare the way for that of 1889. A people occupied with such cases as these cannot be suspected of harboring aggressive projects, though it never forgets to provide for its own honor and dignity. If it addresses itself to other people it expects to challenge them to a contest of worth or to offer them loyal hospitality. We cherish the hope that this will be understood."

TURKEY WANTS TO KNOW.

LONDON, May 9.—A despatch from Constantinople says the Porte has asked the Spanish Government to explain its action in authorizing the formation of a coaling station on the Red Sea.

THE BULGARIAN THRONE.

LONDON, May 9.—The Bulgarian Regents have invited Prince Alexander to reascend the Bulgarian throne, and assure him that they are willing to run all risk of his doing so, even to a direct issue with Russia. Prince Alexander, however, refuses to return to the country except with the sanction of the European powers.

THE BILL ONCE MORE.

LONDON May 9.—The House went into committee, and consideration of the Irish Crimes Act Amendment Bill was resumed. Mr. Clancy, Nationalist member for North Dublin, moved an amebdment to the effect that magisterial inquiries into cases of alleged crime under the bill be conducted in public. Mr. Balfour opposed this. Mr. Clancy's amendment was rejected.

LAWFUL CONDUCT.

DUBLIN, May 9.—In the case of John Dillon against Police Inspectors O'Brien and Davis for assault and illegal seizure of money and papers at Loughrea, the Court of Queen's Bench has adjudged that the conduct of the police was lawful.

THE BURMAH CAMPAIGN.

LONDON, May 9.—Circumstantial private reports from Burmah show that Gen. Roberts has not succeeded better than his predecessors in subduing the country. Now that the garrisons are compelled to move back at the approach of the deadly hot season, fresh swarms of natives press upon their retreat, believing it to be a confession of weakness. Wherever insurgents are found they are killed offhand, but the soldiery are said to be disgusted with this profitless butchery. Old Indian officers are quoted as declaring that Burmah is by far the most difficult task England has undertaken in a century and one well-nigh hopeless, and even if she succeeds it is not worth the trouble.

The Daily Review.

TUESDAY, MAY 10, 1887.

MR. MOWAT'S DEFENDER.

If the Kingston Whig had good grounds for finding fault with the REVIEW it would not think it necessary to misrepresent us as it does. We do not think, and we have not said, that "the election of Mr. Baird for Queen's County, N. B., is as justifiable as that of Mr. Leys for Toronto," for we believe that both are unjustifiable. That is where we differ from the Whig, which has no objection to a wrong by which its party gains, while we object to wrong-doing wherever we find it. It is mere quibbling to say that "Toronto had the choice of three members," for the Conservative majority had only a choice as to two members, having no voice at all as to the third, that choice being fraudulently reserved by Mr. Mowat for his party, for the express purpose of attacking the first principle of representative government by falsifying the popular verdict in his favor. That the election was in accordance with the law is an aggravation rather than a mitigation of the evil, for a legislature, though it may have the power, has no more right than a company or an individual to act knavishly.

As to the Queen's County case, we have expressed our opinion. But the opinions of individuals cannot decide such matters. The present question is whether in pursuance of the deliberately adopted policy of the country it should be left to our courts of law to redress any wrong and punish any wrongdoing in the matter, or whether Parliament should make itself the judge, with the risk that there might be partizanship, and the certainty that it would be suspected. It must also be remembered that it would be a precedent for interference in other cases. If Parliament is to be the judge of which candidate is rightfully elected the present law should be repealed and there should be a return to the old system. We suppose this is the Whig's view, as it ridicules the idea that "Parliament which makes the laws, does not know the meaning of them as well as the men the Government appoints for the administration of them." We cannot agree with it, thinking that questions as to elections should be removed from the political arena.

We have not been able to oblige the Whig by saying that "Sir John Macdonald committed a grave political blunder," for we are not aware of his having done so. If Sir [illegible] overpaid offices, imposing additional burdens on the people, and have given it to his son, we would assuredly have objected. We have more than once dissented from what has been said or done by the Macdonald Administration, Conservative members and leading Conservative journals, and we shall continue to do so if the occasion arises.

As the Whig says, we have given it credit for being less blinded by partizanship than some Reform journals. It has, for instance, expressed its disapproval of Mr. Mowat's dishonest use of his official patronage for the benefit of his own family, that is of himself, and of his having meddled with the constituency of Kingston. We are, therefore, disappointed that it should defend Mr. Mowat in the iniquity of stealing by statute their due representation in the Legislature rom the Conservative majority of Toronto, and that it should have no condemnation for the dishonest gerrymandering by means of which the majority supporting Mr. Mowat in the very House which perpetrated this injustice was elected by a minority of the popular vote of the Province.

NOT SURRENDERED.

There seems to be in some quarters a widely erroneous idea that the authorities of Canada or of the Empire or of both of them have made a surrender of our territorial rights to the United States. The firmness with which both Canada and the Empire have repelled the aggressive demands from Washington in regard to our fisheries might have led these lamenters to suspect that they were mistaken.

The following is the Canadian proposition:—

"Lord Lansdowne replied on February 26:—'In reply to your telegram of 24th February, my Government will accept your suggestion of reverting temporarily to the condition of things existing under the Treaty of Washington, and do not at present desire to raise the question of indemnity.'"

It will be seen that the suggested arrangement was only temporary, pending the action of a joint commission which was being discussed in the correspondence between Ottawa, Westminster and Washington. The reply from Washington to this offer has not yet been made public, but even if it is an acceptance further discussion must follow as to the exact nature of the formal agreement. As we have said before, no assurance however satisfactory, can be regarded as sufficient if coming only from the Executive of the United States, for we know by experience that Congress does not honour such a pledge.

There has been no surrender of our territory, and there is no reason to fear that there will be any, while the interests of Canada are so well guarded.

The Maritime Provinces are collectively and individually clamouring for better terms. They declare that their revenues will not suffice to meet their expenditures, and therefore they are begging from the Dominion. Why should they not try to economize in a very obvious manner? They have three Lieutenant-Governors, three Administrations, six Chambers and 156 Legislators. Yet Ontario with a far larger population and more extensive territory is able to manage with one Lieutenant-Governor, one Administration, one Chamber and 90 members. Why should the people of this Province be asked to contribute towards the cost of such absurdly extravagant expenditure on the machinery of Government. If our brethren by the sea find they cannot afford such luxuries they would do well to consolidate their three Provinces into one. They would then be able to pay their way, and they would find no obstacle placed in their path.

ENNISMORE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Sad Accident.—On Monday last a young son of Philip Crough went into the barnyard. He was found some time after lying unsensible among the cattle. After being carried into the house it was some hours before he returned to consciousness, when he could only say a cow kicked him. Dr Bingham, who was in attendance, thought it might have been the born of the cow, or a young horse may have struck him; at all events he received a severe blow above the ear, and a little more would have proved fatal. We are are happy to add he is now fast recovering.

A Fall.—A few days ago the family of Edward Flaherty were moving into the house of the late Mr. O. Dowd. One of the daughters fell into the cellar, severely injuring herself. She is recovering and will soon be round again.

The Floating Bridge.—Through the exertions of W. B. Kelly, caretaker of our floating bridge, it is again fit for travel, after its usual spring wrecking, which is thankfully acknowledged by travellers from the north, more especially as the road about Lancaster bridge is in such a dangerous condition, people with teams being under the necessity of going round by Bethel Church. It is astonishing that the township of Emily or the County of Victoria does not attend to the road, as it is now becoming a yearly occurence.

Evictions in Ottawa.

Ottawa, May 9.—Two genuine evictions took place here to-day. Families by the name of Potter and Haig were forcibly ejected from their houses on Augusta street by the landlord, who had warned them to leave repeatedly, they always refusing. The property on which the houses were built was ordinance land, and had been purchased by the landlord from the Government. The ejected tenants thought they had some rights as squatters, and hence refusal to leave. There was some commotion over the evictions, which were resisted, and the officers had to break in the houses with axes and carry the furniture out.

Nine Persons Drowned.

New Orleans, La., May 9.—Yesterday morning a number of colored people belonging to the congregation of Mount Zion Baptist Church, assembled on the wharf at the head of Lizardi street to be baptised by immerson. The wharf railing gave way; about fifty persons were precipitated into the river. Seven children and one colored and one white women were drowned.

About Animals.

Two birds fought so desperately over the site of a projected nest that they eventually fell dead in the roadway, opposite the Theater Royal, London.

A California opossum killed and ate a setting hen and then sat on the eggs, but these were faithful to the memory of their mother, and would not hatch.

An ivy-twined retreat of English sparrows in the yard of Thomas Cox, of Albany, Ga., yielded two bushels of nests and 164 eggs, when he concluded to make a raid upon it.

A dog belonging to John Davidson, of Newcastle, Pa., found it too cold nights out doors, so at 11 o'clock one night he pulled the rope that rang the farm bell. The household was alarmed, but the cause of the ringing was soon apparent. The dog continued his exercise at the same hour until he was made comfortable in the house every night.

A flock of crows, says a western reporter, who presents affidavits touching his veracity, saw a dog dining on a piece of raw meat. They lit near him, and while one of them nipped the dog's tail, causing him to turn around, others in front snapped up the meat and flew into a high tree, where the flock finished the meat and pleasurably watched the dog as he mourned his loss.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

WE WANT THE WHOLE COUNTRY

To come and see what we are doing, therefore I WILL PAY RAILROAD FARE within a radius of 100 Miles of Peterborough to every person coming to Peterborough and purchasing $10 worth of Goods or upwards from me.

Remember, I have Removed from the old store in the Arcade Buildings, under the Opera House, and I am now located in the Store formerly known as the BON MARCHE. You cannot mistake my place. There are Four Life-size signs on front of Building, and see the name COUGH, the Clothier, above them. Be not deceived by any catch-penny clothiers, but go straight to COUGH, the Terror to High-Price Clothiers, George Street, Peterborough.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS

MR. MOWAT WARNED.

The Montreal Witness, confessedly liberal,—at the same time sufficiently independent to honestly denounce indecent departure of its reform friends from avouched principles—gave Hon. Mr. Mercier a terrible hetchelling lately. And if the Premier of Quebec be the kind of time-serving politician our cotemporary asserts, and furnishes proof in evidence to establish its assertion, we warn the Premier of Ontario to be careful as to the nature of the alliance he may form with that politician in the proposed Provincial conference.—Newmarket Era (Reform.)

A CONTRACT SUBLET.

Jay Gould's son is already president of three railroad companies. The Goulds are after the whole earth sure, and have sublet to Mr. Wiman the contract of capturing Canada.—Toronto World (Indep.)

MERCIER THROUGH GRIT GLASSES.

The new regime is hardly launched before the Legislature is greeted with a bill to hand over all streets of all cities, towns and villages to a corporation which shall have power to lay surface or elevated railways at its pleasure. This is the most stupendous invasion of popular rights yet developed.—Montreal Witness (Reform.)

MERCIER AND MOWAT.

The Sherbrooke prothonotaryship, rendered vacant by the sudden death of the last occupant, will it is said, be offered by Mr. Mercier to Mr. Bowen, who will, it is believed, accept the position. Mr. Mercier will, by this move, remove the grievances of Mr. Bowen's friends, but he will still be condemned by all who detest the traffic in office by which the Government strengthen themselves.—Montreal Witness (Reform)

POOR OLD LADY.

The poor old Globe actually believes that the proposed arrangement about the fisheries for the present season is to be permanent, and that Canada is to get nothing for her fisheries save a free market in the States. Under this delusion it is pounding Sir John and Lord Salisbury. It should be put in charge of a keeper.—Toronto World (Indep.)

MR. MEREDITH'S INFLUENCE.

The Grit Government of Ontario have been driven to provide for the abolition of competition between the labor of convicts in the Provincial prisons, and that of free and honest men. Tally one more for Mr. Meredith and the Conservatives.—Belleville Intelligencer.

THE POLICY OF REVENGE.

It seems to us, we must say, very surprising that journals with any pretensions to respectability, particularly journals that profess to represent higher and purer political methods than those heretofore in vogue, should so openly exult in the revenge taken by their chief upon the lumbermen of the province for their past attachment to the opposite party. One may safely conclude from the way the Government organs state the case that had the lumber merchants been friends of the present Government Mr. Mercier would never have thought of this particular method of replenishing the exhausted treasury. And this is what we are called on to admire as an example of pure administration of public affairs!—Montreal Star (Indep.)

DOMESTIC AND USEFUL.

Castors for heavy furniture made of leather are a late invention. They are easier on carpets than metal.

When attacked by palpitation of the heart let the patient lie down as soon as possible on the right side, partially on the face. In this position the heart will resume its action almost immediately.

To preserve goods from moths, do not use camphor in any form. Pieces of tar paper laid in fur boxes and in closets are a better protection. Five cents will buy enough to equip all the packing boxes and closets of a large house for a year.

Ladies do not take off their hats and wraps when making a formal call. If they have lace veils over their faces it is not considered necessary to remove them; that would be a matter of convenience, and one is at liberty to do as she pleases in that.

A German writer gives this as a remedy for inflammatory rheumatism, of which malady he was cured in two days' time:—Make a soup of the stocks and roots of celery, cut the celery into bits, boil it in water till soft, then serve warm on pieces of toasted bread; drink the celery water. In Germany the roots and stalks are boiled and eaten as salad with oil and vinegar.

To Boil Salmon.—Put it in boiling water for a minute or two, and then draw the kettle to the side where it won't boil, or only very slowly. 1 lb. of salmon takes a quarter of an hour; 2 lbs. 26 minutes; a thick cut of about 5 lbs. half an hour; for a small fish 25 minutes; a whole fish 7 or 8 pounds takes half an hour. Let the salmon remain in the water after it is boiled five or ten minutes to firm it; salt in the water, of course.

Another Fortune Made.

Omaha Man—Are you making a fair living out of your Kansas farm?

Kansas Man—Living? Why, I'm rich. You see there was a little piece of poor ground back of the dugout which was not fit for anything. Well, one day brother Jake dreamed there was gold under it and the next morning he offered me $100 for it, on long time of course, for he hadn't any money, and I sold it."

"Yes."

"Well, brother Bill heard of Jake's dream and bought the lot of him for $1,000, in the same way you know. Then I got scared and bought it back for $5,000. Then I sold it to Bill for $10,000, and so it went on until a few days ago when I got the lot again and sold it to Jake for $100,000. Just think of it. No more farming for me."

"But what security have you to show for all that value if Jake has no money?"

"Why, I've got a mortgage on the lot."—Omaha World.

Disraeli and the Primrose.

When Benjamin Disraeli was a young man he bet a pair of gloves with a friend on the question whether a wreath of primroses worn by a young lady were natural or artificial. They proved to be natural, and he not only won the bet but the young lady gave him one of the flowers, which he preserved carefully as a souvenir. That incident was the beginning of his love of primroses, and now the Primrose League founded in memory of him is one of the most potent factors in English politics.—N. Y. Tribune.

"Oppress not nature, sinking down to rest,
With feasts too late, too solid, or too full."

Armstrong, when he wrote these lines, gave good scientific advice. Half of our people suffer from dyspepsia in some of its many forms. Life becomes a burden, and business worries and annoys. The "Golden Medical Discovery," invented and prepared by Dr. Pierce, is an effectual remedy for indigestion. By druggists.

Lord Salisbury, at a banquet given to Mr. Goschen on Saturday night, said that the Government was neither Conservative nor Liberal, but essentially Unionist, with the greater questions of the Empire holding the foremost place in their regard.

Astonishing Success

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all Druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive at least to try one bottle, as 70,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggist about it. Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers, in the United States and Canada. d90

This combination produces a quintette of rare excellence, highly eulogized by the people of Montreal and other cities.

Profits of the Bell Telephone Business.

In reference to an item which appeared in several Canadian papers last week, calling attention to the receipts and expenses of the Bell Telephone Company (which was naturally taken by the Canadian public to refer to the telephone business here), the Vice-President of the Bell Telephone Company of Canada writes to say that the company meant is the American Bell Telephone Company, of Boston, and that the Bell Telephone Company of Canada is an entirely different concern, having no interest in the American Company, but owning its own patents and operating its own exchanges and lines, and that the dividends of the Canadian Company, since its organization seven years ago, have not averaged over five per cent. per annum. Even the business of the American Company was not correctly stated in the item mentioned above, the expense according to its last annual statement, having been nearly a million dollars more than the amount stated.

Your chance to-day to secure the best value in Ladies Jerseys even shown in Peterborough. Sheppard is now offering some beautiful goods in black and colors at fully 50 per cent. less than wholesale prices.

Uxbridge Organ Co.

The directors of the Uxbridge Organ Company are to arrive in town on Saturday as per arrangement with Mr. Geo. A. Cox. A committee of the Town Council will meet them and show them around town. The directors are coming here with a view to establish their organ factory here, provided sufficient inducements are offered.

Church Music.

At the praise service on Monday evening in St. Paul's Church the Rev. E. F. Torrance paid a high compliment to Mr. Parker and to the choir. He regretted that he was not able at present to give an address as was announced in the programme, but promised that on some future occasion he would give an address on the subject of church music.

Jubilee.

A meeting was held in the Council Chamber for the purpose of making arrangements for the celebration of the Queen's Jubilee. It was decided to strike committees from the various societies of the town, these committees to meet, make arrangements and appoint a committee from the number to carry out the scheme to be proposed.

Personal.

Mr. G. V. Clementi has arrived from Florida on a visit. His appearance indicates that the southern climate agrees with him, and he is well pleased with his location. Mr. W. Nesbitt and family were well when he left. Mr. Clementi will remain here until September.

Mr. Johnston Carey's many friends are glad to see that he is able to attend to business again. He has been subjected to a severe sickness, made the worse by his children being bedfast at the same time. Happily all are now recovered.

We May Expect.

—The festive fizz of the soda water fountain.
—Ice cream.
—Joy among the girls.
—And bankruptcy among the young fellows.
—Thermometers to perspire.
—And refuse to do duty if it gets much hotter.
—The sporting men to get into their uniforms soon.
—The stoves to take a back seat.
—Great yo heaves to get them out to the back kitchen.
—And backaches to follow.

Service of Praise.

A service of praise was held in St. Paul's Church on Monday evening in connection with the anniversary of the Church opening. The following excellent programme was presented by the director, Mr. Parker:

PROGRAMME.

1 Hundreth Psalm.....Tune, Old Hundred
2 Scripture Lesson.....
3 Chorus. The Heavens are Telling ...Haydn
(From the Creation.)
4 Recitative—Aria—Why is Thy Countenance Sad—When Swells the Sorrow-Laden Breast—(From the Widow of Nain.) Caldicott
Miss Haultain.
5 Organ Solo....The Bell Offertoire....Batiste
Mr. J. E. Jaques.
6 Anthem....Hark, What Mean Those Holy Voices.....Verdi
7 Hymn 281....The Sands of Time are Sinking
Tune, Rutherford
8 Selections from the Messiah.....Handel
Recitative.... Comfort Ye.... Mr. Manning
Aria. But Thou Did'st Not Leave His Soul in Hell.....Mrs. Mein
Aria....I Know That My Redeemer Liveth
Miss Vair.
Chorus.....Hallelujah
9 Organ Solo. Prelude and Fugue.—E. Minor..Bach
Mr. E. Jaques.
10 Aria....O Rest in the Lord....Mendelssohn
(From Elijah.)
Miss Ellsworth.
11 Sacred Song....The Great Master....Barri
Mr. Bagueley.
12 Anthem. O Praise God..Dr. Clarke Whitfield
13 Hymn 68....Blessing and Honor and Glory and Power.....Tune, Naaman.

The various numbers were well taken. All of the choruses were well rendered, but "The Heavens are Telling" and the "Halleujah Chorus" were exceptionally fine. Mr. Parker showed much skill in training the upwards of fifty voices in these different selections, as was evidenced by their rendition on Monday evening. The recitative solo and the aria taken by Miss Haultain were very sweetly and pathetically interpreted. Mr. Manning's solo, "Comfort Ye," was given in his usual good style. Mrs. Mein was in excellent voice, taking the aria "But Thou Didst Not Leave His Soul in Hell," with great credit. Miss Vair sang the aria "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth," in full, smooth voice and with pleasing cadence. Her expression was exact and bestowed with good taste. Mr. Jaques, of the George Street Methodist Church, the solo organist, contributed a solo which was much appreciated. Miss Ellsworth sang "Oh! Rest in the Lord," and Mr. Baguley took the last solo on the programme, "The Great Master," in which his fine bass voice was displayed to good advantage. The service ended with the pronouncing of the benediction and the singing of the National Anthem.

Arrived at Turnbull's by express, several quite New and Stylish Shapes in Bonnets and Hats, such as the Graceful, Tandem, Toboggan, Sylvia, Northwood, Essex, and others too numerous to mention.

POLICE COURT.

DRUNK.

MONDAY, May 9.—Jas. Bird was before the Court again on a charge of having been drunk. He pleaded guilty and was fined $5, the Magistrate adding that he should have taken warning when dealt with with such clemency on Saturday.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE

THE SPRING SITTINGS OF THE ASSIZE COURT.

The first case taken up was that of Boucher vs. Sawers. This case occupied the attention of the court during Monday afternoon, this forenoon and at 2 o'clock to-day was still before the court.

On Monday afternoon no bill was brought in against Mary Holbrook and her brother. His Lordship dismissed the prisoners.

This forenoon two true bills were brought in in the Warner perjury case. The grand jury read the the following presentment:

GRAND JURY PRESENTMENT.

To His Worship Justice O'Connor:—

The Grand Jury of Our Sovereign Lady the Queen, beg to present:

(1) That we have inspected the gaol and find everything in the best of order and condition, both as regards cleanliness and the precautions used to insure the safe keeping of the inmates. The gaol has recently undergone extensive sanitary improvements, and water works have been added, the interior of the building being thus thoroughly protected in the case of fire.

(2) We regret to have to point out that we found incarcerated several parties for whom it seems to us a gaol is no proper asylum. These consist of three helpless idiots and an infant at the mother's breast. The circumstances leading to the painful condition of these unfortunates are too revolting to refer to more specifically in this presentment, and are such as in our opinion call for an investigation and more watchfulness of public morality on the part of the authorities.

(3) We also find insane persons confined to the gaol, unfortunates who have no reason are wearing the garb of criminals. We would suggest that the most earnest endeavors be made to provide accommodation for these in a proper asylum.

All of which is respectfully submitted,
Signed, T. E. FITZGERALD,
Foreman.

HIS LORDSHIP replied agreeing with the Grand Jury that the gaol was no place for idiots and lunatics. A copy of the presentment would be forwarded to the Attorney-General, when no doubt an effort would be made to provide proper accommodation for them. He then dismissed the Grand Jury.

FLOODS IN NEW BRUNSWICK.

Fredericton Submerged—Enormous Losses of Lumbermen.

ST. JOHN, N. B., May 9.—The freshet on the St. John River is now the greatest ever known. Frederjction is practically submerged, only the front street being above [illegible] The Nashwaak and Upper St. John district is still ten feet deep in the woods, no abatement of the flood can be looked for. The loss to lumbermen is beyond estimate, as no booms can be erected, and the winter cut of logs is being carried down the river and spread over the inundated lowlands, from which it will not pay to remove them when the first freshet subsides. One operator to-night puts his loss at $50,000 alone. Every mill is shut down by the flood. At Indiantown, near St. John, half the shops and dwellings are under water. Railway communication with the United States has been suspended by the flood since Sunday week.

Barbour Bros., fish dealers and general merchants, have suspended and are arranging a compromise with their creditors. It is rumoured that several other large firms are involved.

O'Brien's Reception in Montreal.

MONTREAL, May 9.—On arriving at the Bonaventure depot to-morrow evening Mr. O'Brien will be received by a guard of honor composed of members of the Y.I.L. and B., St. Ann's, St. Patrick's, St. Mary's and St. Anthony Catholic young men's societies. He will be escoated to St. Lawrence Hall, where he will be received by the presidents and officers of the various Irish societies in regalia, and will be presented with an address congratulating him on the position he had taken in helping the evicted tenantry, organizing the Plan of Campaign and bringing to light the Dublin Castle scandals.

Keeping the Flower Garden.

A small garden with a few well-chosen, well-grown flowering plants, if kept in scrupulous order and neatness, will be far more gratifying to its owner and to his friends, than a large collection of plants without order, arrangement or neatness. Of course, there is a choice in plants, and a garden of the common flowers, well kept, is far more creditable than a jungle of expensive novelties, left to care for themselves. "Good keeping" in the garden is equivalent to "good keeping" in the house. Both depend upon hundreds of small things, easily done if attended to at the right time. In a large garden a special tool-house will be found most useful, but in a small one a place for the tools must be found in some other building. The wall of a woodshed or of a barn, or a suitable, large, cupboard-like structure, built against a board fence or a building, may be made—indeed, any place that will hold the tools. It is far more important that the tools are brought back to their places after using, than that their places should be showy. In every garden, even a very small one, there occur various materials collectively known as rubbish, which must be disposed of. It is a mistake to have a rubbish heap in some corner, and throw all the refuse matter from the garden upon it. There should be at least three places of deposit for the different kinds of rubbish, if the premises are large enough, otherwise it must be removed altogether.—American Agriculturist.

Marketing Poultry.

State and Western dressed poultry is in a continued state of dullness in the New York markets. As a rule the fowls have been slaughtered without any regard to thriftiness; to save labor they are soused in hot water, so that they may be more easily plucked. The crops of the creatures are full of indigestible food, and the intestines never empty. This internal nastiness soaks through and permeates the flesh; then the whole mass, if frozen hard, is thawed and refrozen and thawed again, till its unsavory end arrives. The poultry packers of Pennsylvania, Delaware and Maryland do otherwise, and far better. The consignments of poultry dressed in these States show care in handling, and command from one to five cents per pound higher rates than do those of their neighbors. Occasionally, during the winter months, Maryland dealers forward drawn poultry to the Eastern States. Boston takes kindly to this cleanly habit, but as yet New York is shy of the innovation. This Maryland poultry is always sweet and well fed, but the slaughterers have to learn that the skin of the carcass must not be torn, the crop must be drawn through the neck, and the intestines removed by widening sufficiently the natural vent of the bird; the legs should be taken off midway in the shank, and the claws properly cleaned and allowed to hang, as pliant nails indicated a young and healthy bird: the head should not be removed, and the throttle must be neatly cleared of blood and feathers must be removed dry, and the inside of the body wiped with a dry cloth. These carresses should be placed for twelve hours in a chilling room, then suspended in nice crates and forwarded in refrigerator cars, when a little energy on the part of commission men would insure a good trade.—American Agriculturist.

THE SAME CLAIM.

The contention of Canada that the marine league be measured from a line drawn from headland to headland, even where these are more than six miles apart, may be unreasonable, but it is our own contention. We claim the whole Chesapeake bay, for example, as American waters, although the distance between Capes Henry and Charles is much more than six miles. In fact, foreign fishermen could enter the Chesapeake and operate over five-sixths of its area and sail out again without coming within a marine league of any shore line. Yet the validity of our exclusive claim to these waters would not be questioned. Is the depth and shape of a bay, then, to be the test of jurisdiction? No such position has ever been taken. Canada makes the same claim to her waters, and no other, that we make to ours; that Spain, Mexico, France, China and every other nation makes. This is not to say that this claim is reasonable, or that it might not wisely be modefied by treaties; but that it is a valid claim, no one possessing any knowledge of the subject denies.—San Francisco News Letter.

ADDRESS FROM THE QUEEN.

LONDON, May 9.—The Queen to-day received at Buckingham Palace, the London Corporation, which called by appointment to present to Her Majesty a Jubilee address on behalf of the city. In response the Queen said:—"I thank you for the renewal of assurance of loyalty and attachment to my throne and person. It gives me great satisfaction in looking back on the history of my reign, to recall how much its prosperity is owing under God to the sound sense and fond feeling of my people. I trust that under the Divine blessing this cordial sympathy may remain unbroken."

No lawn can be long maintained in good order without successive rolling. Mowing alone will not secure a good bottom without that compression which the roller tends to give. Rolling ought to be done early, before the ground becomes dry.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC
FROM
J. J. SHEEHY

I beg to say that contrary to announcements which appeared in the Peterborough papers for the past two months, I DO NOT intend to remove to T. Dolan & Co's Dry Goods Store, nor have I any connections whatever with that establishment. The final arrangements not being satisfactory to me, I withdrew from the projected change, and intend carrying on the Dry Goods business in my usual stand next to Lech's Hat Store.

It is my intention in the future as in the past to show at all seasons nothing but new and fresh goods in the various lines of Dry Goods and Gent's Furnishings; and by doing so, hope to retain the confidence which I am proud to say, I have enjoyed from the public since commencing business two years ago.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 11, 1887.

WILLIAM O'BRIEN

Explains to the New York Reception Committee the Object of His Visit.

NEW YORK, May 10.—Mr. O'Brien was submitted to various annoyances by his fellow passengers on the voyage out. Bishop Ireland on one occasion rebuked him, saying he could call on six hundred passengers from the steerage who would drown them out. This one of the passengers affected to regard as a threat. Mr. O'Brien thanked the committee, who met him, again and again, for their unexpected and hospitable welcome. He would say that he was engaged on what was, to some extent, perhaps, a dangerous mission. Lord Lansdowne had been chosen by the landlords as the pioneer and champion of that body in the work of extermination. They had not been able to stem the torrent of evictions, but they had been able to protect the tenants who had had the pluck to adopt the plan of campaign, and stand by it. Five hundred poor tenants had been evicted in three months of this year in Ireland, but not one who had adopted the plan of campaign, because the tenants were fed and maintained out of the landlords' rents as long as a penny remained. The consequence was that they had made evictions expensive. Lord Lansdowne had made the Luggacurran case a test case, and he had come here to make it a test case too, and to meet him on the steps of his own throne. If Lord Lansdowne thought he could carry one these evictions, he (O Brien) thought there were a million of Irish Canadians who would want to know the reason why. He asked the Canadians to be the judges. He then referred to the trying time in Ireland at present, but he thought they had a leader on whom they could rely in Mr. Parnell. Never before were the people of Ireland so hopeful, and never before were its enemies in such dismay. (Applause.)

Mr. Hugh McCaffrey extended an invitation to Mr. O'Brien to visit Philadelphia, and promised him a rousing reception. The gentlemen present were then introduced to Mr. O'Brien, and pleasant courtesies were exchanged as the boat made its late way to the city. On his arrival here Mr. O'Brien was driven to the Huffman house. He will leave for Canada to-morrow evening.

MOUNT PLEASANT.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ENFORCING THE SCOTT ACT.—The Scott Act has been applied in our village with good effect.

CONVALESCENT.—We are glad to see Mrs. Robert Mills, who has been seriously ill for the last three months, able to drive out again. Under the skilful treatment of Dr. Carmichael we hope to see her regain her former health in a short time.

GARDENING AND SEEDING.—Our villagers are all busy in their gardens, and farmers of this vicinity are busily engaged seeding these fine days too.

MEDAL, DIPLOMA AND PRIZES.—On Tuesday, May 3rd, Mr. W. E. Tilley, M. A., Inspector of Public Schools in this county, made a short visit to our school for the purpose of presenting the school with a medal, a diploma, and three books, which were won by the pupils, on a number of specimens, in drawing, writing, and in methods in arithmetic, at the Colonial Exhibition, held in London, Eng., last season. He congratulated the pupils and teacher on their success, and on being the only school outside of the towns of Port Hope, Bowmanville and Newcastle that received a medal and diploma in this county. It speaks well for the school and for the teacher, Mr. Hickson, who has been here for over seven years as teacher, that out of six medals and diplomas that were awarded to this county, in the Education Department, this school gets one of them. Mr. Tilley expressed himself as being well pleased with the work of the school.

Opposed to Coercion.

CHICAGO, May 10.—A meeting was held last night to give expression to American sentiments in opposition to the suspension of constitutional liberty in Ireland. Six thousand people were present. Mayor Roche presided, and most of the speakers were citizens on American birth, such as Governor Oglesby, Rabbi Hirsch, Wirt Dexter and Rev. Dr. Bolton.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS

FAIR PLAY.

Every Canadian knows that Lord Lansdowne's position in this country is such that however violently and unjustly he may be attacked in the press and on the platform he cannot take his own part. When he is struck he cannot strike back again. Canadians are as pugnacious as the men of their race are generally, and they like well enough to see a well contested fight, but they take no delight in seeing a man whose hands are tied attacked. Their sympathies are sure to be with the man who is taken at a disadvantage and against his assailant.—Montreal Star (Indep.)

MIGHT MAKES RIGHT?

The statesmen on both sides of the line will do well to begin at once and study how this can be brought about peacably and quietly, and with a just regard for the rights of all concerned, lest it may become necessary, as it otherwise will, at some future time, to bring it about suddenly and violently. It is now nothing more than a commercial necessity, but it may become at no distant day a necessity based upon the right of self-preservation, the exercise of which will depend solely upon considerations of expediency, with no restriction except that contained in the arbitrary and primitive law that might makes right.—N. Y. Sun.

CHANGE OF BASE.

The "no danger to manufactures" signal has evidently been taken down; Sir Richard Cartwright's stalwart free trade ideas have been given precedence to Mr. Blake's milk and water promises, and the Liberals are for the workingmen of any country but their own. How the Globe and the New York manufacturers would rejoice to see the Canadian refineries shut up.—Montreal Gazette.

GLOBE PARTISANSHIP.

The Toronto Globe on very meagre information yet before the public with respect to the negotiations on the fishery question between Great Britain and the United States denounces in the strongest terms both the Imperial and the Canadian Governments for the part it supposes they have taken. The extreme bitterness of the Globe and its readiness to jump at conclusions unfavorable to the Dominion Government are apt to give rise to the suspicion that it is just a little more anxious to make capital against its political opponents than to protect the interests of the fisheries. It is very hard for the Globe to take any other than a partisan view of a subject.—Montreal Star (Indep.)

SAVED FROM CALAMITY.

It is the Globe's opinion, however, that the Dominion Government "has virtually thrown away one of the main privileges which Canada had to offer the States in a bargain for the great common advantage of unrestricted reciprocity." Well, so think not we. We believe on the contrary that this Canada of ours has been saved from a gigantic calamity, which our own Grits and certain Americans who "want the earth" would force upon us, if they could.—Toronto World (Indep.)

PROVIDING FOR HIMSELF.

Mr. Fred Mowat, the premier's son, has been appointed sheriff of Toronto. It is a lucrative office, and will practically provide for the premier's family in his declining days.—Lindsay Post (Reform.)

A LITTLE DIFFERENCE.

We are now asserting the claim to prevent foreigners from killing seals far out at sea. The first subject of this claim is an English sealer. We have not yet heard any parliamentary howl on the subject, nor has any British Columbian patriot proposed sending more sealers up north with the object of getting them caught as a basis for "a row" with this country, as the Boston fish peddlers did, nor is the Governor-General importuned to proclaim non-intercourse with us. In short, such antics as our Bostonese and our Congress together have cut up are unknown, and are not conceivable in the intercourse of other civilized nations.—San Francisco News Letter.

PEOPLE OF CANADA.

The people of Canada—that is to say, Goldwin Smith, of England, and Erastus Wiman, of New York—are arranging for a commercial union with the United States.—Hamilton Spectator.

REFORM TREASON.

If the raid on the Federal treasury does not succeed, Mr. Fielding proposes to repeat the threat of secession by means of a new local election. If Mr. Fielding does not know already, he may live to learn that are no terms on which secession could be permitted, and that political blackmail projects will not always be successful. Dalliance with incipient treason must some day reach its permitted limit.—Montreal Times (Indep.)

OUR IRON.

Look, then, at the experience of our American neighbors, who have cheap iron now, and plenty of it. For twenty years they kept up a duty of seven dollars per ton on pig iron and of twenty-five dollars per ton net on steel rails. In 1883 these duties were reduced to six dollars and seventeen dollars respectively, which appear to be good protective figures, we should say. This is how the Americans found their way to cheap iron and steel, of their own production, and we will never make Canada an iron country until we adopt their policy, or something like it. As far charcoal iron, the facilities for its manufacture in Canada are so exceptionally good that the duties on it ought to be prohibitory, the consequence of which would be that in a few years we should be exporting instead of importing it.—Toronto World (Indep.)

Nearly Killed by Strikers.

MONTREAL, May 10.—A number of striking bakers of A. Trudel, of Cote St. Louis, set upon a few of the men engaged to fill their places, seriously injuring a man named Guyon. They next proceeded to the residence of Mr. Trudel, broke open the door and frightened Madame Trudel so badly that serious consequences may follow. Then the men broke into the bakery and one of the ringleaders discharged several revolver shots at the proprietor and his foreman. Failing to hit Mr. Trudel they rushed upon him, and with blows and kicks rendered him almost insensible. After this the whole gang left the premises and made off in different directions. Warrants have been issued for their arrest.

THE MINE HORROR.

Rescuing Parties Still Working—Burials by the Score.

NANAIMO, B. C., May 10.—Yesterday was bright, clear, and a strong contrast to the last few days. Work in the illfated mine is being pushed with vigor. Every effort is being but forward to obtain the bodies which are still in the passage. Last night an exploring party penetrated to within 25 yards of the end of the slope. One of the party informed a correspondent that the effects of the explosion, as seen in this slope, were very severe. Caves from the roof and the walls were very plentiful. All these caves consisted of cold, and are very plentiful in this slope. Here, no doubt, was where the explosion orginated. Its force must have been terrific. Miners who saw it who have had experience in other explosions tell me that they have never seen anything before to equal it. It was found impossible to go in on account of the large bodies of fire damp. Our party saw three bodies—two Chinamen and one white man—lying across the roadway, but they were unable to reach them, and were reluctantly compelled to return. The bodies of 14 whites and 7 Chinamen were recovered from No. 5 (old) slope, but a short distance from those found on Friday last. They had been making the best of their way out, but were interrupted by a heavy cave from the roof. On top of this cave was found the body of Malcolm McLean, who apparently was heading the party in their efforts to reach the shaft. Behind them were the torches of the rest of the party, who had succumbed to the deadly choke damp. They were lying in all positions—some on their hands and knees; others on their backs; no doubt just in that position in which their tottering limbs supported them in their last efforts. Poor fellows! They had made a partial return from their last shift. Their names are:—A. Mair, H. Runonbrim, J. Borlodo, S. H. Myres, Malcolm McLean, Rod McDonald, W. J. Morgan, N. Johns, J. Bermalu, W. Campbell,—Fulton, P. Ducca, M. Corcoran, A. V. Phillips. They were removed to the school house to-day. The bodies in nearly every instance were much disfigured and somewhat decomposed. The Vancouver Coal Company, under Mr. Bobbins' management, are sparing no expense in finding a fitting interment for the dead. Business is still suspended and will be for some time to come.

To-day funerals were passing on every street and almost every half hour. A coroner's inquest will be opened to-morrow morning under Dr. Walker. Mr. Eberts arrived to-day to watch the proceedings on the part of the government and Mr. Drake, Q. C., also arrived by the same train to represent the Vancouver Coal company. The inquest promises to last some time. Miss Callaghan died this morning. She died from "hysteria catilepsy," produced by a shock on viewing the body of her cousin, Lyons the mule driver.

KEENE.

From Our Own Correspondent.

UPSET.—Two young men who were out in a canoe on Monday attempted to shoot the slide. The boat filled with water and upset. The canoeists took an involuntary bath in the strong current, but reached the shore safely.

PRESERVE THE TREES.—Arbor day was celebrated on Friday by a wandering horse caressing the trees and removing some of the bark, probably as souvenirs. It does not improve the trees, but such things continue.

IMPROVEMENTS.—Dr. Harrison is having his house brightened with new paint. His market-garden is in full blast.

POOL.—Two pool tables have been imported and are in use. Keene is becoming citified.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.—The grounds of the Presbyterian Church will be improved by the planting of trees and other work. It will add greatly to the appearance of this pretty church.

FARMING.—The farmers in this vicinity are well advanced with their spring work, and seeding is nearly all done. A good deal of fall wheat was ploughed up, but what remains is looking very well.

LACROSSE.—The Lacrosse Club is in good shape again, and is practising three nights in the week, but will get down to five or six nights a week shortly.

MAY 24TH.—There will be an excursion from Keene to Idyl Wild on May 24th.

The Writ Issued.

The Clerk of the Crown in Chancery has issued the writ for an election in Restigouche, N. B. Nomination will take place on the 21st and the election on the 28th.

Fishery Protection Service.

OTTAWA, May 10.—Lieut. Gordon, R. N., has succeeded Capt. Scott as commanded of the cruiser Acadia. Capt. Scott will direct the operations of the whole fleet from Halifax. Failing a satisfactory settlement the regulations will be enforced. Lieut. Gordon has also been instructed to observe the tides and currents on the coast. Hon. Mr. Foster will visit the coast lightships in the gulf and Nova Scotia this summer, the visit lasting several weeks.

The "Times" Letter.

LINCOLN, Neb., May 10.—The agent of the Associated Press has learned that John Fitzgerald is having photogaphs taken of the letters and documents, the handwriting of Piggot, which are submitted to the expert committee for comparison with the London Times fac-simile letter, and will forward copies to Mr. Parnell and his friends and to the leading members of the Gladstone party so that they may compare the handwriting for themselves with that of the Times letter.

Nothing to do With Fish.

WASHINGTON, May 10.—Inquiry at the war department shows that the questions reported to have been put by the department to the Pennsylvania state officials regarding the strength, equipment and mobility of the militia had no reference whatever to the fisheries controversy, but were intended to secure the information transmitted to congress at every session touching the strength of the militia. Similar enquiries have been put to all the state governments.

A SENSATIONAL RUMOR.

LONDON, May 10.—The Pall Mall Gazette publishes a rumor that the government has ordered to be prepared sixty cells in Millbank prison for the Parnellite members of the House whose arrest they deem necessary. The report is discredited.

THE CZAR'S GREAT PERIL.

LONDON, May 10.—From Russia the news comes that there are great forebodings as to the wisdom of the Czar's impending journey to the Don Cossack country, which he undertakes the Czarevitch to the Cossacks, in accordance with imperial usage. It is a ride of 1,200 miles and although the Imperial train will make no stops, it will evidently be a dubious task to successfully guard the whole line. These doubts become graver from the growing suspicion that large numbers of police are in sympathy with the Nihilists. Revelations of the extent to which the army is undermined continue to increase in seriousness. It is now said that whole regiments have been denuded by arrests of their officers. [illegible] Russia would have to take every military student in the schools to put the army corps in the field. The Czar's uncle Nicholas has gone down ahead to Nova Tcherkask to reconnoitre the situation and stir up enthusiasm. The cossacks are raising a big sum for the demonstration. The town will be completely lighted up by electricity for the first time.

FOREST FIRES IN HUNGARY.

VIENNA, May 10.—Terrible forest fires are raging in Galicia, in Hungary. The fire brigades and military detachments are trying to prevent the spread of the flames. A later despatch says:—The further spread of the forest fires in Hungary has finally been prevented. Four hundred houses have been burned in the village of Csinkoszas and 33 in Jancsaza. A public subscription has been opened for the relief of the homeless.

CLOSER UNION.

LONDON, May 10.—Lord Carnarvon delivered an address yesterday before the London Chamber of Commerce and the Colonial delegates. He condemned the bounty system, but said he thought it safe to prophesy that within a year or two Germany, France, Italy and America would increase their tariffs. Even Russia was now doing so. The Government ought to resist this system. Closer commercial union between ourselves and the colonies, he said, will lead us to act in a spirit not of aggression, but of legitimate commercial defence.

HOSPITAL ABUSES.

VIENNA, May 10.—In the Reichstrath, yesterday, Herr Pergenstorfer called attention to the management of the Allgemines Carnkhaus, the largest hospital in Vienna. He said statements had been made, which appeared to be correct, that patients were given unwholesome and scanty food, and sometimes were kept for days without any food; that there was only one bath in the hospital, and that the nurse and attendants extorted money from patients and ill-treated those who were unable to pay. The Government promised that an exhaustive enquiry would be made.

GUAYMAS, Mex., May 10.—Earthquake shocks continue at Ures. Many buildings have been cracked and rendered unsafe. Nobody has been hurt as yet, but the inhabitants are leaving as fast as possible. A large slice of the mountain near the town fell down with a terrible crash. The friction of the rocks ignited the woods, causing the belief that a volcano had broken out. At the Delicias Santa Elena mine the earthquake caused a great panic. The whole hill fell down, scattering the rocks among one hundred and fifty persons. Fortunately nobody was hurt. The districts beyond telegraphic communication have not been heard from. The authorities are awaiting couriers.

ELECTION CASES.

THE select sub-committee of the Privileges and Elections Committee entrusted with the duty of examining the precedents bearing upon the Queen's, N. B. case, seem to have done their work diligently and well, as might be expected from legal gentlemen of ability chosen from both sides of the House. They have collected a number of precedents throwing more or less light upon the question. An examination of them shows that since the Parliaments at Westminster and Ottawa confided to the judiciary the decision of election cases they have always refused to interfere, leaving the matter to the courts except in one class of cases. They seem practically to have reserved their own jurisdiction to the extent of refusing to allow disqualified candidates to sit among them. This right they have repeatedly exercised, but their is no instance of their having withdrawn election questions from the courts under any other circumstances. We think they have done wisely, and would regret to see a precedent established for deciding such matters in the House with a certainty of charges of partizanship.

TRENT VALLEY CANAL.

THE estimates for the next fiscal year contain an item of $90,000 for Trent Valley Navigation works between Lakefield and Balsam Lake. This must evidently be for the purpose of finishing works now under construction and nearly completed. The people of this part of the country, who know the va ue of this national improvement, desire to see provision made for placing a new section under contract. As, however, it may well be that necessary arrangements for this could not be made in time for the main estimates, an adequate sum for commencing another section may be expected in the supplementary estimates. Otherwise there will be much well founded discontent along the route of the Trent Valley Navigation. The work has so far been continuous and it should not be interrupted, as would be the case if nothing were done next year but the little required to complete the works now in construction.

RANKING of municipal bonuses for projected railways being useful for a locality, the Globe says:—

"If it is the bonus may properly be given, and if it is in Ontario there is no use in looking to the Dominion Government for it—whereas if it is in any one of the other Provinces the Dominion Government will spend Ontario tax money in constructing it."

As it happens, the Dominion Government has constructed, paid for or subsidized an enormously greater railway mileage in Ontario than in any other Province or Territory. To take the C. P. R. alone, its mileage in Ontario is greatly more than double the length of that in any other Province or Territory, and it opens up a vast extent of agricultural land, forest wealth and rich mines within this Province. It is hardly fair to cry down Ontario in order to obtain vengeance upon the people of the Dominion.

MR. KING has, it is said, taken proceedings to recover penalties from the Returning-Officer of Queens, N. B., for declaring him disqualified and returning Mr. Baird, the minority candidate. If Mr. King comes into court with clean hands he will thus have an opportunity of vindicating himself and punishing the wrong-doer. Mr. King, however, has not seen fit to protest the seat in the courts, but if he should fail in obtaining his rights it is his own fault, since he can appeal to the law of the land as regularly administered in its courts, just as well in this respect as in his endeavor to punish the Returning-Officer.

THE Rev. J. Bell Cox, Vicar of St. Margarets, Liverpool, has been put in prison for practices in divine service forbidden by a decision of the Privy Council. Those who have put the law in opposition against him are said to be given to the habitual infringement in another direction of the same Privy Council decision. It is strange to read, in what are supposed to be days of religious freedom, of the imprisonment of a clergyman for worshipping according to his conscience and with the warm support of his congregation, even if we do not agree with his views.

The First Canadian Cardinal.

"Laciede," of the Montreal Gazette, is informed that Mgr. Taschereau is not the first Canadian prelate who attained the Roman purple. A correspondent of "Laciede's" has in his possession a copy of the Atlas, a paper published in New York, date 1830-31, and containing a list of the Cardinals assembled at Rome to elect a successor to Pope Pius VIII. Among these Cardinals is one Englishman, Thos. suffragan Bishop of Kingston, in Upper Canada, and coadjutor and bishop in partibus of Amycla. The Welds are a well-known English family who kept the old faith, and figure frequently in ecclesiastical annals. It was they who donated to the Jesuit order the college of Stonyhurst, in the north of England, where the Hon. M. Turcotte, and other Canadians, received their education. Cardinal Weld was born in London, Jan. 22nd, 1773, and called to the Sacred College on the 15th March, 1830. It is probable that, like one or two of the French bishops of Quebec, he never came to Canada.

Sabbath Observance.

HAMILTON, May 10.—The Hamilton Ministerial Association sent a representation of its members to the City Council meeting, that night, to ask that Sunday funerals be stopped, and that the street cars be allowed to run on Sunday in connection with services only. The matter was referred to a Committee of the Council.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT

FIRST SESSION OF THE SIXTH CANADIAN PARLIAMENT.

Next Year's Estimates—The Colonial Conference—Scott Act Amendments—Mr. Mills' Hurt Dignity—Charlton and Laurier's Musket.

MONDAY, May 9.—Some private bills were introduced.

THE ESTIMATES.

Sir C. TUPPER presented the estimates for the coming financial year: $35,041,855 on current account, and $7,279,327 on capital account.

COLONIAL CONFERENCE.

Sir J. MACDONALD brought down papers as to the appointment of Sir A. Campbell and Mr. Sandford Fleming as Canadian representatives to the Colonial Conference.

THE SCOTT ACT.

Mr. MCCARTHY introduced a bill to amend the Scott Act, the chief provisions being to simplify proceedings, to prevent husband and wife from being compellable witnesses against each other, to enable brewers in a Scott Act county to sell beer within it, and to relieve druggists and physicians from certain restrictions in dispensing.

HOLIDAYS.

Sir J. MACDONALD in compliance with the expressed wish of a great majority of the members, moved that the House should adjourn from Wednesday, May 18th, to Wednesday, May 25th.

VETERANS OF '37.

Sir A. CARON, in reply to Mr. Purcell, said that applications for pensions to the veterans of 1837 must not be made to the Dominion, but to the local Governments of Ontario and Quebec as it was a matter for them to deal with.

C. P. R. RATES.

Mr. POPE, in reply to Mr. Mara, said the C. P. R. had not yet submitted their rates in British Columbia for the approval of the Governor-General in Council, but they had promised him to do so.

GAZETTING MEMBERS.

Mr. MILLS made for the fourth time his speech on the date of his being gazetted. He moved to refer the return of the Clerk of Crown in Chancery to the Committee on Privileges and Elections. Having thus selected the Court he proceeded to pass judgment before trial.

Sir J. MACDONALD declined to go all over the old matter again. Neither would he consent to dismiss Mr. Pope without a hearing. He moved in amendment to order Mr. Pope to address a letter to the Clerk of the House specifying his course in gazetting the returns and his reasons.

Mr. BLAKE varied the attack by including Mr. [illegible] Mail and Empire. He gave columns of figures and lots of calculations, but they showed that only a minute percentage of the returns had been delayed over one gazette.

A great number of members spoke, nearly all Reformers and most of them doubtfully elected members with protested seats, as Mr. Sproule pointed out.

Mr. MILLS made a second speech, the chief points being that Mr. Pope was a perjurer and assassin and should be debarred from any increase of salary.

Mr. CHARLTON was very angry with the Conservatives for not replying to the Opposition wailing, and threatened an armed insurrection.

Mr. CHAPLEAU said his own return had not been gazetted for several weeks, but he had waited patiently, not being nervous as to a protest through a guilty conscience, like some of his friends opposite. He made much fun of Mr. Charlton's belligerent threats, and advised him to go to the neighboring desk and borrow Laurier's old Saskatchewan musket. Those who were condemned by a court might be excused for abusing the judge, but the Opposition, because they were condemned by the judge and jury, the people of Canada, were abusing the clerk of the court.

Mr. PREFONTAINE, both during Mr. Chapleau's speech and afterwards, used such disgraceful language that he had to be called to order a dozen times or so, being encouraged in his violence by the applause and laughter of the Opposition, not excepting those ignorant of French, in which language he was speaking.

Sir JOHN MACDONALD'S amendment was carried by 104 to 74.

CLOTURE THRICE APPLIED.

The Crimes Bill being Rushed Through the House.

LONDON, May 10.—In the House of Commons, last night, after several minor amendments had been disposed of, Mr. Healey moved that any one frivolously summoned or needlessly detained as a witness could hold an action for compensation against the magistrate. The Attorney-General opposed the amendment, and Mr. James Stuart, Home Rule Radical, moved to report progress. Mr. W. H. Smith objected, on the ground that the amendments to the first section should first be dealt with. Mr. Morley supported the motion. A hubbub ensued, ending in a division, resulting in the motion being rejected by a vote of 249 to 176. Mr. Healy asked the Government to state their views on this amendment. Mr. Smith replied that their answer had already been given. He then moved for cloture, and the motion was adopted by 249 to 170.

Mr. Healey's amendment was rejected by a vote of 250 to 150. Mr. Labouchere moved to report progress. The motion was rejected by 248 to 169. Mr. Robert Wallace, member for East Edinburgh, a Home Ruler moved that the chairman leave the chair., Mr. Conybeare, Radical, supported the motion. Mr. Smith again proposed cloture, and the motion was carried by 248 to 160. Mr. Wallace's motion was negatived by a vote of 245 to 152, and Mr. Smith then moved to put the question on the whole remaining portion of the first section of the bill. The chairman, however, declined to put cloture because of the six amendments which the motion would exclude, two deserved ample discussion. This decision was received with loud and prolonged cheers from the Opposition. Eventually Mr. Smith's cloture motion was put and agreed to, and progress was reported amid loud cheers.

Mr. Chamberlain having returned, the Unionists will now determine what amendments they will propose to the Crimes' bill, especially with regard to the clause providing for a change of venue to London.

CHAPTER I.

JOHN HAS AN ADVENTURE.

The day had been very hot even for the Transvaal, where, even in the autumn, the days still know how to be hot, although the neck of the summer is broken, that is, when the thunder storms hold off for a week or two, as they occasionally will. Even the succulent blue lilies—a variety of the agaphanthus which is so familiar to us in English green houses—hung their long, trumpet shaped flowers and looked oppressed and miserable beneath the burning breath of the hot wind which had been blowing for hours like the draught of a volcano. The grass, too, near the wide roadway, that stretched in a feeble and indeterminate sort of fashion across the veldt, forking, branching and reuniting like veins on a lady's arm, was completely coated over with a thick layer of red dust. But the hot wind was going down now, as it always does toward sunset. Indeed, all that remained of it were a few strictly local and miniature whirlwinds, which would suddenly spring up on the road itself, and twist and twirl fiercely round, raising a mighty column of dust fifty feet or more into the air, where it hung long after the cause of it passed, and then slowly dissolved as its particles floated to the earth.

Coming along the road, in the immediate track of one of these desultory and inexplicable whirlwinds, was a man on horseback. The man looked limp and dirty, and the horse limper and dirtier. The hot wind had taken all the bones out of them, as the Kaffirs say, which was not very much to be wondered at, seeing that they had been journeying through it for the last four hours, without off saddling. Suddenly the whirlwind, which had been traveling along pretty smartly, halted, and the dust, after turning round a few times in the air like a dying top, slowly began to dissolve in the accustomed fashion. The man on the horse halted, too, and contemplated it in an absent kind of way.

"It's just like a man's life," he said aloud to his horse, "coming from nobody knows where, nobody knows why, and making a little column of dust on the world's highway, and then passing away and leaving the dust to fall to the ground again, and be trodden under foot and forgotten."

The speaker, a stout, well set up, rather ugly man, apparently on the wrong side of 30, with pleasant blue eyes and a reddish, peaked beard, laughed a little at his own sententious reflection, and then gave his jaded horse a taw with the sjambock in his hand.

"Come on, Blesbok," he said, "or we shall never get to the Drift, place to camp. By Jove! I believe that must be the turn," and he pointed with his whip to a little rutty track that turned from the Wakkerstroom main road and stretched away toward a curious, isolated hill with a large flat top, that rose out of the rolling plain some four miles to the right. "The old Boer said the second turn," he went on, still talking to himself, "but perhaps he lied. I am told that some of them think it a good joke to send an Englishman a few miles wrong. Let's see, they said the place was under the lee of a table topped hill, about half an hour's ride from the main road, and that is a table topped hill, so I think I will try it. Come on, Blesbok," and he put the tired nag into a sort of "tripple," or ambling canter, much affected by South African horses.

"Life is a queer thing," reflected Capt. John Niel to himself as he slowly cantered along. "Now here am I, at the age of 34, about to begin the world again as assistant to an old Transvaal farmer. It is a pretty end to all one's ambitions, and to fourteen years' work in the army; but it is what it has to come to, my boy, so you had better make the best of it."

Just then his cogitations were interrupted, for on the farther side of a gentle slope there suddenly appeared an extraordinary sight. Over the crest of the rise of land, now some four or five hundred yards away, a pony with a lady on its back came wildly galloping, and after it, with wings spread and outstretched neck, a huge cock ostrich was speeding along, covering twelve or fifteen feet at every stride of its long legs. The pony was still twenty yards ahead of the bird, and coming toward John rapidly, but strive as it would it could not distance the swiftest thing on all the earth. Five seconds passed; the great bird was close alongside now. Ah! and John Niel turned sick and shut his eyes as he rode, for he saw the ostrich's thick leg fly high into the air and then sweep down like a leaded bludgeon.

Thud! It had missed the lady and struck her horse upon the spine, behind the saddle, for the moment completely paralyzing it, so that it fell all of a heap on to the veldt. In a moment the girl on its back was up and off toward him, and after her came the ostrich. Up went the great leg again, but before it came crashing on to her shoulders she had flung herself face downward on the grass. In an instant the huge bird was on top of her, kicking at her, rolling over her and crushing the very life out of her. It was at this juncture that John Niel arrived upon the scene. The moment the ostrich saw him he gave up his attacks upon the lady on the ground and began to waltz toward him with a pompous sort of step that these birds sometimes assume before they give battle. Now, Capt. Niel was unaccustomed to the ways of ostriches, and so was his horse, which showed a strong inclination to bolt; as, indeed, under other circumstances, his rider would have been glad to do himself. But he could not abandon beauty in distress, so, finding it impossible to control his horse, he slipped off it, and with his sjambock, or hide whip, in his hand, valiantly faced the enemy. For a moment or two the great bird stood still, blinking its lustrous eyes at him and gently swaying its graceful neck to and fro. Then all of a sudden it spread out its wings and came for him like a thunderbolt. He sprang to one side, and was aware of a rustle of rustling feathers, and of a vision of a thick leg striking downward past his head. Fortunately it missed him and the ostrich sped past like a flash. Before he could turn, however, it was back and had landed the full weight of one of its awful forward kicks in the broad of his back, and away he went head over heels like a shot rabbit. In a second he was on his legs again, shaken, indeed, but not much the worse and perfectly mad with fury and pain. At him came the ostrich, and at the ostrich went he, catching it a blow across the slim neck with his sjambock that staggered it for a moment. Profiting by the check, he seized the bird by the wing and held on like grim death with both hands. Then they began to gyrate, slowly at first, then quicker, and yet more quick, till at last it seemed to Capt. John Niel that time and space and the solid earth were nothing but a revolving vision fixed somewhere in the watches of the night. Above him, like a stationary pivot, towered the tall, graceful neck, beneath him spun the top like legs, and in front of him was a soft black and white mass of feathers.

Turnbull's is the right House for Boys' Clothing. His styles are new and prices the lowest. Examine and be convinced.

Approved.

The Toronto Labor Reformer says:—"Peterborough Knights of Labor are inaugurating a series of monthly meetings for all classes of workingmen. The idea is a good one, and ought to result in much good in the way of education in labor reform principles."

Wonderful value, think of it, 27 inch white twilled sheeting, 22½ cents, 72 inch twilled unbleached sheeting 20 cent, and 1¼ white quilts 75 cents, at Sheppard's.

"Love's Young Dream."

We have received from the Toronto News Company a copy of a new novel, "Love's Young Dream," by May Agnes Flemming. It is in popular form—neat paper cover. The scene of the novel is in Canada, except for a brief period in which some of the actors appear in England. The plot is one calculated to hold the interest of the reader to the end.

For Reliable Kid Gloves try the Alexandre make; to be had in all the leading shades at Turnbull's.

A New Story.

To-day we give an instalment of a new story, which will be continued till the whole is published. "Jess" is a most interesting story, and one the interest of which is not confined to the plot alone, although the plot is a very strong one; for the facts and information given about South Africa, the country in which the scene is laid, the people, and the war, is full of interest and instruction. Seldom has an author of fiction so quickly found favor with the public as has Mr. H. Rider Haggard, the author of "Jess," and few novels have been so generally read and been in such popular demand as have the stories from Mr. Haggard's pen. We are sure our readers who like fiction will be pleased with "Jess."

Arrived at Turnbull's by express, several quite New and Stylish Shapes in Bonnets and Hats, such as the Graceful, Tandem, Toboggan, Sylvia, Northwood, Essex, and others too numerous to mention.

Pencil Points.

—It seems rather funny that cargoes of lager should be arriving in a sober Scott Act town like this.

—But perhaps it's just for "private use."

—There was quite a scene in court yesterday. One old Toronto doctor was in the witness box. His cross questioner made a remark that offended his dignity. Thereupon he protested to his Lordship that the remark should be withdrawn.

—After cross firing a while the lawyer succumbed and made the apology.

—The Otonabee is still running bank full, but the water has not risen any these last few days.

—The drives of logs will soon commence to make their appearence.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE

THE SPRING SITTINGS OF THE ASSIZE COURT.

BOUCHER VS. SAWERS.—This was an action brought by Dr. Boucher against C. W. Sawers for the recovery of a bill for medical attendance upon the late Mrs. Sawers, amounting to $300. This was the claim. The statement of the defence, after setting forth the accident which happened to the late Mrs. Sawers at Stoney Lake in August of 1886 and the calling of Dr. Boucher, continues to contend: that as such medical attendant physician and surgeon the plaintiff in the employment aforesaid failed to use reasonable skill, care and attention, and on the contrary treated the defendant's said wife so negligently, carelessly and unskillfully as to cause the defendant's said wife great and needless pain, suffering and illness, and to prevent the cure and recovery of defendant's said wife, whereby the defendant's said wife grew and became worse in health and ultimately died. The defendant says that the plaintiff did not bestow upon the defendant's said wife reasonable skill and attention, and in consequence of the plaintiff's ignorant, careless and unskillful treatment of the defendant's said wife the plaintiff's services were of no use or benefit to the defendant or his said wife, but on the contrary that the same were a positive injury. The defendant says that his feelings are utterly adverse to the public exposure of the facts herein stated, and particularly to detailing in public the circumstances of his deceased wife's suffering, and by reason thereof, and as the price of peace, the defendant, while admitting no liability, hereby offers to pay the plaintiff $150 in full settlement of his said claim herein sued for. This is the defence.

The witnesses on the plaintiffs side were: Dr. Boucher, Peterborough; Dr. Pyne, Dr. Cameron, Dr. Bethune, Toronto; Mrs. Marlow, the nurse, D. McLeod, Dr. Halliday, Dr. King, Peterborough, and Dr. Douglass, Lakefield.

The witnesses for the defence were: C. W. Sawers, Dr. Sawers, A. Sawers, W. H. Moore, Eliza, the assistant, Kate Foley, Dr. Clarke, and Dr. Might.

The jury was addressed by Mr. C. N. Bigelow, Toronto, on behalf of the defendant, and Mr. B. B. Osler, Q.C., on behalf of the plaintiff.

His Lordship, in giving his charge to the jury, said that though the action was brought with the primary object of recovering a sum of money more serious interests were involved. The plaintiff presented his bill to defendant, who answers, "You treated my wife unskillfully and improperly and on account of your want of skill and improper treatment she died. That was the cause of her death and therefore you ought not to receive more than $150 which amount is paid into court." The plaintiff takes issue with the defendant, and says that he did treat the patient skillfully and properly and therefore is entitled to the full amount of the bill. It was entirely a case of fact and not of law. They had the evidence of skilled and unskilled witnesses before them and it was for them to decide whether the patient was treated skillfully or unskillfully, properly or improperly. But it seemed to him that if these kind of charges were to be brought against doctors it would be unsafe for a doctor to undertake dangerous cases alone. It would not be safe for a doctor to attend a patient in a critical case without taking one, two or three other doctors with him. If he did not a charge of this kind might be brought against him and evidence brought forward to say he treated the patient improperly while he would be defenceless. He drew attention to the fact that Dr. Douglass, who accompanied the late Mrs. Sawers to her home after the accident, approved of Dr. Boucher's treatment, and it might be assumed that the treatment had Dr. O'Sullivan's approbation as Dr. O'Sullivan co-operated with Dr. Boucher in attendance. He did not lay much weight upon the opinion of the doctors who did not see the patient. They were merely speculative opinions. But if the jury considered them he advised the consideration of which opinions were likely to be the most to be relied on, according to the experience and standing of the physicians. It seemed to him that the case came down to a narrow point. Here were the skilled and unskilled witnesses on both sides. It was for them to decide upon the weight to be given to the respective testimony. If a large portion of the testimony on the part of the defendent was believed a verdict against the plaintiff should be returned. If the testimony was found to be of equal weight and it produced in their minds a degree of uncertainty then they should give a verdict for the plaintiff, for the contention of the defendant would not be clearly proved. If the testimony on behalf of the plaintiff overbalanced that on the part of the defendant a verdict should be returned for him.

The jury retired and after an hour's consideration returned a verdict as follows:—"We, the jury, give our verdict in favor of the plaintiff, Dr. Boucher, for full amount claimed, namely, $300.35." Mr. Sawers expresses his intention of appealing to a higher court.

Prince Leopold in New York.

NEW YORK, May 10.—Prince Leopold of Prussia arrived here to-day from Rochester, where he had a little jolt-up in the cars, and took rooms at the Albermarle Hotel. He will sail for England in the steamer Elder next Saturday.

A REMARKABLE SCENE.

Mr. O'Brien Leaving the Umbria—Different Feelings Manifested.

NEW YORK, May 10.—The steamer John E. Moore took the O'Brien Reception Committee down to the steamship Umbria, which was at anchor outside Sandy Hook, last evening, and they took off Mr. O'Brien and escorted him to the Hoffman House, in this city. The night was very foggy, and the Moore was compelled to move slowly. It was one o'clock this morning when the party got back as far as Quarantine.

A remarkable scene was offered when the Moore ran up alongside the Umbria. For several minutes after the object of the committee had been made known no person in authority could be discovered to attend to the New Yorkers' wants. The cheers that the committeemen and their friends sent up for Mr. O'Brien were answered, by portions of the passengers and crew, with groans and counter-cheers for Lord Salisbury, Mr. Balfour and other Ministerialists. These were in turn responded to by the Umbria, with uproarious cheers for Mr. O'Brien, Mr. Parnell and Mr. Gladstone, besides more for Bishop Ireland, of Minnesota, who was also on the steamer. Then the loyal people on the Umbria started up "God Save the Queen," and when they had reached the middle of the verse a loud and clear Irish voice was heard above the anthem to cry in earnest accent, "God Save Ireland." This caused a great laugh and put an end to the singing. Captain Patterson of the Moore, had much difficulty in finding any one on the steamship to take a line from his boat.

His request for the presence of Captain McMickan was greeted with the information that the captain was at dinner, at which there were more jeers. After about ten minutes, however, the captain came to the rail and asked, "What do you want?"

"We have a permit to take some passengers off," replied General O'Beirne, of the committee.

The captain's response to this came rather gruffly: "I'll allow no person to leave the ship until the doctor has made his examination."

"Oh, we've got the doctor and the custom house inspector, too," chimed the chorus from the Moore, and there was another laugh.

"Take him, said a voice, referring to Mr. O'Brien. We'll have clear weather now that Jonah is gone.

Just then Mr. O'Brien appeared as Capt. McMickan's side and addressed the people on the Moore, inquired:—Are there any of my friends who want me to go to New York to-night? We all do, came the shouted reply.

"Then I will go," said Mr. O'Brien determinedly, adding, after a pause, "If only out of compliment to the cowards about here." There was a wild cheer at this. A ladder was run up to the steamship's rail after fore and aft lines had been made fast, and Dr. A. W. Smith, brother of the health officer of the port, ran up the ladder. He was followed through [illegible] Ireland and Mr. Dennis O'Brien, Bishop [illegible] were conferred, and then Captain McMickan asked him to pass the ship. Mr. Smith evidently thought that the steamship people had not earned any special courtesy, for notwithstanding Capt. McMickan's repetition of his request, with the added plea that by so doing Dr. Smith could save the ship valuable time, the doctor told the commander that he would have to take his turn.

Just as Mr. O'Brien landed on the deck of the Moore the after line of the boat parted and her stern swung away, thus preventing the disembarking of Mr. Kilbride, who was the first tenant evicted by Lord Lansdowne and who accompanied Mr. O'Brien on his tour. Mr. O'Brien was greeted enthusiastically by the New Yorkers, with whom were Judge W. W. Dougherty, of the Boston Reception Committee; Mr. T. M. Brady, president, of the Boston Common Council, Hugh McCaffrey and Mr. Luke Dillon, of Philadelphia; Mr. Edward D. Moore, of the Pittsburg Council, and others.

TORONTO LICENSES.

The Toronto Labor-Reformer exposes an extraordinary state of affairs in Toronto in respect of the manner of the conduct of the liquor license business. The Reformer charges that the Mowat government took the right to grant licenses out of the hands of the municipalities, and placed it in the hands of commissioners appointed from among the government's most thorough paced supporters. The Reformer charges that the Mowat government arranged the ballot so that it could find out just how each liquor seller voted. Then the Reformer tells this story:

"Just before the last election a meeting of brewers and hotel-keepers was held in August Bolte's office, Colborne street, at the request of the Grit party managers. At this meeting, which was managed by O'Keef and Kormann, it was arranged that the whole liquor vote, so far as the meeting could control it, was to be voted for Mowat. I have been told by hotel keepers that they were assured by the managers of of this meeting that they had arranged with the local government that one of the conditions of the alliance was that in Scott Act counties the government were not to take any serious steps to enforce the Act. I know that the Grit managers, even members of the cabinet, were in communication with the managers of this meeting, and that Mr. Bolte did what he could to furnish the government with documents for campaign use.

"A number of Toronto hotel keepers did not attend the meeting and the names of those who did not attend figure among the rejected on Messrs. Thwaite and Cassidy's list, while every cock-tail mixer who attended has got his license.

"I am informed by men who say they know that every saloonist who is one of O'Keefe's retailers has been placed among the accepted, and that among the rejected are to be found those who don't sell Pilsener."

Is not that a nice condition of affairs? Was there ever anything more rotten in Denmark than there is in Toronto? And that is not the worst of it. People who live in Hamilton know that Toronto is not alone in that sort of disgraceful business.—Hamilton Spectator.

The London Strike.

LONDON, Ont., May 10.—At the meeting of the B. L. U. last night, it was resolved to remain out on strike, and all members are notified to attend a special meeting on Wednesday morning to receive strikers' pay. The men are still firm in their demands. Bishop Walsh, in a letter to the press regarding the bricklayers' strike, suggests that the principle of arbitration be applied to this case.

MEDAL FOR THE SCHOOL.—Mr. Hickson, of Mount Pleasant, has received from England a bronze medal for himself and a diploma for the school for the specimens of drawing, penmanship, arithmetic, etc., sent to the Colonial Exhibition in London from the public school of section No. 2, Cavan, of which he has been teacher for the past seven years. His school is the only public school in the county that has been thus honoured. He has also received books giving a list of the prizes awarded at the Colonial Exhibition. This acknowledgement is gratifying to the whole neighborhood, for Mr. Hickson has for many years been a faithful, zealous and able teacher, and his school does him high credit, being second to none in the county.

THE FIRE BRIGADE

Now on a Very Efficient Footing—Recent Improvements.

The Fire Department is now in a better condition than ever it was. Recent improvements have been made, alterations made in the station and additions to the machinery of the department. As it is now the Peterborough Fire Department is one of the best equipped outside of the large cities.

The most important features in the recent improvements and additions are the introduction of electric alarms, the putting in of a new hose and salvage waggon and hook and ladder waggon, alterations in the stable, the procuring of another team, and the fitting up of firemens' bedrooms on the premises.

The alarm bells arrived on Monday and have been placed in position. There is a bell in each of the firemen's rooms, and in the houses of those firemen who do not sleep in the station. The bells are connected with two circuits, a southern circuit and and a northern circuit. The object of having two circuits is to avoid the effect of one being out of order. If attached to one circuit and the wire got out of order the result would be that none of the outside firemen could be called, but as it is now there will be one circuit to fall back on if the other gets out of order. The bells have been tested and give the utmost satisfaction. The alarm system is connected with the Central Telephone Office. There is also another alarm in the fire hall.

The hose and salvage waggon is just what was wanted. It will carry a thousand feet of hose handily. The swinging harness attached to the salvage waggon and the hook and ladder waggon make it an easy matter to get out in good time. The horses face the engine room according to the recent change in the stable. Immediately the alarm is sounded the doors fly open and the horses are trotted out to the waggons. The harness is dropped on them and with two snaps the whole performance of harnessing is accomplished. The horses are being trained every night in this exercise.

There are now two teams on the premises instead of one. The second team is used for taking out the engine when it is required.

The fitting up of the firemen's bedrooms is one of the most important improvements made. Seven men sleep on the premises every night—four firemen, two teamsters and the engineer. This enables the apparatus to be got out without delay. The rooms are comfortably fitted up and the firemen are well satisfied with them.

The appliances in connection with the Fire Department are:—A complete system of waterworks with nearly seventy hydrants scattered all over the more thickly populated parts of the town, a Silsby engine in good repair, a full complement of effective hose, hooks and ladders, a hose tower convenient to the engine room, electric alarms and four horses to draw the waggons and engine to fires.

The fire brigade consists of 17 firemen, one chief, one assistant chief, two teamsters and an engineer. The fire station throughout is heated with steam and fitted with gas and waterworks.

Councillor McNeil, Chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, is to be congratulated on the success of his efforts to place the Department in a first-class condition. He is to be congratulated upon his success and also upon the moderate amount which he laid out for these very necessary improvements.

Wonderful value, think of it, 27 inch white twilled sheeting, 22¼ cents, 72 inch twilled unbleached sheeting 20 cent, and 1¼ white quilts 75 cents, at Sheppard's.

DISCUSSING COERCION.

More Amendments to the Crimes Bill Defeated.

LONDON, May 11.—In the House of Commons, yesterday, in committee on the Coercion bill, Mr. Healy moved an amendment that a person committed for contempt of court be treated as a first-class misdemeanant. He argued that witnesses committed for refusing to answer questions ought not to be subjected to the same punishment as criminals when the Coercion Act was in effect. He said the imprisonment of many persons shortened their lives 10 years.

Mr. Balfour said that persons committed could avoid punishment by answering questions. There was no difference between cases under the clause and cases of contempt under the ordinary law.

Mr. John O'Connor, Nationalist, said that if the Government imprisoned witnesses as common criminals for refusing to answer questions it would be a disgrace to civilization. Why did they not propose to apply the old-fashioned instruments of torture, including the the thumb screw and rack?

Sir Charles Russell, Liberal, contended that there was a great difference between witnesses examined under the ordinary protection of legal advice in a regular court and those who under the clause could be compelled to attend a private examination and answer whatever questions were put to them.

Mr. Balfour replied that the law under the explosives act gave the same power.

Mr. Gladstone denied that these were parallel cases. Under the crimes clause witnesses could be summoned to state whether someone had enticed somebody else to take or refuse to take a particular farm, or to deal or refuse to deal with a particular tradesman.

Mr. Healy put it to the Government whether it would agree that men committed under the clause should not be kept in solitary confinement more than 20 hours out of the 24.

Mr. Balfour promised that the Government would enquire into the mode in which the law was administered, and prevent harsh treatment of persons committed under its provisions.

Mr. Healy's amendment was rejected by a vote of 195 to 144.

Mr. Healy then moved to limit the penalty for contempt in the case of witnesses to seven days' imprisonment. Mr. Healy's amendment was defeated by a vote of 138 to 111. Another motion referring to witnesses was negatived, and the House then ad-

ARRIVAL IN MONTREAL.

Mr. O'Brien Presented with an Address —His Reply.

MONTREAL, May 11.—Mr. O'Brien arrived this morning by the Delaware and Hudson at 8 o'clock. As the train showed into the Bonaventure station at least a thousand people were assembled on the platform. As Mr. O'Brien stepped from the train he was met by the delegates of the various Irish societies in the city, headed by Mr. H. J. Cloran, president of the Montreal Branch of the Land League. Mr. Cloran then read an address of welcome.

In reply Mr. O'Brien thanked them most deeply and gratefully for their kind words and for their hearty Irish welcome to the principal city of the Canadian Dominion. He could not well express his gratitude for the warmth with which his fellow-countrymen rallied round him at this time in behalf of the poor and oppressed against a powerful and exalted oppressor. He never for an instant doubted, he never believed that the Canadian people, whose parliament had so often and so recently testified their sympathy with the sufferings of Ireland, would refuse him fair play. He need hardly assure them that he did not come here to hurt the susceptibilities of any section of the Canadian people; it was not the Governor-General of Canada that he came to arraign, but only an Irish evictor who happened to hold that office, but so far as this country was concerned nothing could be further from his views than of meddling with its affairs in any way. In a free country like this men had a right to differ from him, but he believed that the facts were so strong he would be able to show Canadian people that Lord Lansdowne was causing all this terrible suffering in Ireland rather than make a reasonable concession which his own arbitrator had suggested to him, and that being so he had the fullest confidence that the Canadian people would stretch out their arms and save the lives and homes of the poor people for whom he had come so far to intercede. He again thanked them for their hearty welcome.

The delegates then conducted Mr. O'Brien to the St. Lawrence Hall.

BLAIRTON.

From Our Own Correspondent.

DROPPED DEAD.—On Friday afternon about two o'clock, Nelson Rightly dropped dead while at his work. He ate as hearty or a little heartier dinner than usual and went to Mr. Breaw's, his son-in-law, to enquire about his daughter, who is ill. He then went to a field to plough, and while sitting on the beam of the plough talking and joking with Mr. Clark and Mr. Breaw, he suddenly dropped off the plough to the ground, gave a few gasps, and expired. The funeral took place on Sunday at 10 o'clock. He was buried in the new Presbyterian burying ground at Havelock. The funeral was attended by a large gathering of friends and acquaintences. The family has the sympathy of the whole community. Mr. Rightly's eldest daughter, Mrs. Breaw, is in a dangerous condition, and her recovery is doubtful.

EXTENSIVE PURCHASE.—Mr. J. L. Aunger has made quite a purchase. He has bought 600 acres of land from Mr. T. P. Pearce. The property is known as the Turner farm, the Bates farm and the McCarthy farm. This purchase will benefit Blairton, as Mr. Aunger was intending to leave here, but he will likely remain now.

METHODIST CHURCH.—The President of the Bay of Quinte Conference preached here on Sunday and held sacramental service. There was a good attendance at the services.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT

FIRST SESSION OF THE SIXTH CANADIAN PARLIAMENT.

Mistakes in Pairing—Still Slandering—Veterans of 1837—Advocates of Rebellion.

TUESDAY, May 10.—A number of private bills were introduced.

PAIRS.

Explanations were made as to mistakes about pairing.

The SPEAKER said that in future he would decline to hear such explanations, and would not recognize pairs unless they had been registered by the regular party whips.

PRIVILEGE.

Mr. CURRAN drew the attention of the House to charges made against him in certain Reform papers, at Ottawa and elsewhere, of causing the dismissal of canal laborers who refused to vote for him. He totally denied the statement and would set himself right in the courts.

RESTIGOUCHE ELECTION.

Mr. WHITE, in reply to Mr. Weldon, said the nomination for Restigouche would take place on May 21st.

RAILWAY CROSSINGS.

Mr. POPE moved the House into committee on the bill to amend the Railway Act by allowing trains to pass level crossings without stopping if certain precautions were taken.

Mr. BLAKE thought that if time were to be saved they should also be careful that danger was not increased.

CLAIM FOR LOSSES.

Mr. BARRON moved for correspondence between Mr. F. O'Donoghue and the Government as to compensation for losses of his late brother Mr. W. B. O'Donoghue.

VETERANS OF '57.

Mr. WILSON moved for papers as to the application for a pension made by Joseph Swisher, a volunteer of '57.

Mr. PURCELL said there were a lot of '37 veterans in Glengarry and he thought they should be rewarded as much as those of 1812.

Messrs. CURRAN, SCRIVER, DENISON and HICKEY favoured a reward for these volunteers.

Mr. JONES said in 1812 there was a foreign invasion to repel, but in 1857 only a civil war.

Mr. BECHARD said Quebec would oppose the grant as compensation not to be given for the depredation of the volunteers.

Mr SOMERVILLE advocated rebellion and would prefer to reward the rebels.

Sir J. MACDONALD said it was a national matter in 1812, but in 1837 it was only a Provincial matter and it regarded the Provinces. Ontario had the means to reward its defenders if it chose and so had Quebec. The Dominion could not act in this matter.

Mr. WILSON rebuked Mr. Somerville for the views he had expressed. Those who had defended their country against rebellion should be rewarded.

The papers were ordered.

CARDINAL AND PREMIER.

His Eminence Replies to Mr. Mercier's Last Letter.

QUEBEC, May 10.—In to-day's Gazette was published letter which passed between Cardinal Taschereau and the Premier on the Jesuit's bill. The last letter was dated 6th May, and to-day a correspondent has been furnished with a copy of the reply of the reply of the Cardinal to Mr. Mercier's last letter. The following is the translation:—

HONORABLE SIR,—In your letter of yesterday you put me on a par with those who in France have expelled the Jesuits and who refuse them the rights of citizens. You even accuse me of having threatened with displeasure those members of the Legislature who have believed it their duty to sustain this body. These accusations are certainly much graver and more direct than those of which I complain in my letters. When did I ask for the expulsion of the Jesuits? I simply asked that the bill for their incorporation should be postponed to the next session of the Legislature to give the episcopate of this province the opportunity and the time to examine together the different clauses of the bill. Was this refusing to the Jesuits the rights of other citizens? If the Jesuits were in the fire, I could understand that the request for a delay of some months might be considered as a piece of tyranny, a persecution, a measure worthy the impiety and the free masonry of poor France. Are they in the fire? Will they lose anything by this delay? If their cause is good what have they to fear in allowing their bill to be examined at leisure by the episcopate? "In the Province of Quebec," you say, "legislators are threatened with incurring the displeasure of a prince of the church because they believed it their duty to sustain this religious order." This means, then, that when I believe it to be my duty to express my opinion on a religious question, which is before the Legislature, I must keep silence for fear of being accused of violating the liberty for the members of that Legislature. Everybody else may speak, and write, and use their influence in favor of the question, but the prince of the Church must not say a word to vindicate his rights. If inquiry was made it would probably be found that the liberty of those who have voted for the bill was much less respected than that of the oppositionists. These latter not only protested their respect and their devotion to the episcopate but they acted and voted in conformity with their sentiments. Their language has always been worthy of the cause which they defend, that is to say of the cause of the episcopate, which is more necessary and more divine that of the Jesuits. Once more it is not for the purpose of tyrannizing, of persecuting and still less of expelling the Jesuits that I asked the postponement of their bill, but to give to the bishops the opportunity and the time to examine the act of incorporation in order to prevent regrettable difficulties.

Kindly accept, etc.,
(Signed), E. A CARD. TASCHEREAU.
(True copy.)
C. A. MAROIS,
Secretary.

The correspondence between Cardinal Taschereau and Premier Mercier is looked upon as the beginning of an open rupture between His Eminence and Mr Mercier.

LONDON, May 11.—This coming summer will be famous for its general naval manœuvres. Not only are France and England arranging for instructional displays on a large scale, but Germany will gather all her available naval forces together and will make a specially strong show in torpedo boats and small craft. Some valuable experiments will be made with explosive shells directed against all the modern types of armour. German naval artillerists claim that even the newly invented compound Cammell plate will be unable to withstand the explosive force of certain of new shells, the modus operandi of which is at present a secret.

SOCIALISM ON THE INCREASE.

LONDON, May 11.—The municipal elections in Paris show an increase in the extreme radical, revolutionary and Socialist parties. The aggregate of the votes discloses the following members: Radical, 133,000; Moderate, 1,000; Socialist, 52,000; Reactionaries, 64,000. There are still many reballots to be decided. They will probably have a town council of about the same constitutional as before, but with a stronger bias towards autonomy and Socialism.

AMERICAN MANNERS.

LONDON, May 11.—The powers at "the Yankeries," as the American exhibition is being called, have not only set special boxes apart from the Lords and the Commons and Mr. Henry Irving, but have presented season tickets to every member of the British Legislature.

THE WILD WEST SHOW.

LONDON, May 11.—The Queen has commanded that a private performance be given by the wild west show at 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

OVERTURES TO GLADSTONE.

LONDON, May 11.—A committee of leading Conservatives had made unofficial overtures to Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Morley with the view of finding out whether those gentlemen will assist to the appointment of a committee consisting of two English judges and one Scotch judge to enquire into the charges against the Parnellites. The Gladstonians are opposed to troubling themselves any further with the question unless the Government takes definite action, while the Government is not disposed to make a move until the Coercion Bill shall have been passed.

OPENING SUSPICIOUS LETTERS.

LONDON, May 11.—During the recent Nihilist scare in Rusala, it is stated that 45 per cent, of all the letters passing through the post were opened in addition to the letters of suspects, which are always opened as a matter of course by the Russian postoffice officials.

MEETING OF THE CABINET.

LONDON, May 11.—An informal meeting of the Cabinet was held yesterday to discuss plans for expediting the passage of the coercion bill. It was decided to abandon the attempt to effect a wholesale application of the cloture rule at a fixed date. The refusal of the chairman of the committee to put cloture until each clause has been fully discussed has compelled the Ministers to adopt the plan of asking for cloture after bona fide amendments have been heard. The Ministerialists now calculate that the discussion on the coercion bill in committee will last three weeks longer.

RECIPROCITY FAVORED.

MADRID, May 11.—In the congress yesterday the Cuban home rulers declared that the government, unless it promptly found means to improve the prospects of the Spanish West Indies by granting the liberty demanded by the Creoles, would find itself unable to check the Cuban movement in favor of annexation to America. Senor Moret, minister of foreign affairs, said that both Spain and America desired a reciprocity treaty whereby, although it was impossible to obtain privilege for West India sugars, Spain hopes to secure advantages in return for concessions in favor of America imports. In behalf of the government he opposed home rule but promised early political tariff reforms. It is reported that the Carlists are assisting the Cuban conspirators to organize an outbreak.

"Oppress not nature, sinking down to rest,
With feasts too late, too solid, or too full."

Armstrong, when he wrote these lines, gave good scientific advice. Half of our people suffer from dyspepsia in some of its many forms. Life becomes a burden, and business worries and annoys. The "Golden Medical Discovery," invented and prepared by Dr. Pierce, is an effectual remedy for indigestion. By druggists.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S WARRANTS.

An outcry has been raised over the unusually large amount expended under the authority of the Governor-General's warrants, and the Opposition is claiming that the gross sum was so paid to avoid Parliamentary control. Two classes of items making more than half of the total amount are not justly subject to this criticism. First there are the expenditures that have received the approval of Parliament, but because the completion of the work or the determination of the exact sum payable had been unexpectedly delayed, the appropriation had technically lapsed. Secondly, there are the amounts decided by the law courts, by arbitrators, or by commissions sanctioned by Parliament to be due by Canada. These sums, of course, had to be paid, unless the Dominion were to sink to the level of a repudiating Southern State. With the items of these two classes deducted, the amount spent is not exceptionally great considering the unusually late period at which Parliament met this year, a delay which arose from the fact that the general election could not honestly be held till the new voters' lists were legally available.

If the Opposition were to contend that the system practised under all Canadian Administrations of making payments under these warrants should be restricted as much as possible, and the creditors of Canada were given to understand that they must not look for the payment of their claims, however pressing, before the next session of Parliament, we could support their contention. But they lay down no such general proposition, maintaining that such payments were absolutely correct when they made them, but highly improper when made by their political rivals. To carry out this object they indulge freely in exaggeration and shuffling. For instance, one item that excites their ire is for additional rolling stock required on the Intercolonial, yet at the very same time some of their organs are censuring the Government for not having rolling stock to satisfy at the moment unexpected demands. As the progress and prosperity of the country increases the expenditure to do the increased business must also increase. A business firm would consider this an indication of prosperity, but the Opposition refuse to take into account the growth of our operations. They cannot, however, persuade the people of Canada to see with their eyes.

The following paragraph appears in the Toronto Globe:—

"In two days recently no fewer than five solicitors were struck off the rolls in England by order of the Court. Two of these gentlemen by Act of Parliament had been sentenced to penal servitude for forgery or embezzlement, two had failed to account for funds entrusted to them, and the other was pronounced by the Court guilty of embezzlement."

Such treatment may be customary in England, but Mr. Mowat knows better than that. When a political friend is unfortunate enough to make such a mistake the Premier of Ontario places him in an office of trust and emolument.

It is rumored in Quebec that Mr. McShane is to be "frozen out" of the Provincial Administration, the cause being that he characterized a disgraceful private bill supported by the Premier, Mr. Mercier, as "a boodle bill," and declared in his place in the House that no honest man could vote for it.

At the Toronto Press Club dinner novelties were introduced into the toast list. One of the toasts was "She." As it was near the end of of the list the toasters may have been somewhat haggard when it was reached. Novelties and novels are akin.

The Labor Reformer and the Hamilton Spectator are publishing articles on "Ideas about money." A common idea about money is that it is a nice thing to be able to spend as much as you wish of it and still have plenty left.

CANADIAN ENTERPRISE.

The Value of the Canadian Pacific to the Empire.

In the abstract no one can gainsay the immense Imperial importance of the completion of a railway from ocean to ocean across the British portion of the North American Continent. It is a magnificent illustration of Colonial energy and enterprise. It brings the Pacific coast within 14 days of ports in the British Islands. It furnishes, whenever we choose to use it, a means of transit and transport to our possessions in the East, lying entirely, so far as the land is concerned, in British territory, and, so far as the sea is concerned, in those portions of the two oceans which seem designed by nature to be the special appanage of British commerce. It thus affords an invaluable alternative to the two existing routes to the East, by the Suez Canal and round the Cape, safer than the canal route and more expeditious than the Cape route, and considerably shorter in point of time to all Oriental ports eastward of Hong Kong. These advantages, important in time of peace, would become inestimable in the case of war with a maritime power. We possess docks at Esquimalt capable of receiving the largest ironclad, and Vancouver possesses the only good coal supply in the North Pacific. A further advantage of this alternative route to the East is that it affords the potentiality, though not at present the actuality, of a line of telegraphic communication with our Eastern possessions lying wholly within British territory and control. The North Atlantic would in the case of war with a first-class European power become our most important line of maritime communication. If we could not guard it from serious depredation we should suffer a vital point. It is in our power, and might be not less vital to our interests, to make ourselves equally strong in the North Pacific. The Canadian line, therefore, affords the only line of telegraphic communication with India on which, so long as we retained effective command of the sea, we could absolutely depend. It would also be equally valuable for military transport. Even if the canal and the Cape route remained, we have the authority of Lord Dufferin, as quoted by Lord Harrowby, for saying "that the effect on the native mind of English troops reaching India from the East as well as the West would be enormous."—London Times, April 30.

ROYALTIES IN LONDON.

How They Will be Entertained During the Jubilee Time.

London, May 11.—The Queen comes to Buckingham Palace for the Jubilee on Monday, June 20, arriving in time for luncheon. She will return to Windsor about 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, June 22. There will be large royal dinner parties at the Palace on Monday and Tuesday, and a small private concert will probably be given on Monday night. The Royalties both home and foreign will attend a grand ball, given by Lady Salisbury at the Foreign office on the evening of the Jubilee holiday, and will accompany the Queen to Windsor on Wednesday, returning to town late at night, after having been entertained at dinner in St. George's hall. The Queen will return to London on Wednesday, June 29, and remain at Buckingham Palace till the evening of Saturday, July 2, when she will go back to Windsor after the march past of the London volunteers. It is regretted that her Majesty could not be induced to remain in London during the whole of the jubilee week.

The Royalties who come from abroad for the jubilee are to be distributed between Buckingham palace, St. James's palace, Marlborough house and Clarence house. Those members of the suites who cannot be accommodated at either of those residences will be quartered either at a private hotel which has been lent to the Queen, or at the Palace Hotel in Buckingham Gate, where some score of cooks have been engaged for the week by the Lord Chamberlain. The pressure has never been so great since the marriage of the Princess Royal, in 1858, when there were nearly 40 royal guests from abroad. At the special request of the Queen, Lord Spencer has consented to give up Spencer House to the Crown Prince and Princess of Prussia during their visit to London for the jubilee thanksgiving. Lord Spencer will temporarily reside with his nephew, Lord Clifden, in Chesterfield gardens. Lord and Lady Breadalbane will give Harcourt house to the royal family of Sweden and Norway at the same time.

The Queen will lay the foundation stone of the Imperial Institute on July 4th.

JESS.

BY H. RIDER HAGGARD

Author of "King Solomon's Mines," "She," etc.

Thud and a cloud of stars! He was on his back, and the ostrich, who did not seem to be affected by giddiness, was on him, punishing him dreadfully. Luckily an ostrich cannot kick a man very hard when he is flat on the ground. If he could there would have been an end of John Niel and this story need never have been written.

Half a minute or so passed, during which the bird worked his sweet will upon his prostrate enemy, and at the end of it the man began to feel very much as though his earthly career was closed. Just as things were growing faint and dim to him, however, he suddenly saw a pair of white arms clasp themselves round the ostrich's legs from behind and heard a voice cry:

"Break his neck while I hold his legs, or he will kill you!"

This roused him from his torpor, and he staggered to his feet. Meanwhile the ostrich and the young lady had come to the ground, and were rolling about together in a confused heap, over which the elegant neck and open, hissing mouth wavered to and fro like a cobra about to strike. With a rush he seized the neck in both his hands, and, putting out all his strength (for he was a strong man), he twisted it till it broke with a snap, and after a few wild and convulsive bounds and struggles the great bird lay dead.

Then he sank down, dazed and exhausted, and surveyed the scene. The ostrich was perfectly quiet, and would never kick again, and the lady, too, was quiet. He wondered vaguely if the brute had killed her—he was as yet too weak to go and see—and then fell to gazing at her face. Her head was pillowed on the body of the dead bird, and its feathery plumes made a fitting resting place. Slowly it dawned upon him that the face was very beautiful, although it looked so pale just now. Low, broad brow, crowned with soft, yellow hair, the chin very round and white, the mouth sweet though rather large. The eyes he could not see, because they were closed, for the lady had fainted. For the rest, she was young—about 20—tall, and finely formed. Presently he got a little better, and, creeping toward her (for he was sadly knocked about), took her hand and began to chafe it between his own. It was a well formed hand, but brown, and showed signs of doing plenty of hard work. Soon she opened her eyes, and he noted with satisfaction that they were very good eyes, blue in color. Then she sat up and laughed a little.

"Well, I am silly," she said; "I believe I fainted."

"It is not much to be wondered at," said John Niel, politely, and lifting his hand to take off his hat, only to find that it had gone in the fray. "I hope you are not very much hurt by the bird?"

"I don't know," she said, doubtfully. "But I'm glad that you killed the skellum (vicious beast). He got out of the ostrich camp three days ago, and has been lost ever since. He killed a boy last year and I told uncle he ought to shoot him then, but he would not, because he was such a beauty."

"Might I ask," said John Niel, "are you Miss Croft?"

"Yes. I am—one of them. There are two of us, you know; and I can guess who you are—you are Capt. Niel, whom uncle is expecting to help him with the farm and the ostriches."

"If all of them are like that," he said, pointing to the dead bird, "I don't think that I shall take kindly to ostrich farming."

She laughed, showing a charming line of teeth. "Oh, no," she said, "he was the only bad one—but, Capt. Niel, I think you will find it fearfully dull. There are nothing but Boers here, you know. There are no English people nearer than Wakkerstroom."

"You overlook yourself," he said, politely; for really this daughter of the wilderness had a very charming air about her.

"Oh," she answered, "I am only a girl, you know, and, besides, I am not clever. Jess, now—that's my sister—Jess has been at school at Cape Town and she is clever. I was at Cape Town, too, but I didn't learn much there. But, Capt. Niel, both the horses have bolted; mine has gone home, and I expect yours has followed, and I should like to know how we are going to get up to Mooifontein (beautiful fountain, that's what we call our place, you know). Can you walk?"

"I don't know," he answered, doubtfully; "I'll try. That bird has knocked me about a good deal," and accordingly he staggered on to his legs, only to collapse with an exclamation of pain. His ankle was sprained, and he was so stiff and bruised that he could hardly stir. "How far is the house?" he asked.

"Only about a mile—just there; we shall see it from the crest of the rise. Look, I'm all right. It was silly to faint, but he kicked all the breath out of me," and she got up and danced a little on the grass to show him. "My word, though, I am sore! You must take my arm, that's all; that is, if you don't mind."

"Oh, dear, no, indeed, I don't mind," he said, laughing; and so they started, arm affectionately linked in arm.

CHAPTER II.

HOW THE SISTERS CAME TO MOOIFONTEIN.

"Capt. Niel," said Bessie Croft (for that was her name) when they had painfully limped 100 yards or so, "will you think me rude if I ask you a question?"

"Not at all."

"What has induced you to come and bury yourself in this place?"

"Why do you ask?"

"Because I don't think that you will like it. I don't think," she added, slowly, "that it is a fit place for an English gentleman and an army officer like you. You will find the Boer ways horrid, and then there will only be my old uncle and us two for you to associate with."

John Niel laughed. "English gentlemen ain't so particular nowadays, I can tell you, Miss Croft, especially when they have to earn a living. Take my case, for instance, for I may as well tell you exactly how I stand. I have been in the army fourteen years, and am now 34. Well, I have been able to live there because I had an old aunt who allowed me £120 a year. Six months ago she died, leaving me the little property she possessed, for most of her income came from an annuity. After paying expenses, duty, etc., it amounts to £1,115. Now, the interest on that is about £50 a year, and I can't live in the army on that. Just after my aunt's death I came to Durban with my regiment from Mauritius, and now they are ordered home. Well, I liked the country, and I knew that I could not afford to live at home, so I got a year's leave of absence, and made up my mind to have a look round to see if I could not take to farming. Then a gentleman in Durban told me of your uncle, and said that he wanted to dispose of a third interest in his place for £1,000, as he was getting too old to manage it himself; and so I entered into correspondence with him and agreed to come up for a few months to see how I liked it, and accordingly here I am, just in time to save you from being knocked to bits by an ostrich."

"Yes, indeed," she answered, laughingly; "you've had a warm welcome at any rate. Well, I hope you will like it."

Just as he finished his story they got to the top of the rise over which the ostrich had pursued Bessie Croft, and saw a Kaffir coming toward them, leading the pony in one hand and Capt. Niel's horse in the other. About 100 yards behind came Jess, walking.

"Ah," said Bessie, "they've caught the horses, and here is Jess come to see what is the matter."

By this time the lady in question was quite close, so that John was able to get a first impression of her. She was small and rather thin, with quantities of curling brown hair; not by any means a lovely woman, as her sister undoubtedly was, but possessing two very remarkable characteristics—a complexion of extraordinary and uniform pallor, and a pair of the most beautiful dark eyes he had ever looked on. Altogether, though her size was almost insignificant, she was a striking looking person, with a face one was not likely to forget. Before he had time to observe any more they were on to them.

To be Continued.

THE DEVIL WORSHIPERS.

Strange Religions of the Wild Kurds Who Dwell in Mesopotamia.

Not far from Mosul in Mesopotamia there are a few Kurdish villages where one finds neither mosque nor minaret, synagog nor medrash, church nor meeting house. Moslems—saving an occasional government official—are rarely seen there, travellers not at all. Ordinarily there is nothing in the appearance of these places or the people to attract the attention of wayfarers, apart from the white dresses of the women and the vests of the men. But one day in the year the village assumes quite a holiday aspect in preparation for a strange ceremony annually enacted there. The houses are plentifully decked with garlands of yellow flowers, and the people take up positions outside—the women in spotless gowns, the men with a twisted black cord around their necks. Then a procession of some thirty persons emerges from the residence of the "pir" and begins slowly to perambulate the village. In front march half a dozen wierd-looking personages in long black robes and strange black headgear; then comes half a score of "knawals," in yellow mantles and white turbans, chanting religious hymns in an outlandish tongue and behind them as many more playing an accompaniment to the singers on reedy flutes and tambourines. Following these is the white-robed priest bearing upon his shoulders a kind of epulet, and holding aloft the bronzed figure of a bird, guarded on either side by a fierce looking Kurd, with a perfect arsenal of small arms about his person. In the rear rides the white turbaned sheik of the district, with a second batch of "black heads" to wind up the procession. The party makes the round of the village, the people raising their hands to the brazen bird as it passes, and then halts in front of the priest's house. Here a sheep is in readiness; it is cut open and the heart is torn from it and thrown at the feet of the black robed figures. The procession then re-enters the dwelling, while the sheep is made ready for the pot; and in honor of the day the residents afterwards dine together as soon as their "stew" is ready. These Kurdish villagers are the "Yozidis," or "devil-worshippers" of Mesopotamia, and their annual procession—known as the "showing of the king bird," the melik taous or "peacock king"—is the only ceremonial of their mystic cult. The devil-worshippers accept no proselytes. "A Yezidi," they say, "must be born of a Yezidi; he cannot be made." They have no ceremonial ablutions or attach no importance to them, and are allowed to use nothing colored blue. They will not sit down on a sofa having a blue tassel or enter a room containing an article of furniture covered with blue cloth. Their religion prohibits them from serving as soldiers, though there appears to be nothing to prevent them from cutting throats on their own account. They baptize boys and girls, and when old enough every member has to make choice of a sister or a brother who is to be his or her companion for eternity.—St. James Gazette.

W. C. T. U.

A special meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held to-morrow at 4 p. m. in their hall. Will the ladies please remember, as there is very important business on hand.

Miss Mittie Fraine.

Miss Fraine, late teacher of elocution in the Ontario Ladies' College, will give a number of selections in the Y. M. C. A. Hall on Friday, 20th May. Tickets, 25 cents; to be had at Schofield's drug store.

Others May Note This.

A communication has been received from "Farmer's Son," but it is not published for two reasons: first, the letter is written on both sides of the paper; and, second, the writer does not send his name. The rule requiring the name of a correspondent cannot be broken.

Foolhardy.

This morning as the Grand Junction train was going up Bethune street, a teamster commenced to draw a heavy load of stone across the track about a hundred yards in front of the advancing train. When well over the sudden jerk [illegible] getting over the rails pulled the tongue out of the neckyoke. The brakes were whistled down, and the train was only a few yards from the waggon when stopped. In the meantime the teamster by liberal use of the lash succeeded in getting the waggon across.

For Reliable Kid Gloves try the Alexandre make; to be had in all the leading shades at Turnbull's.

Re-Opening.

Porter Bros. will move back to their old premises in a day or two. Since the fire the business has been carried on in the part of the building which was uninjured, in the Skating Rink, and the shop on the corner of Simcoe and Aylmer streets. Now that the main building is again ready, it will be occupied at once, and Porter Bros. will be into business heavier than ever. Much success has been met with in the handling of the O. B. & S. road cart. From eight to ten a day are being shipped to various parts of the Province. A handsome extension carriage has been recently shipped to Mr. Gould, of Norwood.

Big Excursion.

The first big excursion of the season billed for Peterborough is that to be managed by the Orange order of West Toronto. It is billed for May 24th. Mr. Wm. Bell, P. D. M., West Toronto; Capt. McFadden, of the York Rangers; Mr. Geo. Downard, P. M., of L. O. L. 342, West Toronto, and Mr. Geo. Armstrong, representing the Prentice Boys, were here on Thursday making arrangements. They say that there will be four uniformed corps accompanying the excursion, the Prentice Boys, Scarlet Chapter, the Pioneer corps and the Royal Black Knights of Ireland. They expect between 1,500 and 2,000 people to come to Peterborough that day. Two brass bands will be on board and possibly three or four.

A Large Funeral.

The Kingston News has the following notice of the funeral of the late M. E. O'Brien, brother-in-law of Mrs. (Dr.) O'Sullivan, of Peterborough:—"The funeral of the late Mr. M. E. O'Brien, of Prescott, took place yesterday. Over fifty rigs left Prescott for Brockville, and on reaching the latter place those who desired to go to Perth were taken there on a special train which was provided for that purpose. The floral decorations were elegant. A large wheel, with a broken spoke, sent from Montreal, and a harp, with a string snapped, sent by the choir of which he was a member, were exceedingly beautiful. One side of the room in which the corpse was laid out was literally covered with flowers forwarded by friends from all over the provinces. While the cortege, which was the largest ever seen in Prescott, passed through the town every place of business along the route was closed, showing the high respect in which Mr. O'Brien was held. Among the clergymen present from Kingston were Fathers Kelly and Twoney. At Smith's Falls Bishop Cleary met the body and proceeded to Perth, and conducted the funeral service in the church."

Your chance to-day to secure the best value in Ladies Jerseys ever shown in Peterborough. Sheppard is now offering some beautiful goods in black and colors at fully 50 per cent. less than wholesale prices.

WRECK OF A TRAIN.

THE DRIVER AND FIREMAN BADLY INJURED.

Nine Cars and an Engine Demolished—The Cause of the Run off Unaccounted For.

At half past one o'clock on Wednesday afternoon way freight No. 41, in charge of Conductor Way, left the track at about five miled this side of Campbellford. The engine went over on the left side into a bank of clay and the force of the long train of cars running at 14 miles an hour drove nine cars into a heap on top of the engine before a standstill was reached. Just before the train left the track brakeman Emsley was standing on top of the box car next to the engine and tender. He had come down and was standing on the platrorm. As soon as he felt the car bump on the ties he jumped off and got out of the way and very luckily escaped injury apart from a little shaking up. Conductor Way and brakeman Hully were in the van at the end of the train at dinner. They were apprised of the train being off by being thrown to the other end of the car. Conductor Way was and bruised some, but the brakeman, usually so luckless, escaped unhurt. When the conductor and brakemen gathered themselves up they found that the accident had been indeed a serious one. The engine and nine of the cars were piled in a heap of debris against the bank. The first box car had gone clean up the bank 15 feet high. The first thing was to find what had become of driver W. Mallack and fireman Joe Taylor. After searching for a time they found both buried in the motley heap. Driver Mallack was wedged in under the boiler, and the fireman was under a truck with only a few inches between his head and a heavy truck wheel. The three train hands uninjured set vigorously to work to get the fireman and driver out and soon succeeded. Conductor Way then ran back to Campbellford and a conveyance was got to bring the wounded men back. They were brought to Kerr's hotel and Dr. Goldsmith, Dr. McRea were called to dress the wounds. It was found on examination that driver Mallack's between the knee and the ankle and that he had received severe gashes in the head. The fireman was badly bruised all over. [illegible] that it was very difficult to stop the flow of blood. He was hurt in the back and in the groin. It is said that his case is a serious one, the internal injuries being worse than was at first thought. During Wednesday night the fever was very high and to-day he was unable to be removed to his home. Driver Mallack feels quite well to-day. He was brought up on a stretcher on Conductor Stanton's train and taken to his home in Ashburnham. The cause of the run off is not known. The same engine, No. 635, ran off last fall

THROWN AGAINST THE STOVE

LEFT LEG WAS BROKEN

BURYING ITSELF IN A DITCH,

a few miles from the scene of the present wreck. It jumped on the left side, on the high side of the track, and did precisely the same thing on this occasion. As soon as the accident was reported at Belleville two gangs of men were despatched to clear the track. They worked all night and to-day the road is clear.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE

THE SPRING SITTINGS OF THE ASSIZE COURT.

COCHRANE VS. THE HAMILTON PROVIDENT LOAN SOCIETY.—This was an action brought to recover the surplus of the proceeds of the sale of lands by the defendants under a mortgage. In 1878 the plaintiff mortgaged his lands to the defendants for $3,600 payable in 20 annual instalments. The first instalment was paid and the three next were not paid in the proper time. In March 1882 the defendants ordered the plaintiff to give then a chattel mortgage on his goods and chattels, and had agreed, therefor, to extend the time of payment of arrears on land mortgage and to take no proceedings for a year. The plaintiff says that the defendant broke this contract by seizing the goods under the chattel mortgage and by commencing an action to recover possession of the land. Judgment was obtained by defendant and the land was sold for $5,300. The plaintiff held that under the agreement the defendants had no right to sell, and also claimed that they sacrificed the land. He also claimed the price of a reaper wrongfully sold by them under the chattel mortgage. The jury found in favor of plaintiff. They placed the value of the land at $6,300, and granting the plaintiff $70 for the reaper.—E. B. Stone and George Edmison for plaintiff; and G. H. Watson, Toronto, and J. Muir, Kingston, for defendants.

O'BRIEN AND KILBRIDE.

O'Brien's Lecture in Montreal on Landlordism in Ireland.

Mr. Wm. O'Brien, editor of Dublin United Ireland, delivered a lecture in Montreal on Wednesday evening on "Landlordism in Ireland." The lecture was given in Albert hall, which was packed with people. The Mail gives the following report of the lecture by its Montreal correspondent:—

Ladies and fellow-countrymen, Mr. O'Orien commenced, I desire at the very outset to tackel the question why I have come here to ask a hearing and to ask your assistence. I will tell you in one word—because the homes in Luggacurran are desolate to-night, and the man who has caused it all is in the highest position in this great country of yours. (Loud hisses.) It is by no means pleasent for me to intrude myself on your attention. I am but a humble stranger from Ireland, and Lord Lansdowne is a great lord, but judging from the feeling I have experienced I do not think I need apologize to you for coming here to protest against the extermination of our race by a man using Canadian money. (Loud hisses and applause.) Where are we to turn unless to the public opinion of kindred lands such as Canada? (Loud applause.) Or have I come to this, that it is to be a crime to appeal to you, who alone can save the poor people of Luggacurran? (Applause.) I have not come here to appeal to passion or excitement, or stir up division among the people of this happy country. (Hear, hear.) My object is to appeal to the reason and judgment of all free and liberty-loving men. (Hear, hear.) It would never be forgotten by Ireland that Canada, during the terrible famine of 1879, had subscribed twenty thousand pounds for the famishing people of Ireland. The great leader of the Irish people, C. S. Parnell—(loud applause)—had said he would never beg the world again for alms for the victims of Irish landlordism. They did not come to ask for alms, they came to ask for a helping hand. They did not ask now for twenty thousand pounds, but they ask them to enquire what use Lord Lansdowne had been making of the money he had been getting from this country, and if they found him in the wrong, he asked them to pass their just sentence on Lord Lansdowne's conduct, as they had a just, constitutional and uncontrovertible right to do. (Applause.) The speaker then alluded to the Crimes bill, which he said sought to reduce the Irish to the level of Negro slavery. It would enable men worse than Lord Lansdowne—for personally he had no reason to judge him harshly—to gag and throttle the people of Ireland. (Cries of "shame," "shame.") If the people of Canada wished to stand between them and coercion, now's the day and now's the hour, for the day they passed condemnation on Lord Lansdowne for his action [illegible] ran afoul [illegible] arm of Gladstone, and put an end to the policy of extermination. (Loud applause.) Lord Lansdowne's policy was simply to depopulate and devastate an estate five miles in extent. (Loud hisses.) He dare not deny that fact. If Lansdowne was allowed to triumph in Canada, at the next Quarter Sessions in Queen's County he would get his final batch of evictions, and, with the exception of Lord Lansdowne's creatures, there would not be a person on the estate who would not be banished from the land of his fathers. (Loud hisses and cries of "Shame, shame,") Mr. O'Brien then proceeded to read reports of the evictions.

[At this stage a loud crash was heard in the rear of the hall, and there was a buzz of excitement. The noise had been caused by some roughs who hurled a volley of stones through the window.]

Mr. O'Brien, continuing to describe the evictions, said that was the kind of man who, unfortunately, was Governor-General of Canada, and it was Canadian money which was being used by his brutes and hirelings. These men only owed half a year's rent, and were as honest and punctual a body of tenants as ever a landlord was blessed with. Their only crime was their just demand for a reduction of the rack rents. The speaker then made numerous quotations in support of his contention that the demands of the tenants were less than Lord Cooper's royal commission of landlords had considered essential and which he said Lord Lansdowne's own arbitrator, M. Denning, had approved of in writing out of the months of his own friends; therefore Lord Lansdowne stood condemned. (Applause.) He had also refused to reduce the judicial rents by a single farthing, and was turning Luggacurran into a wilderness Had Lord Lansdowne not broken his treaties with the tenants he would have been spared the indignity of standing at the bar of public opinion in Canada to answer the cries of the poor tottering men and helpless children whom he had driven from their homes, Mr. O'Brien said he could go on for hours piling proof upon proof. He based the tenants' claim wholly and solely upon the declaration of the Royal Commission and Lord Lansdowne's own agents, and he held that out of the mouths of his own friends he stood condemned, and that the justice of the tenants' cause stood revealed. (Loud applause). The tenants had adopted the Plan of Campaign—(applause)—they had stood by it—(applause)—and they were prepared to stand by it to the bitter end. (Great cheering.) What would they have them to do? Would they have them to lie down at the landlord's feet? (Loud shouts of "No, no! Never!") Would they allow them to be transported in ships to the shores of the St. Lawrence, as in former days, and be buried on their arrival? (Cries of "No.") But, thank God, the tenants no longer left their homes with dejected air, but with the shout of "God Save Ireland" and cheers for the Plan of Campaign. (Loud applause.) There was not an Irish exterminator now who could hide his face in any country the wide world over—(applause)—and save himself from the condemnation of the civilized world. That was what cheered the people of Ireland and kept their hands from crime. He appealed to-night to three million of Canadian freemen, who were empanelled to pronounce between Lord Lansdowne, not as Governor-General of Canada, but as an Irish evictor—(hisses—and the fore or five hundred women and children who had been condemned to expulsion. From many a home in Ireland to-night were anxious watchers looking to see whether the verdict would be one of emancipation or destruction. It was for Canada to let Lord Lansdowne and the world know that when Canada stretched out her hand to Ireland it was not for eviction or expulsion, but to sympathize and succour them. Let them do this, and he assured them that when the misery had passed away and when the great fact of reconciliation had been realized in the pleasant years to come, from the happy homes of Luggacurran and the overflowing hearts of those assembled in the nation's Parliament on College Green—(loud cheers)—the gratified Irish race would remember for ever the message that he hoped would be flashed across to them to-night from the sister-land of Canada. (Great applause, during which Mr. O'Brien retired.)

At the conclusion of the address a unanimous vote of thanks was passed to the speaker amid cheers, and the gathering broke up without any disturbance and the singing of "God Save Ireland." Mr. O'Brien's speech was delivered in a forcible, earnest manner, and was marked by studied calmness and unexpected moderation.

SPEECH BY MR. KILBRIDE.

Mr. Kilbride, the evicted tenant who accompanies Mr. O'Brien, did not arrive in Montreal until to-night. He was given a reception at the depot, and escorted to the St. Lawrence Hall, where he made an extreme speech, in which he said that he and Mr. O'Brien would return to Ireland triumphant, but that Lord Lansdowne by the force of public opinion would be obliged to leave the country.

THE LACROSSE CONCERT.—The concert under the direction of the "Ironclads" came off as duly announced, on Friday evening of last week. The result was a gratifying success, both in point of merit and financially, the gross receipts amounting to a trifle over $60. Worse Than Wooden Nutmegs.

I went up to one of the slaughter houses to see a friend of mine. While I was there a man who peddles kerosene around the city in a wagon drove up and wanted some bladders. He finally bought a lot of those sheep bladders that will hold when blown up from a pint to a quart. After he left we talked it over and wondered what the man could want them for. They are used in making bologna sausage, but he couldn't want them for this. Finally I started for home, and, in cutting across a field, came upon the peddler's wagon standing by the fence. The kerosene cans in the waggon were covered with a cloth. I walked up closer, and saw the man at work partly under the cloth. He would take a bladder, force it down through the mouth of the can, blow it up with a stick with a hole through it, take a string from a bunch already cut and ready, tie the mouth of the bladder, and let it remain in the can. I watched him until he had fixed up all [illegible] left, and I was anxious [illegible] them. He drove along to a house and a woman came out to buy some kerosene, bringing her own can. He got partly under the cloth while filling the can, and I saw him put one of the bladders in her can and blow it up the same as he did in his own cans. He gave her the can and went along. This is a pretty sharp trick. Every can with a bladder inside will hold, of course, from a pint to a quart less oil than he is getting pay for. Full or empty, no one would be likely to discover the bladder in the can. It would not rattle, being soft, would add nothing to the weight and could not be seen.—Bridgeport News.

Live Stock.

The live stock trade in England is very dull and heavy at present. The recent advance was not sustained. The London Canadian Gazette gives its opinion that no substantial advance may be looked for this season. It says:—"Dominion shippers who have been figuring on short supplies of English and Scotch fat stock would do well to note that the recent slight advance in values brought out large consignments from the home and midland counties, a fact proving conclusively that there is still plenty of native cattle available. We are now in a position to speak with some degree of confidence as to the prospects for this season, and so far are unable to re-echo the general cry about improved trade. Canadian cattle will not touch more than 6¼d per lb. in any market this year, and we shall be agreeably disappointed if the average for best sorts throughout is 6d per lb. Private advices speak of Dominion shippers anticipating 6½d and 7d per lb.; otherwise heavy losses would be made. Such talk is foolish, and so entirely counter to the experience of last year that we are inclined to believe it is not serious."

ANOTHER CHATTERTON.

LONDON, May 11.—A story of tragic misery is revealed in a card addressed by an indignant artist, T. C. Ferrar, to the Pall Mall Gazette. From this card it appears that P. H. Potter, a young English artist of great promise, has just died from sheer starvation. He was too proud to make his extreme want known. Although he was a good painter, he had no skill in selling his pictures or in making himself known. Two years ago he had a picture on the line at the Royal academy; this year he has a picture in a prominent place in the Grosvenor gallery, entitled "A quiet corner." Several months ago this beautiful picture was pawned for eighteen shillings, and was redeemed only with great difficulty in time for exhibition. His death from starvation, while his last and best picture was the subject of praise from the critics, has made a positive sensation in art circles.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC

FROM

J. J. SHEEHY

I beg to say that contrary to announcements which appeared in the Peterborough papers for the past two months, I DO NOT intend to remove to T. Dolan & Co's Dry Goods Store, nor have I any connections whatever with that establishment. The final arrangements not being satisfactory to me, I withdrew from the projected change, and intend carrying on the Dry Goods business in my usual stand next to Loch's Hat Store.

It is my intention in the future as in the past to show at all seasons nothing but new and fresh goods in the various lines of Dry Goods and Gent's Furnishings; and by doing so, hope to retain the confidence which I am proud to say, I have enjoyed from the public since commencing business two years ago.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE

THE SPRING SITTINGS OF THE ASSIZE COURT.

COX VS. CAVANAGH.—An action of ejectment brought by Wm. S. Cox, landlord, against T. Cavanagh, tenant, to eject him from the Stewart House and for the use of the premises for a year. It appeared there was and old lease made on the 1st of May some eleven years ago between Mr. Cluxton, former owner, and the defendant at $800 a year, and that when the stable was burned in the fall of 1882 Mr. Cluxton demanded an increase of rent of $100 on condition of building new stables which it was affirmed by the plaintiff, was the only new arrangement then made. The defendant, however, contended, that there was then a new lease made for $900 a year for a term of ten years, to commence from 1st of February, 1883 and gave evidence of himself and a witness that such was the case. It also appeared that after his suit commenced the defendant had paid Mr. Cox $900 "rent" to the 1st of May 1887, he, however, disputing this and claimed it was only taken for use of the premises for an overholding tenant who had received due notice to leave. The judge left a number of questions to the jury to be answered.

The jury returned a verdict in favor of the defendant. D. W. Dumble for plaintiff. W. H. Moore and Mr. Watson, Toronto, for the defendant.

DUMBLE VS. PETERBOROUGH REAL ESTATE INVESTMENT CO.—An action to compel acknowledgement of moneys paid on a mortgage. The case was referred to Judge Weller, he to take the accounts.—Dumble & Leonard for the plaintiff; Hall & Hayes for the defendants.

STARR VS. LASHER.—This was an action for ejectment. The defendant's right in a lot on Union street was sold to the plaintiff under an execution against the defendant. At the time of the sale the defendant's daughter, Mrs. Staples, made a claim on the lot. This action was brought to eject the defendant from the premises the defendant setting up the claim of Mrs. Staples on the property. The Court held that this claim was paramont to the plantiff's, but on the plaintiff's application ordered the action to stand over so that Mrs. Staples might be made a party to the action. Mr. R. E. Wood, for the plaintiff; Mr. A. P Poussette, Q. C., for the defendant.

QUEEN VS. WARNER.—In the Queen vs. Warner perjury case His Lordship quashed the indictment in regard to the Scott Act case. The true bill brought in respecting the evidence given in the assault case was allowed to stand over till next assizes, the prisoner to appear on his own recognisance.

BREALY VS. WOOD.—An action to recover a penalty of $200 for failure to comply with the requirements of the Voters' List Act. The defendant is Clerk of the Township of Monaghan. The law requires township clerks to deliver copies of the Voters' List when printed to certain parties including the teachers of the schools in the township. The plaintiff claimed that no copies of the Voters' List had been sent to the teacher in No. 1 School Section. The defendant declined to answer questions put to him on the ground that the answers might subject him to the penalty, and other evidence not being clear that the clerk had neglected his duty, the court decided that no case was made out and that it should not go the jury. Mr. A. P. Pousette, Q. C., and E. A. Peck, for the plaintiff, and Mr. G. H. Watson, for the defendant.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT

FIRST SESSION OF THE SIXTH CANADIAN PARLIAMENT.

The Deputy Speaker—Haldimand Election—Insulting the Judiciary—Vaccinating Indians—The Franchise Act—Intercolonial Rates.

WEDNESDAY, May 11.—The letter from the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery as to the gazetting of members was presented.

DEPUTY SPEAKER.

Sir JOHN MACDONALD said that Mr. Rykert on medical advice had declined the Deputy Speakership. He nominated Mr. Colby, M.P., for Stanstead, whose qualifications for the position he described.

Mr. BLAKE added his expression of approval and congratulation.

Mr. MITCHELL also approved.

VOLUNTEERS' ALLOWANCE.

Sir. A. CARON, in reply to Mr. Edgar, said the volunteers of the Royal Grenadiers and the Queen's Own had been allowed $8.15 per man in the North-West in lieu of kit. Payment had not yet been made to the York and Simcoe volunteers because the pay sheets had not been received.

HALDIMAND ELECTION.

Mr. CASEY moved for papers as to the Haldimand election. He entered into details of the recount and the decision of the County Judge, whom he accused of yielding to threats by Senator McCallum that he would have him dismissed, and whom he als ocharged with drunkenness.

The SPEAKER called him to order for speaking thus of a judge, who could be called to account in a proper manner if there was cause.

Mr. CASEY withdrew the offensive words, but said that weight was given to Mr. Colter's publicly uttered charges as they ha i not been caallenged.

Dr. MONTAGUE did not dispute the right of Mr. Casey to move for papers, but thought he showed very bad taste by his partizan treatment of a question now before the Courts. He taunted the Opposition with this further proof of their disappointment at their defeat and especially severe disappointment in the case of Mr. Casey, who had boasted that he was to be one of the Cabinet. Mr. Coulter had said that Mr. Edgar had been worth 100 votes to him, but if so it was not from his popularity but from what he brought with him. He would not enter into the details of the recount as that matter was before the Courts and he was not afraid of the result. He warmly condemned the attack of Mr. Casey upon Senator McCallum. He wanted his rights and nothing more and would not have the slightest fear if he had again to appeal to the verdict of the electors.

THE HIGH COMMISSIONER.

Mr. MILLS moved for a copy of Sir C. Tupper's resignation as High Commissioner.

VACCINATING INDIANS.

Mr. CHARLTON made a charge against Lieu.-Gov. Dewdney and Dr. Dodd, that the doctor had been paid extravagantly for vaccinating Indians at the File Hills.

Sir. J. MACDONALD said the doctor's remuneration had amounted to 24 cents for each Indian vaccinated, the usual charge elsewhere being 50 cents.

HAULING DOWN THE FLAG.

Mr. JONES wanted papers as to a proposal to purchase military lands at Annapolis. He thought the fort should be retained on account of its historic associations.

Sir A. CARON agreed that such historic spots should not be sold.

THE INTERCOLONIAL.

Mr. ELLIS moved for returns as to the grain carried by the Intercolonial to Halifax. He complained that the through rates eastward were too low comparatively.

Mr. POPE said it was better to take freight at the current rate than to let the cars return empty.

Mr. JONES complained that the through rates westward were too low comparatively.

Mr. KENNY thought these low rates were for the benefit of the country, if they did not produce a surplus for the Intercolonial. It would even be better to lower the rate for carrying sugar.

Mr. CAMPBELL advocated giving small shippers as good rates as large shippers.

INDIAN LANDS.

Mr. O'BRIEN moved for returns as to the money still due to the Chippewa Indians of Lakes Huron and Superior for their lands surrendered under the Robinson Treaty.

Sir J. MACDONALD said the Indians should get their money, but it was due by the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec who had not settled their accounts and he had no power to do anything in the matter.

THE FISHERIES.

Sir J. MACDONALD, in reply to Mr. Jones, said no reply had yet been received from Washington to Lord Salisbury's despatch.

THE FRANCHISE.

Mr. EDGAR was anxious for a discussion on his bill to amend the Franchise Act.

Sir J. MACDONALD said there would be an opportunity. The Government also proposed to amend the Franchise Act.

Arrived at Turnbull's by express, several quite New and Stylish Shapes in Bonnets and Hats, such as the Graceful, Tanden, Toboggan, Sylvia, Northwood, Essex, and others too numerous to mention.

The Jesuit Bill.

QUEBEC, May 12.—The Jesuit bill passed the Council committee this morning without amendment. Father Turgeon has telegrams from the Superior of the order, dated the 5th and 9th of May, instructing him to proceed with the demands of the order in the matter, and adding the approval of the Pope. Vicar-General Hamel again appeared for the Cardinal, and read a telegram from the Pope, dated April last, stating that he could not interfere with lay representation, but authorizing Cardinal Taschereau to obtain a delay. It was argued that the latter part was only a suggestion of Cardinal Simeoni. The preamble passed on division and the main motion unanimously.

For Coughs and Colds, use Allen's Lung Balsam. Relief is warranted or money refunded.

IRISH AFFAIRS.

Mr. Gladstone Makes a Speech—The Crimes Bill in the House.

LONDON, May 12.—Mr. Gladstone was present at a luncheon given yesterday to forty Nonconformist ministers at the residence of Dr. Parker, of the City Temple. He made an address of an hour's length, the subject of the whole discourse being Ireland. He said there never had been any reason for charging the Parnellites with complicity in Irish crime. Six years ago, while Prime Minister, he had denounced the Parnellites as dangerous. That was totally different from charging them with crime. The present utterances of Major Saunderson, of Lord Randolph Churchill and even of the Marquis of Salisbury were more dangerous than any utterances the Parnellites had ever made. Mr. Gladstone held that the alliance between the Liberals and Parnellites was a perfetly open one and one that had been brought about by a community of belief. It compared favorably with the alliance between the Conservatives and the Irish in 1881 and 1885. The Coercion bill was an insidious attack on the press. The measure was designed to create new offences. It was a dishonorable and degrading bill. In conclusion Mr. Gladstone vehemently denounced the government's attitude on the Times' charges against the Irish members, and said the prosecution of the Times by the crown would be a horrible farce.

IN THE HOUSE.

The House of Commons last evening resumed the consideration in committee of the Coercion bill.

Peter McDonald (Nationalist) moved the adoption of an amendment to the effect that the evidences of witnesses at preliminary enquiries should not be adduced against them except in case of perjury.

Mr. balfour opposed the adoption of such an amendment, because as he said, the clause as it stood was necessary to induce witnesses to give evidence.

Prof. James Stuart, of St. Andrew's University, Radical Member for the Hoxton division of Shoreditch, declared that the clause, as it stood, was the most serious innovation in the criminal law.

Mr. Healy said that in opposing the Government's proposal his party were fighting for one of the oldest principles of English jurisprudence.

Mr. W. H. Smith insisted that the committee divide amid cries of "shame," "ruinous," &c.

The closure was put and carried by a majority of 265 to 162.

Mr. Parnell has left Avondale and will arrive in London this morning. He has sent a telegram saying that his health is improved, and that he expects to be present in Parliament to-day.

STRANGE STORY OF CRIME.

Supposed Murder Near Niagara Fourteen Years since.

ST. CATHARINES, May 11.—For some time past vague hints have been thrown out by a gentleman living near Niagara of the possible development of a horrible poisoning case which occurred there about twelve or fourteen years ago. Although the rumors have been somewhat indefinite, yet it is known that the man who is pushing the matter had at that time a well-to-do lady relative belonging to one of the oldest families and possessing in her own right considerable valuable farm property. The lady died after a brief sickness, and it seems under suspicious circumstances, and was duly interred in the family burial plot. Of late years the gentleman in question, from certain remarks, has conceived the idea that she was poisoned with arsenic or some other deadly drug, and so convinced was he of the truth of his theory that through proper legal officials here leave was obtained a few days ago from the Attorney-General in Toronto to exhume the remains for chemical investigation. Acting under instructions from headquarters, Dr. Considine, Coroner, of Port Dalhousie, and Mr. John McKeown, County Crown Attorney, of St. Catharines, left here yesterday to superintend the exhumation and attend to the details of sealing up what may be found in the coffin in order to send the same to the Government analyst in Toronto. Further light may be thrown on what is now a very mysterious matter when the analysis is made. In the meantime the officials intend to pursue a policy of silence.

Live Stock.

The live stock trade in England is very dull and heavy at present. The recent advance was not sustained. The London Canadian Gazette gives its opinion that no substantial advance may be looked for this season. It says:—"Dominion shippers who have been figuring on short supplies of English and Scotch fat stock would do well to note that the recent slight advance in values brought out large consignments from the home and midland counties, a fact proving conclusively that there is still plenty of native cattle available. We are now in a position to speak with some degree of confidence as to the prospects for this season, and so far are unable to re-echo the general cry about improved trade. Canadian cattle will not touch more than 6½d per lb. in any market this year, and we shall be agreeably disappointed if the average for best sorts throughout is 6d per lb. Private advices speak of Dominion shippers anticipating 6½d and 7d per lb.; otherwise heavy losses would be made. Such talk is foolish, and so entirely counter to the experience of last year that we are inclined to believe it is not serious."

"Oppress not nature, sinking down to rest, With feasts too late, too solid, or too full."

Armstrong, when he wrote these lines, gave good scientific advice. Half of our people suffer from dy-pepsia in some of its many forms. Life becomes a burden, and business worries and annoys. The "Golden Medical Discovery," invented and prepared by Dr. Pierce, is an effectual remedy for indigestion. By druggists.

LATEST CABLE NEWS.

FRENCH REPRISALS.

PARIS, May 12.—The Government has closed a velocipede factory at Maraisville, near Luneville, the property of a German named Schmertzer, who employed men belonging to the German Imperial army. The incident is supposed to be the prelude to other reprisals against the Germans. La France denounces M. Laboulaye, the French Ambassador at St. Petersburg, for retaining a Prussian in his service as a Chasseur.

FROM THE VATICAN.

ROME, May 12.—Cardinal Simeoni, who was charged by the Pope to examine the situation in Ireland, recommends that the Pope advise the Irish bishops to adhere rigorously to the course decided upon by a former council of bishops at Rome, namely, that the clergy abstain from associating themselves with the agitators.

PROBALE RESIGNATION.

LONDON, May 12.—Ministerialists expect Mr. Balfour will withdraw from the Irish office immediately after the passage of the Crimes Bill. Mr. Balfour is unable to overtake the work of the department, and suffers from mental strain. Mr. Ritchie, president of the Local Government Board, who is of stronger physique, is willing to accept the post of Irish Secretary.

WILD WEST SHOW.

LONDON, May 12.—The Queen, the Marquis of Lorne and Princess Louise visited the Wild West Show yesterday afternoon. The Queen was pleased with the performance and frequently applauded. Mr. Cody, Red Shirt and a number of squaws were introduced to the Queen.

NEWFOUNDLAND FISHERIES.

PARIS, May 12.—Representatives in the Chamber of Deputies from the department of Manche have asked M. Flourens to grant them an interview for the purpose of discussing the Newfoundland fisheries question.

RELIGIOUS TOLERATION.

PARIS, May 12.—The Pope has written a long autograph letter to President Grevy, thanking him for his jubilee gifts and exhorting France to adopt a policy of religious toleration.

O'BRIEN'S TOUR.

LONDON, May 12.—The Daily Telegraph, commenting on Mr. O'Brien's trip, says: If the fortunes of Mr. O'Brien's tour are correctly forshadowed by the incidents of his landing we may expect lively proceedings. The sympathizers of Canada intend to [illegible] propaganda, and if it does, it is quite possible the revolt may rise to indignant heights and collisions. Referring to Mr. O'Brien's visit the Times says the Dominion Government and people are not without experience of treasonable attempts, and may be trusted to act with vigor and promptitude in view of this singularly impudent assault upon their tranquility.

QUIET RESTORED IN GAMBIA.

LONDON, May 12.—Advices from Gambia say that Saidemattie has surrendered to the English unconditionally. The French troops have been withdrawn from his territory.

THE QUEEN'S THANKS.

PARIS, May 12.—It is semi-officially stated that Queen Victoria, at the drawing-room at Buckingham Palace on Tuesday, had a long conversation with M. Waddington, the French ambassador, in which she begged him to conver to the French Government her warmest thanks for the way in which she was received in France during her recent visit.

GLADSTONE'S SPEECH CRITICISED.

LONDON, May 12.—The Standard says that Mr. Gladstone's speech to the non-conformist ministers yesterday is so extraordinary that it is difficult to regard it as the serious utterance of a statesman who has been thrice Premier. It will add fresh strength to the disaffected elements in Ireland and lend impetus to renewed struggle against the authority of the Civil Government. If anything could induce the Nationalists not to yield in their efforts to make unwritten law supreme it would be the opinion that Mr. Gladstone had seen fit to deliver on the morality of boycotting, and his justification of that most cruel and tyrannical of the League's methods.

A Collision.

BOSTON, May 12.—The steamer Iowa from Liverpool on May 11, at 11.06 p.m., collided with the schooner General Somerwin, from Boston for Baltimore. Part of the crew got away in their own boat, and were brought to Boston. The Iowa had her bows badly stove. Tugs have gone in search of the schooner. The crew consisted of the captain and eight men.

Reduced Passenger Rates.

CHICAGO, May 12.—The central traffic association yesterday agreed to make a rate of one and one-third fare to any regularly organized association where fifty or more persons are in attendance, also a rate of four cents a mile for the round trip for parties of ten or more, limited to go and return within five days.

A Terrible Disaster.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 12.—A steamer from China brings confirmation of the news of the disaster in the Straits Settlements to the steamer Benton, plying between Singapore, Penang and Malacca. She was run into about midnight, on March 20, by the steamer Fair Penang, shortly after leaving Malacca, and sank within half an hour. Of the two hundred persons on board only fifty, thus far, are known to have been saved. Most of those lost were natives.

Anti-Scott Act Outrage.

ORILLIA, May 12.—Last night about 12 o'clock the house of Mr. Angus McKay, license inspector for the east riding of Simcoe, was raided by half a dozen roughs, who pelted the house and front door with stones some of which smashed the windows and entered the room, damaging and disfiguring the walls and furniture. Inspector McKay's activity in bringing offenders against the Scott Act to justice is supposed to be the cause of the midnight attack.

The Daily Review.

FRIDAY, MAY 13, 1887.

THE COURTS ARE OPEN.

We are sorry but we cannot please the Kingston Whig. We believe, as at present informed, that the Returning-Officer for Queen's, N. B., should have returned Mr. King, but our saying this will not satisfy the Whig, unless we also join in condemning Sir John Macdonald for not condemnin the Returning Officer before trial and for not reversing the return without enquiry. Mr. King has appealed to the law courts as regards the conduct of the Returning-Officer, and no doubt he will obtain justice. If he had also appealed to the law courts as to his right to the seat he would no doubt also have obtained justice in that respect. Why he does not care to maintain his rights in the manner appointed by the law of the land we cannot say. He has only himself to blame if the idea is suggested that after all he might possibly have had only a bogus qualification, like some other Reformers, and shrinks from submitting the matter to the searching test of a judicial enquiry.

The Montreal Star says that there were about a thousand persons at the Montreal station to welcome Mr. O'Brien on his arrival, the Witness says there were fifteen or twenty all told, including the carters, the Toronto World says there were about two hundred, the Mail says not over fifty, the Globe says a moderate number, and the Montreal Post says there was a large crowd. The same difference of opinion extended to the meeting in Montreal in the evening. The Mail says that the hall was packed to overflowing, the World says it was not more than three-quarters full, the Globe says there was a very large audience and the News says there was a medium-sized audience. Unprejudiced persons may suspect that Montreal reporters and correspondents are not well up in mathematics.

Mr. Colby is a respectable and respected Parliamentarian, whose appointment to the Deputy-Speakership will be generally acceptable.—Toronto Globe.

Mr. Blake approved of Mr. Ouimet's election to the speakership. Mr. Blake and the Globe approve of Mr. Colby's appointment, and the Globe says that in choosing the Hon. J. J. C. Abbott as leader of the Senate "it is admitted that the Government has made a good choice." It is suspected that Mr. Blake and the Globe have entered into a conspiracy to discredit the Government with the people. Let us hope, however, that their approval will be as harmless as their denunciation, and that the Government will still retain the confidence of the country.

We are told by the Reform journal at Kingston that "there was nothing to prevent them" (the Conservative majority of Lingston) "from scattering their votes and attempting to elect three members." Precisely. Besides dishonstly disfranchising the Conservative majority of Toronto as to the choice of one of the three members, allowing them to vote for two only, Mr. Mowat and his friends also hoped that the Conservative majority might be tricked into losing a second seat by "scattering their votes. They were absolutely deprived of their right of voting for a third member, and it was hoped also to give the Reform minority a majority of the representation. How very honest?

The Opposition professed that they did not try a division on the Speakership because they had in fact triumphed by the choice of a Speaker from among their own political friends. Yet the Opposition organ in the Dominion capital is now assailing the Speaker because he called to order Mr. Prefontaine, the Rouge-Rielite member for Chambly, while he was acting like a rowdy and interrupting the Secretary of State with vile insults.

The question of the leadership of the Senate is settled by the announcement of the addition of the Hon. J. J. C. Abbott to the Cabinet with the lead of the Upper House but without portfolio at present, pending the Ministerial rearrangements, which have not yet been authorized by statute. Mr. Abbott is a gentleman of high standing, noted for his enterprise and learning, and he will be an acquisition both to the Cabinet and the Senate.

The Irving Hall Democrats of New York have resolved "that the whole boundless Northern Continent should be within the lines of our glorious Union." This continent, the Democrats should know, is not boundless, but limited. Limited as it is, however, an attempt to compress it into the "lines" of the "glorious Union" might cause an explosion.

The selection of Mr. Colby, M. P. for Stanstead, as Deputy Speaker is a good one and must meet with general approval. He is an able man and so moderate that he has excited no prejudice even in his political opponents. His parliamentary experience and knowledge make him well fitted for the position.

If, to-day, Hamilton can succeed in beating the anti-city hallers and the Binghamilton ball team, it will be a great day for Hamilton.—Hamilton Spectator.

Hamilton did succed, and with delight the city hollers—especially over the baseball victory, although the majority in that case was the smaller one.

LOOKING FOR HIS SON.

A Runaway Lad Who Came Back With the Midland Battalion.

On the return home of the Norwood contingent of the Midland Battalion from "the wars," a member, Mr. Jessie Cummings, had a young boy with him whom he claimed to have found wandering around the scene of the battle of Fish Creek, after the fight. The young wanderer's parents, it was supposed, had been killed, and he accordingly became regimental property, and Jessie's in particular, and was treated with every kindness. When we speak of him as Jessie's property in particular, we do so because Jessie being of a generous turn of mind, "adopted" him, to use his own words, and the two were fast friends. On the close of the campaign the young lad accompanied the regiment to Ontario, and on its disbandment at Port Hope, returned with the Norwood detachment to this place, where he was the object of as much curiosity as Poundmaker or Riel would have been. He knew nothing of his parents and spoke the halfbreed patois better than he did English. After staying around for a few months he suddenly decamped, leaving his "guardian" in profound ignorance as to his intentions. Nothing has since been heard of him until last week when Mr. Nevin, ex-Mayor of Selkirk, Man., called on Mr. James Cummings, father of Jessie, who had in the meantime removed to the State of Michigan, and made enquiries about the wanderer who he said was his son, and on the outbreak of the war, had run away from home. For a long time he was unable to get any trace of him and was almost giving him up for dead, when he accidently got a clue and had followed it this far only to be again disappointed as he had hundreds of times before. Mr. Cumming referred him to his son in Michigan, who might have learned of his whereabouts. The grief stricken father departed on his journey with a lighter heart and profuse thanks for the information and also for the kindness shown the wanderer by the Norwood "soldier boys." Mr. Nevins is a large property owner in Selkirk and has been Mayor of the town for years. We sincerely hope he may be successful in his search for his wandering son. He says the rebellion produced numbers of such cases as his own, and as a general rule the missing ones were never found, having either been killed by the enemies bullets or died from exposure and hunger.—Norwood Register.

The Superiority of the "Royal Flavoring Extracts," is purity and strength.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

Ladies go into ecstacies over the new perfume, "Lotus of the Nile."

JESS.

BY H. RIDER HAGGARD

Author of "King Solomon's Mines," "She," etc.

"What on earth is the matter, Bessie?" she said, with a quick glance at her companion, and speaking in a low, full voice, with just a slight South African accent, that is taking enough in a pretty woman. Whereupon Bessie broke out with a history of their adventure, appealing to her companion for confirmation at intervals.

Meanwhile her sister, Jess, stood quite still and silent, and it struck Capt. Niel that her face was the most singularly impassive one he had ever seen. It never changed, even when her sister told how the ostrich rolled on her and nearly killed her, or how they finally subdued the foe. "Dear me," he thought to himself, "what a very remarkable woman! She can't have much heart." But just as he thought it the girl looked up, and then he saw where the expression lay. It was in those remarkable eyes. Impassive as her face was, the dark eyes were alight with life and a sort of excitement that made them shine gloriously. The contrast between the shining eyes and the impassive face beneath them struck him as so extraordinary as to be almost uncanny; and, as a matter of fact, it was doubtless both unusual and remarkable.

"You have had a wonderful escape, but I am sorry for the bird," she said at last.

"Why?" asked John.

"Because we were great friends. I was the only person who could manage him."

"Yes," put in Bessie, "the savage brute would follow her about like a dog. It was just the oddest thing I ever saw. But, come on, we must be getting home; it's growing dark. Mouti" (medicine)—addressing the Kaffir in Zulu—"help Capt. Niel on to his horse. Be careful that the saddle does not twist round; the girths may be loose."

Thus adjured, John, with the help of the Zulu, clambered into his saddle, an example that the lady quickly followed, and they once more set off through the gathering darkness. Presently he became aware that they were passing up a drive bordered by tall blue gums, and next minute the barking of a large dog and the sudden appearance of lighted windows told him that they had reached the house. At the door—or, rather, opposite to it, for there was a veranda in front—they stopped and got off their horses. As they did so, out of the house there came a shout of welcome, and presently in the doorway, showing out clear against the light, appeared a striking and, in its way, most pleasant figure. He—for it was a man—was very tall, or, rather, he had been very tall. Now he was much bent with age and rheumatism. His long white hair hung low upon his neck, and fell back from a prominent brow. The top of the head was quite bald, like the tonsure of a priest, and shone and glistened in the lamplight, and round this oasis the tiffin white locks fell down. The face was shriveled like the surface of a well kept apple, and, like an apple, rosy red. The features were aquiline and well marked, the eyebrows still black and very bushy, and beneath them shone a pair of gray eyes, as keen and bright as hawks'. But for all its sharpness, there was nothing unpleasant or fierce about the face. On the contrary, it was pervaded by a remarkable air of good nature and shrewdness. For all the rest, the man was dressed in rough tweed clothes, tall riding boots, and held a broad brimmed Boer hunting hat in his hand. Such was the outer man of old Silas Croft, one of the most remarkable men in the Transvaal, as John Niel first saw him.

"Is that you, Capt. Niel?" roared out the stentorian voice. "The natives said you were coming. A welcome to you! I am glad to see you—very glad. Why, what is the matter with you?" he went on as the Zulu Mouti ran to help him off his horse.

"Matter, Mr. Croft?" answered John; "why, the matter is that your favorite ostrich has nearly killed me and your niece here, and that I have killed your favorite ostrich."

Then followed explanations from Bessie, during which he was helped off his horse and into the house.

"It serves me right," said the old man. "To think of it now, just to think of it! Well, Bessie, my love, thank God that you escaped—ay, and you, too, Capt. Niel. Here, you boys, take the Scotch cart and a couple of oxen, and go and fetch the brute home. We may as well have the feathers off him, at any rate, before the aasvogels (vultures) tear him to bits."

After he had washed himself and tended his injuries with arnica and water, John managed to get into the principal sitting room, where supper was waiting. It was a very pleasant room, furnished in European style, and was carpeted with mats made of springbuck skins. In the corner was a piano, and by it a bookcase, filled with the works of standard authors, the property, as John rightly guessed, of Bessie's sister, Jess.

Supper went off pleasantly enough, and after it was over the two girls sang and played while the men smoked. And here a fresh surprise awaited him, for after Bessie, who had now apparently almost recovered from her mauling, had played a piece or two creditably enough, Jess, who so far had been nearly silent, sat down to the piano. She did not do this willingly, indeed, for it was not until her patriarchal uncle had insisted in his ringing, cheery voice that she should let Capt. Niel hear how she could sing that she consented. But at last she did consent, and then, after letting her fingers stray somewhat aimlessly along the chords, she suddenly broke out into such song as John Niel had never heard before. Her voice, beautiful as it was, was not what is known as a cultivated voice, and it was a German song, and therefore he did not understand it, but there was no need of words to translate its burden. Passion, despairing yet hoping through its despair, echoed in its every line, and love—unending love—hovered over the glorious notes—nay, descended upon them like a spirit and made them his. Up, up rang her wild, sweet voice, thrilling his nerves till they answered to the music as an Æolian harp answers to the winds. On went the song with a divine sweep, like the sweep of rushing pinions; higher, higher, yet higher it soared, lifting up the listener's heart far above the world on the trembling wings of sound—ay, even higher till the music hung at heaven's gate, and then it fell, swiftly as an eagle falls, quivered and was dead.

THE CALL OF MOSES.

EXPLANATORY NOTES BY S. I. CURTISS, PH. D., D. D.

Lesson VII of the International Series (Second Quarter), for Sunday, May 15. Text of the Lesson, Ex. iii, 11, 12. Golden Text, Ex. iv, 12.

Moses never lost the consciousness that he was a Hebrew. Whether he kept up acquaintance with his own mother we do not know. It is not improbable. That consciousness was roused to the utmost when he saw his brethren suffering under their burdens. Acting under the impulse of the moment, he killed the task master who was beating his brother Hebrew and hid his body in the sand Ex. ii, 11, 12). The next day, when he saw two Hebrews striving together and rebuked the one who did the wrong, he was alarmed to hear him say: "Who made thee a prince and a judge over us? Thinkest thou to kill me as thou killedst the Egyptian?" (Revised version.) The affair became known to the king, who sought to kill him. Moses therefore fled. There were two directions which he might naturally have taken. One was the direct road to Canaan. But this was full of danger, for Ramses II, who is supposed to have been the king from whom he fled, had a treaty with the Hittites at least which demanded the delivering up of any fugitives who might seek to escape from Egypt. Moses therefore, as many years later, took a southerly route to the land of Midian, which is commonly supposed to have been situated east of the Elanitic Gulf, although the Midian intended here must have been in the southern and eastern part of the Sinaitic peninsula. There through his politeness to the daughters of the priest of Midian, who, like the daughters of the Bedouin of to-day, were pasturing their father's flocks, he became son-in-law of Jethro.

This experience of Moses was an important part of God's plan. Moses needed a different kind of training from that which he had had at the court of Pharaoh. That training he was to receive in the awful solitudes of the wilderness through which he was to conduct God's chosen people. At the time he fled from Egypt they were not ready for deliverance. Nor was the time ripe. The most powerful of the Pharaohs, if we may believe the concurrent testimony of Egyptian scholars, then sat on the throne. The time for the exodus was to come during the decadence of the Egyptian power under Mernephtah. God's providential leading was thus manifest at every stage of Moses' life.

After long years had elapsed the glorious reign of King Ramses II came to an end. He was followed by his thirteenth son, Mernephtah. God heard the groaning of his people, and remembered his covenant with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

THE LESSON.

Moses and His Flock (v. 1)—Moses was still keeping the flock of his father-in-law, Jethro. It is probable that if in the enthusiasm of early manhood he had thought he could deliver his people, he had long since relinquished that hope. At God's chosen time he leads his flock to the back part of the wilderness, to the mountain, which in subsequent history came to be known as the mountain of God, which was then known as Horeb, and in other passages as Sinai, which Palmer holds was the same as Jebel Musa.

The Burning Bush (v. 2)—While there the angel of Jehovah, who is known in New Testament language as the Son of God, appeared to him in a flame of fire out of the midst of the bush. He did not recognize at first who it was, but he was amazed to see a thorn bush on fire which was not consumed. The manifestation of God by fire is a favorite symbol in the Old Testament. Perhaps it is difficult to be sure of the typical signification intended here by the appearance in the bush.

V. 3. At first Moses' curiosity was simply aroused. He said "I will turn aside and see this great sight—why the bush is not consumed."

Vs. 4, 5. As he turned he found that it was not merely a natural manifestation, but God himself called to him out of the midst of the bush, and bade him take his sandals off his feet, because the ground on which he was standing was holy. To uncover the feet was a sign of reverence in the east, and still is today of something the same sort as uncovering the head with us.

V. 6. God then proclaimed himself as the God of his "father," used in a collective sense of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Moses was afraid, when he understood that it was God himself, to look on the thorn bush, partly, perhaps, from a sense of his unworthiness and partly because he might have felt that he could not behold God and live.

God Remembers His People (vs. 7-9)—God had not been unmindful of his people. Every blow that had fallen from the lash of the Egyptian taskmaster, and every cry that they had lifted up, had been marked by him and had touched his heart.

Speaking as a man, so that Moses and his people might understand him, he says that he has come down to deliver them from the hands of the Egyptians and bring them into a good and large country flowing with milk and honey.

The country of Palestine, which is not much larger than the state of New Hampshire, would be a small country to us, but in comparison with the land of Goshen, only part of which they occupied, or even of the upper part of Egypt itself, which embraces only the valley of the Nile, which is not more than seven miles wide, it would seem to be a wide country. According to the testimony of other ancient writers it was a very fruitful country, and might well be spoken of, in the Scriptural phrase, as flowing with milk and honey.

The Canaanites—The nations here mentioned are only a part of those sometimes enumerated. We know from modern investigations that the Hittites were a very powerful people, who resisted Ramses II for years, and who finally made a treaty of peace with him on equal terms. The term Canaanites, which literally means lowlanders, is sometimes used of one people, as here, sometimes as embracing all the other peoples.

Human Instruments (vs 10, 11)—Although God has infinite power, when he has a work to do he uses human instruments. This is the law of his kingdom. He therefore bids Moses bring forth the people of Israel out of Egypt. Moses shrinks from the responsibility, like every great soul who is worthy of one. Although he may once have felt as though he might help his people, he no longer feels the strength or ambition for such a responsible place. His long residence in the wilderness causes him to shrink from contact with the proud monarch of Egypt, and it seemed to him impossible that he should be able to wrest his people from the powerful grasp of such a king.

V. 12. Moses' estimate of his own ability for such an important mission was correct. Unaided by God he was simply a rough shepherd of the wilderness, without influence and without resources; but when God promised, 'Certainly I will be with thee," he had omnipotent power at his back, and was equal to anything.

God promises him as a sign that when he brings forth the people out of Egypt they shall worship God on that mountain.

POINTS TO BE REMEMBERED.

1. When God has a work to be done, the best training of the schools is not sufficient; men must be prepared under God's own hand.

2. The disappointment of all human hopes is sometimes the very means which God chooses to train his people for eminent usefulness.

3. While kindness and politeness should never be exercised with hope of reward, yet they are sure to receive recognition.

4. God sympathizes with his people, he sees their distress, and although help may be delayed, it will surely come. Not one of his promises will fail.

5. If God is on our side we are in the majority. With his help we can accomplish the most difficult tasks with success.—Sunday School World.

PROPOSED BRIDGE WORKS.

Suggestion to Close Unused Portions of Streets for a Valuable Consideration.

In order that the suggestion for the closing of portions of streets adjoining the Romaine Brick Works and the compensation offered therefore may be clearly understood, and the advantages to to be derived by the Town by the exchange may be seen, we give in full the application to the Town Council as follows:—

PETERBOROUGH, May 2nd, 1887.

To the Mayor and Town Council of Peterborough:—

GENTLEMEN,—The demand for the output of the Peterborough Lock Works and of Mr. W. H. Law's Bridge Works has become such that both of them cannot much longer continue to occupy the premises at present occupied by them without seriously interfering with their operations and materially limiting the number of persons to whom, under more favorable circumstances, they would give employment.

As the premises at present occupied by these two firms are best suited to the operations of the lock works, Mr. Law is now looking for a better location for his bridge works, and to that end has made an examination of what is known as the Romaine Brick Works, at present owned by me, and he informs me that they would suit both his present and prospective requirements, provided the land now held in connection therewith can be increased by the addition thereto of that portion of Water street lying between Sherbrooke and Dalhousie streets, and that portion of Dalhousie street lying between the river and a line drawn across the said street at the most easterly corner of lots number one north and south of Dalhousie street and east of George street.

As the closing up of the portions of the streets named will not affect the access to any property owned by others than myself and the Ontario and Quebec Railway Company (with the track of which Company it is desirable to connect the Bridge Works), no private or public interest, so far as I can see, would be injured thereby. While on the other hand it, in the event of Mr. Law establishing his Bridge Works there, the Council will pass a by-law conveying these portions of Water and Dalhousie streets to me, I will in consideration thereof give the town all the gravel now lying between the brick works building and Water or Sherbrooke and Dalhousie streets, above the level of the ground floor of the brick works building, the same to be removed within a reasonable time.

Yours respectfully,
JOHN CARNEGIE.

P. S.—I attach a sketch for the purpose of showing the position which the portions of streets asked for occupy towards this and other property.

Hayti Pays the Claim.

SANTIAGO DE CUBA, May 11.—The Anglo-Haytien question has been settled on the basis forshadowed some time ago. President Solomon in person paid over to Mr Still a large sum in cash and gave first-class security in the shape of bonds for the payment of the balance of the debt. The whole sum paid and to be paid is within $2 0,000. A gentleman just arrived from Port au Prince reports that President Salomon paid the money willingly, and also expressed himself wholly satisfied with amicable settlement of the claim. All are satisfied, English honor is appeased and Tortugas Island remains a Haytien possession.

If the Sufferers from Consumption Scrofula and General Debility, will try Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, with hypophosphites, they will find immediate relief and a permanent benefit. Dr. H. V. Mott, Brentwood Cal., writes: "I have used Scott's Emulsion with great advantage in cases of Phthisis, Scrofula and Wasting Diseases. It is very palatable." Put up in 50c and $1 size.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC

FROM

J. J. SHEEHY

I beg to say that contrary to announcements which appeared in the Peterborough papers for the past two months, I DO NOT intend to remove to T. Dolan & Co's Dry Goods Store, nor have I any connections whatever with that establishment. The final arrangements not being satisfactory to me, I withdrew from the projected change, and intend carrying on the Dry Goods business in my usual stand next to Lech's Hat Store.

It is my intention in the future as in the past to show at all seasons nothing but new and fresh goods in the various lines of Dry Goods and Gent's Furnishings; and by doing so, hope to retain the confidence which I am proud to say, I have enjoyed from the public since commencing business two years ago.

The New Yacht Now in Course of Construction.

WILMINGTON, Del., May 13.—The drawings of the profile and midship section of the new steel cup defender now in course of construction for General Paine at the yard of Pusey Jones & Co., in this city, were obtained yesterday. The dimensions of the new slope are as follows: Length of water line, 85 feet, 9 inches; extreme beam, 23 feet 3 inches; draught 10 feet; are of midship section (square feet), 96; extreme length of mast, 50; extreme length of topmast, 48; extreme length of bowsprit, 53. The mast will be slightly barrell shaped, with a diameter of 19 inches at the deck, 18 inches at the hounds and 19¾ inches half the distance up. The boom will have a diameter of 14 inches at the middle and 12¾ at the slings. The gratest diameter of the bowsprit will be 15 inches, and the top mast will be 9¾ at the cap. The principal difference between the new sloop and the racer, Mayflower, is shown by the drawing. The beam of the new sloop is a trifle greater at the midship water line. The beam at the plank sheer is three inches less than the Mayflower. The bilge of the dew slope is fuller and the free board is straighter, without the marked tumble home of the portion of the Mayflower above the waterline. The sheer is less than that of the Mayflower. The difference in the bows of the two yachts is striking. The new ship has a graceful clipper cut water. The forestay leads as far out as it is possible to carry the iron srap. The mast is stepped 32 feet 9 inches abaft the stem at the water line. The sail plan is nearly identical in appearance with that of the Mayflower. There will be more lead in the hollow keel and a larger quantity will be cast in shaped pegs and fitted very low down near the plates.

Fanny Smith is in custody.

THE CLAN-NA-GAEL.

LONDON, May 13.—The Times has resumed the publication of regular articles showing the connection between the "Parnellism and Crime." The present series of articles is entitled "Behind the scenes in America." The matter is the result of an enquiry which the Times instituted last summer into the relations between the American Fenians and the Paenellites, and contains a number of the secret records of the Clan-na-Gael Society, obtained through a schism in the society and quarrels among its leaders. Among the documents published are copies of the constitution of the society, a list of its officers at various epochs, letters from its past and present leaders, secret circulars and reports of the societies' conventions. The Times says its enquiries are not yet complete, for the reason that the society has been re-organized, so that its system of working has become a seemingly impenetrable mystery. Editorially commenting on its revelations, the Times says it is impossible to doubt that the policy of the Parnellites, and therefore of Mr. Gladstone, is ultimately directed by the heads of the society and of Patrick Ford.

Prompt Payment of Insurance Claims.

There is nothing which adds so much to the popularity of a life insurance company as the prompt payment of of its legitimate death claims. The day has passed when life insurance companies can afford to take advantage of technicalities in resisting the payment of losses, and we are glad to notice in the report of the Superintendent of Insurance that with the exception of one or two companies all report "no claims resisted." The advantages afforded by life insurance as collateral security is fully illustrated by the letter of W. D. Matthews & Co., grain merchants of Toronto, in acknowledgement of the prompt payment of a claim for the large sum of five thousand dollars by the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association. Up to the present time we are informed by Mr. Wells, the Canadian General Manager, that already about one hundred thousand dollars have been paid by the Mutual Reserve for losses in Canada alone, although they have only been doing business here for a short time. It is no wonder that it again leads all the other companies in new business. Geo. A. Morrison says the Reserve fund is over $1,000,000; rates 50 per cent less than stock companies.

OUR OWN IRON.

SINCE the adoption of the National Policy no step has been taken by Canada that can compare in importance with the resolve announced in the Budget Speech to protect and encourage the manufacture in this country of the iron consumed in it. It amounts to a revolution in trade, and one of the most favorable character.

The two blots in the National Policy were the failure to protect our millers and to provide for the manufacture of our own iron at home. Both we have always felt and said were too timorous yieldings to the fear of antagonism and of the unpatriotic agitation that would have been raised and fomented by the Opposition. As it proved, the antagonism and agitation could not have been more bitter and unscrupulous, while the country lost the benefit of protecting its own industries, relinquishing to foreigners the profit of supplying our own wants.

The more serious of these two mistakes, from its far-reaching consequence, was that as to iron. We rejoice that the wise course has now been adopted. What could have been more foolish than that with an abundance of iron ore unexcelled in any country in the world, we should trust to foreigners for our supply of the metal, leaving our ores to lie useless in the mine? There was indeed, one more foolish step, and we did not even shrink from that, exported our valuable ores that they might be smelted by foreigners and then buying them back when converted into metal by these foreigners to their profit and our loss. Now, however, this folly is abandoned, and never more will it be practiced.

We will not discuss the details of the tariff intended to bring about this beneficial result. They will no doubt be fully considered in Committee by men versed in such matters, with the assistance of the representatives of the trades affected. If discussion shows that any amendments are advisable they can be adopted so long as the main principal is kept in view, and further changes can be made hereafter if practical experience shows them to be necessary. Nor is it certain that the protection afforded will be sufficient to bring about the desired result. Great Britain in former days and the United States in later times, established their iron [illegible] means of far heavier duties, with the [illegible] as will appear in our own case of augmenting the output while lowering the price. If we have not gone far enough to secure these ends a further step will be easy now the principle is acknowledged.

The country is to be congratulated on the prospect of the firm establishment of an industry, which after agriculture, is the most important in the civilized world. Canada will no longer lie under the stigma and serious disadvantage of having so little enterprise and forethought as to depend upon foreigners for the most important and necessary article used in the mechanical arts while trampling the raw material under foot.

THE COAL DUTIES.

WE cannot pretend to accept with any great feeling of satisfaction the determination to place anthracite coal on the free list. If it is necessary to ensure the adoption of the new policy of manufacturing our own iron, we can cheerfully accept it to secure so great a benefit to the country, but in itself we cannot see that this is either necessary or advisable. We fully believe that the duty is paid almost wholly, if not entirely by the Pennsylvanian coal owners, and we will be greatly surprised if it is not found that we lose this considerable contribution to our revenue while we still have to pay as high a comparative price for our coal. It is possible that the Pennsylvanian men may continue to make to Canadian purchasers an allowance on ordinary rates. such as was made to meet the duty, but we greatly doubt their doing so, unless, indeed, the find they have to make some sacrifice to carry on competition with coal or coke from the Maritime Provinces, the use of which must be greatly incouraged by this new policy as regards iron.

There is another comfort in the reflection that the Opposition will now be deprived of the opportunity of howling about the coal duty which has been a chief part of their stock in trade.

WE occasionally see a remark repeated, which was made originally at the time that medals were given to our volunteers for their services in the Northwest, that it was an innovation to grant such rewards for a civil conflict, that it was unprecedented and the first case on record. This is a mistake. Some of the wars in New Zealand, South Africa and India, for which decorations have been given, were as much civil conflicts as that in the Northwest. If one is to be so classed, the others should be likewise. Unless we are greatly mistaken, Gen. Sir F. Middleton himself wears a medal for services against the Maoris by the side of his Northwest medal.

THE Government at Ottawa is doing what it can to destroy responsible government. It looks as if another rebellion would soon be necessary.—Brockville Recorder.

If some cranky creature should be led by treasonable utterances like this, and by reckless statements such as made by Mr. Charlton, M. P., to raise an insurrection, the Reform organs would in chorus claim that they had done nothing to encourage rebellion, as they did when Riel took up arms. The last rebellion, however, was not so successful as to encourage others to follow in Riel's misguided footsteps.

DISALLOWANCE.

Mr. WATSON asked for a day for his disallowance resolution.

Sir J. MACDONALD suggested Tuesday.

THE BUDGET.

Sir CHARLES TUPPER in moving the House into Committee of Ways and Means, made his financial statement. He dwelt on the prosperity of Canada, even in a time of general depression, since the adoption of the National Policy to relieve our industries suffering from the removal of outside causes protecting them. The conversion of the re-elected leader of the Opposition to protection rendered it unnecessary for him to discuss the general principle. The estimates of the late Finance Minister, as to receipts for last year, were almost exactly verified. The North-west rebellion had caused an excess of expenditure amounting to over $800,000, leaving an unavoidable deficit of $5,800,000. For the current year the receipts would apparently exceed the estimates by about $800,000, in spite of a falling off of $1,000,000 on excise, and would nearly balance the expenditure, leaving a deficit of only $300,000. As to the coming year he estimated a revenue of $36,400,000. He then dealt in considerable detail with the estimates of expenditure. Turning to the question of the public debt, he stated that the net debt at the beginning of the month was $225,105,961. This was an increase of $149,000,000 over the $75,728,000 of debt at Confederation. During that time over $30,000,000 had been granted to the Provinces and over $153,000 spent on public works or capital account. The whole amount of borrowed money and over $30,000,000 had thus been applied on permanent improvements. We had no floating debt and no need to raise a new loan for some time to come, as the surplus would meet the proposed capital expenditures. In consequence of this favourable condition of our finances our credit had improved, till lately our 3½ per cents. had changed hands at par. Our trade, deposits in chartered and savings banks, shipping, railways, life and fire insurance had all increased enormously, as the figures he gave showed. As to the threatened non-intercourse with the United States, we had even at that cost to protect our territorial rights to [illegible] steady determination to support us. It would be a calamity if our trade relations with the United States were to be interrupted, but after all the cloud would have a silver lining. We had perfected our lines of communication from sea to sea, in spite of the Opposition, and if non-intercourse were declared a great volume of Canadian trade would go to build up Canadian ports instead of those of the United States. If hostility were pushed too far, Great Britain might retaliate by a discriminating tax on grain, to our great advantage. We must look to the extension of our foreign markets. Authority had been given him to conduct the negotiations with Spain as to trade with Canada. He had come here with regard to these negotiations, not knowing that an election was imminent, but an en[illegible] was laid upon him by the Ministry. He hoped, however, as soon as the session was over to hasten back to complete the negotiation. He described the proposed establishment of a steamship line to the West Indies, such a valuable market for our productions, and went on to speak of the through route to Australia, Japan and China to be completed by a line of fasts teamers. After recess he continued the subject of our foreign communications for a time. He then announced the determination that had been formed of giving protection to the making of iron by doubling the duty on pig iron, with other changes. He pointed out the enormous industry that would thus be fostered to the great benefit of our country. The coal industry would participate largely in the benefit from this change and it had been determined to place anthracite on the free list. He then read the list of tariff changes.

SIR R. CARTWRIGHT praised the speech and then preceeded to take his usual doleful view of the position of the Dominion. Besides the diagrams give by the Minister of Finance he would like to see the other diagrams giving the increase of the debt, of the taxes, of expenditure, of the prices for farm produce and of the settlement of the North-west He objected to charging certain items to capital account instead of ordinary account, though that might increase the deficit.

SIR C. TUPPER asked where Sir Richard's deficits were? Had they not gone to capital account?

Sir R. CARTWRIGHT continued, suggesting economy by striking off expenditure for immigration, Franchise Act, &c. He then had his annual tilt at the too high interest paid on savings bank deposits. As to the credit of the country, he endeavored to show that it had not improved since his time.

Sir C. TUPPER said New South Wales securities then led Canada by 4 per cent.; now Canada led New South Wales by 4 per cent.

Sir R. CARTWRIGHT preferred to compare with the United States. He then took up the Northwest rebellion question till he talked the House nearly empty, and the debate was adjourned with the understanding that he retained the floor.

THE TARIFF CHANGES.

Sir C. TUPPER moved in committee that the tariff changes take effect on May 13th.

Lively Times Predicted.

NEW YORK, May 12.—T. P. Gill, M. P., cables to the Tribune from London as follows:—"I have the best reason for knowing that the rumors concerning Millbank prison are well founded. The sixty rooms which are being prepared by order of the Government for sixty first class misdemeanants are meant for the Irish members. You may look out within the next few weeks for events not surpassed in the history of the Commons since King Charles tried to arrest the five members, or since Cromwell's troopers cleared the 'rump' parliament out of the chamber with the flat of their swords."

It is reported M. Waddington, the French Ambassador at London, had an interview with Lord Salisbury with reference to the neutrality of the Suez Canal, which resulted in a cordial understanding.

The first Canadian Pacific freight train to leave London will start on Saturday.

PORT HOPE.

BURGLARY.—Mr. W. G. Stevenson's dry goods store was entered by burglars on Thursday night. The missing articles, the Times says, are, as nearly as can be ascertained, two suits of clothes, two or three small silk caps, and four or five silk handkerchiefs. An old coat, for which his sudden accession to wealth left him no use, was thoughtfully left by one of the visitors. The burglars, scorning any less stealthy entrance, threw stones through the door glass, and then the insertion of their hands and the drawing of the bolts left an unobstructed passage. Three stones were found in the store and two or three dents in the wooden part of the door show that the men were not experts at stone-throwing. The glass was scattered on the door step and as there is no back exit the trap would have been secure had an officer but been around to place himself at the front. Night-watchman Jarvis says that about half past twelve he was standing on the sidewalk at Mr. W. J. Foster's tinshop, when he heard the racket. He crossed the road and coming down found the broken door. The glass was, he saw, nearly all on the outside, and he came to the conclusion that a dog must have been locked in and jumped through. He walked up and down for some time, but saw no one on the street. There have been no arrests as yet in connection with this affair, which is the second one that has happened to Mr. Stevenson, and it is a strange coincidence that last time also only two suits were taken.

JESS.

BY H. RIDER HAGGARD

Author of "King Solomon's Mines," "She," etc

John gave a gasp, and, so strongly was he moved, sank back in his chair feeling almost faint with the revulsion of feeling that ensued when the notes died away. He looked up and caught Bessie watching him with an air of curiosity and amusement. Jess was still leaning against the piano and gently touching the notes, over which her head was bent low, showing the coils of curling hair which were twisted round it like a coronet.

"Well, Capt. Niel," said the old man, waving his pipe in her direction, "and what do you say to my singing bird's music, eh? Isn't it enough to draw the heart out of a man, eh, and turn his marrow to water, eh?"

"I never heard anything quite like it," he answered, simply, "and I have heard most singers. It is beautiful. Certainly I never expected to hear such singing in the Transvaal."

She turned quickly, and he observed that, though her eyes were alight with excitement, her face was as impassive as ever.

"There is no need for you to laugh at me, Capt. Niel," she said, quickly, and then, with an abrupt "Good-night," left the room.

The old man smiled, jerked the stem of his pipe over his shoulder after her, and winked in a way that, no doubt, meant unutterable things, but which did not convey much to his astonished guest, who sat still and said nothing. Then Bessie got up and bade him good-night in her pleasant voice, and with housewifely care inquired as to whether his room was to his liking, and how many blankets he liked upon his bed, telling him that if he found the odor of the moonflowers, that grew near the veranda, too strong, he had better shut the right hand window and open that on the other side of the room; and then at length, with a piquant little nod of her golden head, she went off, looking, he thought as he watched her retreating figure, about as healthy, graceful and generally satisfactory a young woman as a man could wish to see.

"Take a glass of grog, Capt. Niel," said the old man, pushing the square bottle toward him; "you'll need it after the mauling that brute gave you. By the way, I haven't thanked you enough for saving my Bessie! But I do thank you, yes, that I do. I must tell you that Bessie is my favorite niece. Never was there such a girl—never. Moves like a springbuck, and what an eye and form! Work, too—she'll do as much work as three. There's no nonsense about Bessie, none at all. She's not a fine lady, for all her fine looks."

"The two sisters seem very different," said John.

"Ay, you're right there," said the old man. "You'd never think that the same blood ran in their veins, would you? There's three years between them, that's one thing. Bessie's the youngest, you see—she's just 20 and Jess is 23. Lord, to think that it is twenty-three years since that girl was born! And theirs was a queer story, too."

"Indeed!" said his listener, interrogatively.

"Ay," he went on absently, knocking out his pipe and refilling it out of a big, brown jar of coarse cut Boer tobacco; "I'll tell it to you if you like; you are going to live in the house, and you may as well know it. I am sure, Capt. Niel, that it will go no further. You see I was born in England; yes, and well born, too. I come from Cambridgeshire—from that fat fenland down round Ely. My father was a clergyman. Well, he wasn't rich, and when I was 20 he gave me his blessing, thirty sovereigns in my pocket and my passage to the Cape; and I shook his hand, God bless him! and off I came, and here in the old colony and this country I have been for fifty years, for I was 70 yesterday. Well, I'll tell you more about that another time; it's about the girls I'm speaking now. After I left home—twenty years after or hard on it—my dear old father married again, a youngish woman with some money, but beneath him somewhat in life, and by her he had one son and then died. Well, it was but little I heard of my half-brother, except that he had turned out very badly, married and taken to drink, till one night some twelve years ago, when a strange thing happened. I was sitting here in this very room—ay, in this very chair—for this part of the house was up then, though the wings weren't built—and smoking my pipe and listening to the lashing of the rain, for it was a very foul night, when suddenly an old pointer dog I had, named Ben, gave a bark.

"'Lie down, Ben; it's only the Kaffirs,' said I.

"Just then I thought I heard a faint sort of rapping at the door, and Ben barked again, so I got up and opened it, and in came two little girls, wrapped up in old shawls or some such gear. Well, I shut the door, looking out first to see if there were any more outside, and then I stood and stared at the two little things with my mouth open. There they stood, hand in hand, the water dripping from both of them, and the eldest might have been 11, and the second about 8. They didn't say anything, but the eldest turned and took the shawl and hat off the younger—that was Bessie—and there was her sweet little face and her golden hair, and damp enough both of them were, and she put her thumb in her mouth, and stood and looked at me till I began to think that I was dreaming.

"'Please, sir,' said the biggest, at last, 'is this Mr. Croft's house—Mr. Croft, South African Republic?'

"'Yes, little miss, this is his house, and this is the South African Republic, and I am he. And now who might you be, my dears?' I answered.

"'If you please, sir, we are your nieces, and we have come to you from England.'

"'What!' I hallooed, startled out of my wits, as well I might be.

"'Oh, sir, says the poor little thing, clasping her thin, wet hands, 'please don't send us away. Bessie is so wet and cold and hungry, too, she isn't fit to go any farther.'

"And she set to work to cry, whereon the little one cried too, from fright and cold and sympathy.

"Well, of course, I took them both to the fire and set them on my knees and hallooed for Hebe, the old Hottentot woman who did my cooking, and between us we undressed them and wrapped them up in some old clothes and fed them with soup and wine, so that in half an hour they were quite happy and not a bit frightened.

"'And now, young ladies,' I said, 'come and give me a kiss, both of you, and tell me how you came here.'

"And this is the tale they told me—completed, of course, from what I learned afterward—and an odd one it is. It seems that my half brother married a Norfolk lady—a sweet young thing—and treated her like a dog. He was a drunken rascal, was my half brother, and he beat his poor wife and shamefully neglected her, and even ill treated the two little girls, till at last the poor woman, weak as she was from suffering and ill health, could bear it no longer, and formed the wild idea of escaping to this country and throwing herself upon my protection. It will show how desperate she must have been. She scraped together and borrowed some money, enough to pay for three second class passages to Natal and a few pounds over, and one day, when her brute of a husband was away on the drink and gamble, she slipped on board a sailing ship in the London docks, and before he knew anything about it they were well out to sea. But it was her last effort, poor, dear soul, and the excitement of it finished her. Before they had been ten days at sea she sank and died, and the two poor children were left alone. And what they must have suffered, or rather what poor Jess must have suffered, for she was old enough to feel, God only knows. But I can tell you this, she has left its mark on her, sir. But let people say what they will, there is a power that looks after the helpless, and that power took those poor, homeless, wandering children under its wing. The captain of the vessel befriended them, and when at last they got to Durban some of the passengers made a subscription and got an old Boer, who was coming up this way with his wife to the Transvaal, to take them under his charge. The Boer and his vrouw treated the children fairly well, but they did not do one thing more than they bargained for. At the turn from the Wakkerstroom road, that you came along to-day, they put the children down, for they had no luggage, and told them if they went along there they would come to Meinheer Croft's house. That was in the middle of the afternoon, and they were until 8 o'clock getting here, poor little dears, for the track was fainter then than it is now, and they wandered off into the veldt and would have perished there in the wet and cold had they not chanced to see the lights of the house. And that was how my nieces came here, Capt. Niel. And here they have been ever since, except for a couple of years when I sent them to the Cape for schooling, and a lonely man I was when they were away."

"And how about the father?" asked John Niel, deeply interested. "Did you ever hear any more of him?"

"Hear of him, the villain!" almost shouted the old man, jumping up in wrath. "Ay, d—n him, I heard of him. What do you think? The two chicks had been with me some eighteen months, long enough for me to learn to love them with all my heart, when one fine morning, as I was seeing about the new kraal wall, I see a fellow come riding up on an old, raw boned, gray horse. Up he comes to me, and as he came I looked at him, and said to myself, 'you are a drunkard, you are, and a rogue; it's written on your face, and, what's more, I know your face.' You see I did not guess it was a son of my own father's that I was looking at. How should I?"

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

The Tramp.

A brace of tramps rested in the cells last night. After bracing themselves up this morning they departed.

All Young Men

Are invited to the meeting in the Young Men's Christian Association rooms on Saturday night at 8 o'clock, and Sunday afternoon at 4. Song service on Sunday at 8.30 p. m.

Wonderful value, think of it, 27 inch white twilled sheeting, 22½ cents, 72 inch twilled unbleached sheeting 20 cent, and 1¼ white quilts 75 cents, at Sheppard's.

The York Pioneers.

There seems to be a misunderstanding as to what York Pioneers are coming to Peterborough on May 24th. It is the Pioneer Orange body of West Toronto, not the York Pioneers who were here a year or two years ago.

A New Departure.

Messrs. Elliott & Tierney's express attracted a good deal of notice to-day. The express driver was out in full uniform, silk conductor's cap with silver badge lettered in gold, and serge uniform all decorated with brass buttons. The express is not going to be behind the "Palace Grocery' in point of attractiveness.

The Railway Accident

The Belleville Intelligencer of Friday says:—"Fireman Joseph Taylor, who was one of the victims of Wednesday's accident near Campbellford, was visited by Dr. Wilson at that village this morning, and brought to his home in Belleville. The doctor was seen by a reporter, and stated that the contusions about the sholder, left hip joint, and scalp wound, are severe, but unless inflammation sets in, the patient will in time recover."

New Rollers.

Considerable interest is taken by millers in the new roller process being now set up and operated in the basement of the Lindsay-Seldon furniture factory. Mr. Cochrane, the inventor, of New Jersey, is on the premises in charge of setting it up. It is pronounced by competent judges to be a success as an invention, overcoming as it does the weak points in the old roller process. It is to be placed in Meldrum, Davidson & Co's new mill where it will be given a fair trial.

Gun Club.

The first Friday afternoon pop of the Gun Club was quite a success, both as to scores made and attendance. Mr. J. D. Collins made the remarkably good score of 9 out of the possible 10. The scores made are as follows:—

A Happy Blank.

An individual who said he came from Toronto was found in a cell this morning. The night officer had omitted to leave the usual notice of what the prisoner was charged with. When questioned by Chief Adams as to what he was "in" for the prisoners mind was a happy blank. He did not know what he was in such a fix for. P. C. Pidgeon came in soon after and said he run the prisoner in for being drunk. On promising to never get drunk any more the Magistrate let him off.

Cash Railway.

Sheppard, the dry goods man, has placed a novel convenience in his store. It is a cash railway of the newest kind. There are two lines which the cars run on, one running over each counter, the entire length of the store. When a clerk makes a sale he makes the statement and places the money received in the car. He touches it off and it runs in a twinkling to the cashier's office. The proper change is put in the little car, and by pulling a handle the car pops off on the return trip. The whole thing is managed by compressed air, and is a decided convenience. It is estimated that with this help at hand fifty more customers can be waited on in the day.

THE ASSESSMENT SYSTEM.

Large Insurance Claim Paid—Endowment of the Mutual Reserve.

Office of W. D. MATTHEWS & Co.,
Grain and Produce Merchants,
TORONTO, 11th May, 1887.

J. D. Wells, Esq., General Managers Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association:

DEAR SIR.—We beg to acknowledge receipt of cheque for Five Thousand Dollars in full of claim under a policy of insurance issued to us by the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association for that amount, as creditors of the late Edwin C. Fisher.

We have much pleasure in bearing testimony to the prompt and satisfactory manner in which this claim has been adjusted, and at the same time to express our confidence in your association. Having an intimate acquaintance with your President and chief officers, we know them to be gentlemen of the highest integrity, and in whose hands we believe the interests of the members of the Mutual Reserve are perfectly safe.

Wishing your association continued success.

Yours truly,

The Torontos.

The Toronto Baseball Club want to fill a date in Peterborough in June. They ask $100 guarantee and half the gate money. It is not likely that these terms will be accepted.

New Looms.

The Brodie Woollen Mills have increased their capacity by the addition of six new looms. Four have already been put in and the other two, made by McGregor & Gowlay, of Galt, are ready to be put in.

Fishy.

A young gentleman whose veracity cannot be questioned says that a net cast below the locks brought up eight two (82) suckers. He doesn't want to test anybody's evidence, but simply states what he says is a positive fact.

Lines.

—The Riverside Lacrosse Club are waiting patiently for the Park to dry up.

—The compositors of this office are waiting for organ grinder next door to do likewise.

—Or change his tune once in four hours at least.

—The fish yarns are beginning to come to the surface.

—Barley stock stories by the yard will be next.

Your chance to-day to secure the best value in Ladies Jerseys even shown in Peterborough. Sheppard is now offering some beautiful goods in black and colors at fully 50 per cent. less than wholesale prices.

Boundary Patrol.

WINNIPEG, May 13.—Eleven mounted policemen under the command of Inspector Gibson left Regina this morning for Moose Mountain district to patrol the boundary line during the summer. Major Jarvis will leave for Wood Mountain district with thirty men in a few days.

Middleton in Kingston.

KINGSTON, May 13.—At the luncheon tendered to General Middleton last night, in his speech he said that the recent rebellion furnished the only instance on record in which a British campaign was fought and won without the assistance of Imperial troops. In closing his speech he asked all to drink in silence to the dead comrades who fell fighting for Canada.

Col. Osborne Smith Dead.

OTTAWA, May 13.—Sir Charles Tupper today received a cablegram from the High Commissioner's office, London, stating that Col. Osborne Smith had died suddenly at Swansea. Col. Smith was in England on public business. His death was totally unexpected, and the news was received with great regret in military circles here. Deceased was a commander of the Winnipeg Light Infantry during the Northwest rebellion, and commanded the volunteers at Pigeon Hill during the Fenian troubles.

"Oppress not nature, sinking down to rest, With feasts too late, too solid, or too full."

Armstrong, when he wrote these lines, gave good scientific advice. Half of our people suffer from dyspepsia in some of its many forms. Life becomes a burden, and business worries and annoys. The "Golden Medical Discovery," invented and prepared by Dr. Pierce, is an effectual remedy for indigestion. By druggists.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little suffere at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

Two Men Drowned.

MONTREAL, May 13.—Four young Americans employed at the Hudon cotton mill named Martin Pendergrast, John H. Donnelly, F. E. Cole and A. M Strickland, were rowing back from St. Helen's Island last night when their boat was capsized about 200 yards from Ile Ronde. Pendergrast and Donnelly sunk and were not seen afterwards The other two succeeded in reaching the shore in a terribly exhausted condition.

A Ghastly Discovery.

MONTREAL, May 13.—A laborer living on Dorchester street, while going to work early this morning, in a vacant lot on St. Catherine street, near Bleury, found the body of a man lying in the lot covered by a plank. The flesh was withered and apparently dried, and adhered firmly to the bones. The head and some parts of the trunk were missing. Frightened almost to death, the man reported the case to the Coroner, who is holding an investigation. It is believed there is some mystery connected with the body.

If the Sufferers from Consumption Scrofula and General Debility, will try Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, with hypophosphites, they will find immediate relief and a permanent benefit. Dr. H. V. Mott, Brentwood Cal., writes "I have used Scott's Emulsion with great advantage in cases of Phthisis, Scrofula and Wasting Diseases. It is very palatable." Put up in 50c and $1 size.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC

FROM

J. J. SHEEHY

I beg to say that contrary to announcements which appeared in the Peterborough papers for the past two months, I DO NOT intend to remove to T. Dolan & Co's Dry Goods Store, nor have I any connections whatever with that establishment. The final arrangements not being satisfactory to me, I withdrew from the projected change, and intend carrying on the Dry Goods business in my usual stand next to Leech's Hat Store.

It is my intention in the future as in the past to show at all seasons nothing but new and fresh goods in the various lines of Dry Goods and Gent's Furnishings; and by doing so, hope to retain the confidence which I approud to say, I have enjoyed from the public since commencing business two years ago.

AT AN END.

Cardinal Taschereau Sends His Last Letter to Mr. Mercier.

QUEBEC, May 14.—The following is a translation of Cardinal Taschereau's last letter to Premier Mercier:—

HONORABLE SIR,—I am quite willing to do what you ask of me in your last letter of the 9th instant, and to put an end to our correspondence in connection with the Jesuits' Bill.

I was anxious that it be not withheld from the public because I had no other means of defending myself against the unjust accusations that were proffered against me, and to point out the strong language against which I was forced to protest and to bring back within its proper lines of discussion a question which had been wrongly placed in order to afford a reason for exaggeration, and the accusations referred to. I hope that later on when you will read your speeches and letters with calmness, you will regret several passages which your best friends have deplored. Then will be the time to put into practice the noble protestation with which you wind up your letter: "A devoted son of the Church, a sincere and convinced Catholic, I am at the disposal of the religious authorities for the defence and protection of the sacred interests which are confided to their keeping."

(Signed) E. A. CARD. TASCHEREAU,
Arch. of Quebec.

THE THEDFORD TRAGEDY.

No Traces of Poison Found in Mrs. Hendrick's System.

TORONTO, May 14.—Dr. Ellis has sent his report on the analysis of the contents of the stomach of the late Mrs. Hendricks, of Thedford, to the Attorney-General. A full account of the inquest on the remains of Mrs. Hendricks and the arrest of Mrs. Ryckman, of Thedford, was telegraphed several weeks ago. The deceased having died under suspicious circumstances at the prisoner's house, Mrs. Ryckman was arrested on a charge of poisoning her and lodged in gaol in Sarnia pending the result of the inquest. Dr. Ellis' report states that no signs of arsenic or strychnine were discovered. The report will be sent to the coroner at Thedford; who will summon the jurors together at Arkona and conclude their inquest. No reply from the Virginia State authorities have been received by the attorney general in reference to the communication about the extradition of Mrs. Ryckman to that place in connection with the death of Laura Ryckman, a daughter-in-law of the prisoner, who died suddenly in Virginia while visiting there with her husband and his mother some months ago. If the Virginia authorities, before the prisoner is discharged on the Hendricks charge, intimate to the attorney general their desire to extradite her, she will be detained in custody.

BOSCAYGEON.

FALL WHEAT.—The Fall wheat which came out from under the snow in splendid condition, has been very generally destroyed since, and the ground ploughed.

FURS.—The number of musk rats about the lakes must be tremendous. The catch this spring has not been so large as usual, yet one buyer in the village, Mr. F. W. Read, has now on hand 2,700 skins, having purchased from one man, 1,600. The price runs about 16c. Mink are not as plentiful, the fur being somewhat out of fashion.—Independent.

O'Brien In Montreal.

MONTREAL, May 14.—Wm. O'Brien and Dennis Kilbride arrived from Quebec this morning, and are staying at the St. Lawrence. Mr. O'Brien states that he will remain over Sunday here and leave in time to speak in Toronto on Tuesday. He is much pleased with the Quebec demonstration and will spend this afternoon in visiting the suburbs of Montreal. While here he will write some articles for his paper, United Ireland.

Arrived at Turnbull's by express, several quite New and Stylish Shapes in Bonnets and Hats, such as the Graceful, Tandon, Toboggan, Sylvia, Northwood, Essex, and others too numerous to mention.

TORONTO MASS MEETING.

Protesting Against Mr O'Brien's Visit —Largest Ever Held in the City.

A mass meeting was held in Queen's Park, Toronto, on Saturday afternoon, to voice the opinion of the citizens regarding Mr. Wm. O'Brien's visit to Canada to attack the Governor-General. It was estimated that there were fifteen thousand people present. Mayor Howland presided and gave an address. Bishop Sullivan moved the first resolution, which was asfollows:—"That this meeting reprobates the action of Mr. Wm. O'Brien in visiting this city for the purpose of exciting hostile feeling against His Excellency the Governor-General, on account of differences between His Excellency and his tenants in Ireland, and expresses its entire and unabated confidence in the high character of His Excellency the Marquis of Lansdowne, and in his fitness to represent Her Majesty in Canada." Mr. H. E. Clake, M. P. P., seconded the motion and it was supported by Bishop Sweatman, of Toronto. The motiom was carried almost unanmiously.

Prof. Goldwin Smith moved the second resolution, as follows:—"That this meeting looks with perfect confidence to the Parliament of the United Kingdom for a wise and just settlement of all questions relating to Ireland."

The Rev Dr. Potts seconded the resolution. It was supported by the Rev. G. M. Milligan and carried. On motion of Canon Domoulin, seconded by Mr. J. L. Hughes, it was resolved to send copies of the motions to Lord Lansdowne and Lord Salisbury. A vote of thanks was tendered the Mayor for presiding, on motion of Prof. Clarke, seconded by Mr. Van Koughnet. The meeting concluded with cheers for the Queen, the Governor-General and Mayor Howland. The despatch that was cabled to Salisbury is as follows:

TORONTO, May 14, 1887.

To the Marquis of Salisbury, Prime Minister of England, London.

Great mass meeting in the Queen's Park, Toronto, reprobates O'Brien's mission and expresses confidence in Lord Lansdowne. Also looks with confidecce to the British Parliament for a wise and just settlement of the Irish question.

W. H. HOWLAND, Mayor.

FURIOUS FIRE IN QUEBEC.

A Whole Block of Buildings Destroyed —Loss $125,000.

QUEBEC, May 14.—An immense conflagration occurred here this morning, involving a loss of $125,000 or upwards, with little or no insurance. About 3.30 a.m. the watchman on duty noticed smoke issuing from O. Rochete's tannery, a large building running the length of a whole block from King street and fronting on St. Dominique street. Through some cause or other, there was considerable delay in giving the alarm and when the firemen arrived at nearly 4 o'clock Rochette's tannnery and W. & J. Browne's lumber yard right along side were a surging mass of flames. The fire had made such a headway that the firemen dispaired of all hope of saving the surrounding buildings. They, however, set to work with a will and saved considerable property surrounding the burning property. Mr. Rochette, who does one the largest hide and tannery business in this locality, claims his loss to be about $80,000, and has no insurance. A week ago he let a policy of $2,500 expire. W. & J. Brown estimate their loss at $10,000; they have an insurance of $4,000 in the Imperial Insurance Company. Marchard's building was a wooden one which was totally consumed. His loss of building and machinery will foot between 15 and 20 thousand dollars. He has not a cent of insurance on it. J. B. Louin's wood yard was partially destroyed; his loss will only amount to a few hundred dollars. Aird's ice house, which is used for storing meats, was destroyed. The loss on it will be about six hundred or seven hundred dollars; not insured. The burnt district covers the whole block bounded on the east by St. Roche street, west by St. Dominique, north by King and south by Canadian Pacific railway station. The fire is believed to have originated from bark dust which gathered about the machinery and ignited from the friction of the chafts. This is the opinion of the chief of the fire brigade but no one seems to know how the fire originated or the exact hour. The people residing in the district were panic stricken and several moved their furniture some blocks away for the benefit of the prowlers who go to fires for what they can pick up. At noon the whole square was a mass of smouldering ruins. A large quantity of coal stored on the premises is on fire, but no danger is apprehended from this. The firemen have still some seven or eight streams playing on the burning portion and will probably be kept at it all day.

A Sunday Meeting.

MONTREAL, May 15.—A meeting of the Montreal Branch of the Irish National League was held this afternoon, when addresses were delivered by Wm. O'Brien, Denis Kilbride, the evicted, and several local speakers. Mr. O'Brien, in the course of his speech, said that his presence in Toronto would scarcely fail to apply a match to inflammatory material, but they were not going to be intimidated by any threats in doing what they had a perfect legal right to do. He said he would go alone, unarmed, with a free and easy conscience and with a full reliance upon the fair play and liberty-loving disposition of the Canadian people, and with deep conviction of the cause he advocated. He also expressed the belief that when his tour was finished the Canadian people would send Lord Lansdowne home with the stamp of Canadian reprobation upon his brow. Ernest Desroiser, a Frenchman, made a speech in which he said if England would treat Canadians through Lord Lansdowne as England has treated Ireland through Lord Lansdowne it would be a very severe strain upon Candians. Denis Berry, President of St. Patrick's Society, attacked the Catholics who did not turn up at Mr. O'Brien's meetings. The party afterwards visited several Catholic institutions in the city.

EXPULSIONS FROM GERMANY.

PARIS, May 14.—The Germany soldiers employed in the Schmertz factory at Marinverler, which was recently closed by the Government, have been summarily expelled from the country. It is reported that a similar factory near the frontier is about to be closed. Reprisals are being made on the other side of the frontier, where various persons have been punished for the singing of the "Marseillaise" and shouting "Viva La France."

AMNESTY TO PRISONERS.

LONDON, May 13.—Mr. Edward Samuel Norris, Progressive Conservative member for Limehouse division or Tower Hamlets, asked the Government in the House of Commons to-night whether, in the event of the passage of the Crimes Bill, they would consider the question of recommending to the Queen, as one of the features of her jubilee celebration, the granting of a general amnesty to all prisoners in Ireland under detention for agrarian crimes, but not guilty of personal violence. Mr. Smith, answering for the Government, said they were not in a position to make any such engagement.

SUGGESTING A COMPROMISE.

LONDON, May 15.—Mr. Gladstone neither likes to see Parliament paralyzed nor believes the country will like it. His supporters in the provincial pres are already hinting that compromise is possible. The Government are asked to insert a clause ensuring that the bill shall not be used to prevent legitimate combination. The permanency of the measure to which Mr. Gladstone referred will not be sacrificed by the Government, but this in not really very important. When a Liberal Government come in they can practically annul if unable immediately to repeal the Act. Other alterations will be suggested, but the probability that the Gladstonians and the Government will come to terms is exceedingly remote.

APPEAL OF ORLEANS PRINCES.

PARIS, May 14.—The Council of State yesterday gave a hearing to the appeal of the Orleans Princes against their expulsion from the army. Councillor Coulon, on behalf of General Boulanger, argued that the Counell was not competent to decide the case, and that the Government was responsible to parliament alone. M. Dareste, on behalf of the Duc d' Aumale and the Duc de Chartres disputed M. Coulon's contention.

TROUBLE IN THE EIGHTY CLUB.

LONDON, May 14.—The executive committee of the Eighty club have negatived a proposal to invite Mr. Chambefiain to attend the club's monthly dinners. In consequence of this action the Unionists of the club have called a general meeting, at which they will propose that the club observe neutrality on the Irish question. If the meeting rejects the proposal the unionists will resign from the club.

SETTLERS FOR CANADA.

LONDON, May 14.—Emigration to Canada is assuming large dimensions. Yesterday the Dominion steamer "Vancouver" left Liverpool under exceptional circumstances. She took 176 persons of good character, selected by the Society for the Promotion of Christian Knowedge, also 22 young gentlemen sent from Manchester and 70 Norwegians, who intend to establish a farming and fishing colony at Kromax, British Columbia, in addition to a number of German emigrants. Before the "Vancouver" sailed the Bishop of Liverpool offered words of instruction and advice, and wished them "God speed." He praised them for going to Canada, where he said there was room for everybody and plenty of work for willing hands. Altogether there were a thousand persons on board. Yesterday 135 boys and girls left Liverpool by the Allan steamer "Circassian," youthful emigrants from the Catholic Protective Society in Liverpool and the neighborhood.

A WAIL OF WOE.

THE Ottawa correspondent of the Montreal Herald has a dismal wail, a column and a half long, over the position and prospects of the Liberal party. After a vigorous attempt to awake the party, it proceeds to say:—

"It is undeniable that the spirit of the Liberal party has suffered serious evaporation. How is it to be remedied? for it must be remedied or the Liberal party had better cease to exist. It must be remedied with the rank and file of the party. Their leaders in Parliament have fought every inch of ground that could be contested, but, if that is to be all, these men may well ask, Cui bono?"

After some more lamentations we are told:—

"This must be changed or the Liberal party had better confess that it is worthless and hide its diminished head. How is it to be changed?"

Further on the remedial steps are suggested as follows:—

"And the secret of success is, first, the resolve for justice, and then organization and money. The one will follow the other."

From the context we gather that the "resolve for justice" is a resolve to have a turn upon the Treasury benches. In the same manner we learn that the "organization" is to be conducted by "the rank and file of the party," who, in the confessed failure of their leaders to win the people collectively, are to appeal to their neighbors individually "by the fireside, on the rivers, in the fields, and in the market places," endeavoring to fill their ears with the calumnies, which are the chief stock-in-trade of the so-called-Liberals. As to the use to be made of the money, we are given no information, but this may be gathered from the records of our law courts, from the histories of Messrs. Cook, Cameron et al.

We would venture to suggest that the proposed remedies will hardly suffice to cure the confessedly dangerous condition of the Liberal party. These mere plasters will not remove the deadly lethargy; a more radical cure is necessary. What is wanted is an intelligible policy calculated to benefit the country. The rank and file of the Liberal party naturally grow dispirited when they find that the only claim of their leaders is their supposed inheritance of the position of men of bye-gone days, who were also called Liberal and Reformers, but who would fail to recognize any likeness to themselves in their degenerate heirs. The rank and file are not inspirited by the fact that their leaders have unsuccessfully "fought every inch of ground that could be contested," because they have a shrewd suspicion that all this vain fighting was worse than useless. They do not want leaders to fight against the will of the majority of the people, against every measure to promote the progress and prosperity of the country, but they want leaders who can devise some better policy if possible.

The Conservative leaders have had a consistently practical National Policy. They have confederated the severed Provinces into one grand Dominion; they have added Province after Province to those first associated; they have called into life the great Northwest Territories by giving access to them over our magnificent national highway; they have by the C.P.R. and other channels of communication linked Province to Province, and opened through them a grand imperial route; they have fostered, protected and extended our home industries; they have vigorously defended our territorial rights; they have seen under their skilful administration our public credit raised to an unprecedented level, our reputation enhanced, our population and wealth augumented. In short, under Conservative leadership, Canada has become a nation, young, but vigorous and flourishing, and with the brightest prospects. The Liberal rank and file, like the Conservatives, have felt the benefit of all this, and in some way or other has each derived a personal advantage that has made them reflect. They could not feel enthusiastic when they saw their leaders first, for a little time, lukewarm allies of public benefactors and speedily warring with persistence against every one of these beneficial measures. So the best and least prejudiced men of the party have allied themselves with the Liberal-Conservatives, and others, who could not throw off the shackles of party ties and all associations, have sunk into the lethargy and despondency so well described by the Herald, even feeling more disgust than encouragement at the occasional accession of allies animated by sectional jealousies and prejudices, or hurt by not being appreciated according to their own overweening self-estimate.

The Herald will find that the prostration of its party cannot be cured by its suggested remedies; resolve for justice (or place), organization, or even money. What is wanted is leaders who will not devote their whole energies to "fighting," but who can think and work for their country. What party could win the confidence of the people with leaders who in the Maritime Provinces are protectionists as to coal and free-traders as to breadstuffs, and in Ontario are protectionists as to breadstuffs and freetraders as to coal; who object to the rapid construction of a great national railway and advocate the building of any number of additional lines if they will but divert traffic and business from ourselves for the benefit of a foreign country; who tell Ontario that she is the milch cow of confederation and promise the smaller Provinces to supply their cravings far more liberally; who advocate rebellion in one Province, secession in another, annexation in another, claims to be irresponsible to the law in another, and commercial preference for foreigners in another; who think the essence of party tactics is to decry their country, belittle its advantages, fight measures for its benefit and thwart its chosen authorities. The confidence of the people cannot be won in this manner. To lift the Liberal party from the slough of despond new leaders are wanted, or at least a new policy, more consistent, honest and patriotic. With all respect for the Herald, neither resolve, nor organization, nor money, will prove an efficient substitute. Nor will even the boasted merits of worthier sires in days of yore.

St. Paul's Hail Storm.

It would take the pencil of a Hogarth to intelligently picture the antics of the population when the storm ceased. Men, women and children all turned into curiosity hunters out with pails, baskets, plates, pots and other receptacles were to be seen everywhere on the warpath for the largest iceballs, and as assiduously gathering them as though they were veritable strawberries. None of them fell below an ounce in weight, the majority were fully four ounces, and from thence they were to be found in quantities from seven, eight and nine inches in circumference, many 10 inches, and the largest reported from 10½ to 11½. Some of these stones were entirely spherical, others eggshaped, but by far the greater part resembled in formation a "jelly tart," having a flat base and a thick, rounded rim mounted thereon, and inside, where the "jelly" ought to be, a button of blue ice of wonderful purity and transparency. These latter specimens, so uniform in appearance, were the subject of great curiosity, and must have been modelled in a cyclone factory in the upper skies.—St. Paul cor. Springfield Republican.

Burglary at Trenton.

A telephone message from Trenton states that the officials of the Central Ontario Railway, upon entering the Trenton office on Saturday morning, found that the safe had been forced open during the night and rifled of its contents, some $1,600 in ready cash. The job was cleverly done and was undoubtedly the work of experts. They escaped with their booty and left no clue behind. Suspicion rests upon a party who drove to the town a few days since with a sorrel horse and put up at the Queen's. Fruitless attempts have been made at the safe before. Five hundred dollars of the money was in five dollar bills and the remainder in tens. Merchants here should exercise extra precautions as there seems to be a number of experienced cracksmen working this part of the country.—Belleville Intelligencer.

Sympathy With Ireland.

ERIE, Pa., May 14.—The citizens of Erie met last evening to protest against the Irish Coercion Act. It was agreed that America had the same right to express sympathy for Ireland as it did for Greece, Hungary and other countries, who had struggled for freedom. Resolutions of sympathy were cabled to Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Parnell.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT

FIRST SESSION OF THE SIXTH CANADIAN PARLIAMENT.

Sir R. Cartwright Shows the Dark Side of His Shield—Mr. Blake's Usual Denial, After the Event—Mr. Mills as Critic.

FRIDAY, May 13.—A number of private bills were introduced.

EXTENSION OF TIME.

Mr. WOOD (Brockville), in accordance with the resolution of the Standing Orders Committee, moved that the time for the reception of petitions for private bills be extended to the 30th inst., and for the presentation of bills to Monday, June 6th.—Carried.

BUDGET DEBATE.

Sir R. CARTWRIGHT resumed his speech on the budget, repeating his old lamentations as to the state of the country. He strongly opposed the proposal to encourage home manufacture of iron. He renewed his complaints as to the debt and condemned our whole expenditure on public works since Confederation, on the ground that they did not pay a cash dividend. He prophesied terrible things for the future, said the deficit had been larger than any of his, and was frightened at the increase of expenditure. He was especially aggrieved at the increase of the Prince Edward Island subsidy by $20,000. He contended that our population was not increasing, though he admitted that Mr. Mowat's statistics did not show this. He blamed the Finance Minister for not making the price of grain higher. In the same spirit he dealt with various details of the revenue and expenditure. He accused the Nova Scotians of being barbarians, whom Sir C. Tupper in the guise of a Greek leader had bought off with gold. Mr. Blake had been asked by Nova Scotia Reformers to "go one better," but had sent a refusal, which had been published.

Sir C. TUPPER—When?

Sir R. CARTWRIGHT—Feb. 17 or 18.

Sir C. TUPPER said that was just too late to reach Nova Scotia till after the election.

Sir R. CARTWRIGHT declared that Nova Scotia ought not to have had the better terms granted some years ago, though he confessed he had voted for them. He maintained that confederation was a wrong to Nova Scotia, and referred to the disintegrating cries of his allies as the fault of the Ministry. He thought the question was whether confederation were worth preserving. He concluded with a terrible picture of the woes that would befall Canada unless it placed him and his friends in power by dismissing the present administration.

TARIFF CHANGES.

A number of new tariff items were considered.

Mr. MCMULLEN objected to the duty in printed cottons, as it would increase the price.

Sir C. TUPPER said the Canadian prints were better and cheaper than those imported. The increased duty would not make them dearer, but would prevent foreign goods been sent here at a loss to crush out the Canadian industry.

Mr. WALLACE and Mr. COLBY concurred in this.

Mr. MILLS objected to the duty on course salt saying that these duties had caused farms to decrease in value in Ontario.

Mr. HESSON referred Mr. Mills to the Mowat Government statistics as showing that Ontario farms had greatly increased in value instead of decreasing.

Mr. CHARLTON and others supported the increase which would not make salt dearer but rather cheaper.

Mr. CAMPBELL said Canadian was not as good as Liverpool salt for curing.

Sir C. TUPPER said salt from British possessions was free.

LINDSAY.

FASHIONAALE WEDDING.—Thursday afternoon, May 12th, Miss Bessie Dean, eldest daughter of His Honor Judge Dean, and Mr. Alfred Orde Tait, of New York, were united in matrimony. Rev. S. Nelles, D.D., assisted by Rev. M. L. Pearson, and Rev. Jas. Greener, performed the ceremody.

SALVATION ARMY.—Miss Bertha Smith, captain in the Salvation Army, recently assumed command in Brockville. Her place in Lindsay is now ably supplied by Captain John Eaton and Lieutenant Enoch Eaton, brothers. If they succeed as well as Miss Smith, and they are beginning well, the Army will this year be a most powerful church in this town.—Warder.

G. T. R. BUILDINGS.—In view of an early commencement of work on the extension of premises at Lindsay, the G. T. R. authorities have two derricks with a gang of men at work near Hastings taking out stone for foundations of buildings.

DIRECT LINE.—Early next week a gang of twenty men of the staff of the Bell Telephone Company, will arrive at Lindsay and begin the erection of a new direct line of wires from Lindsay to Toronto by way of Uxbridge. It is expected that the new line will afford great advantages over the line now in use, which doubles the distance to reach Toronto. As now sent a message follows the wires to Mount Pleasant, doubles back to Peterborough, then to Port Hope, and along the lake shore line to Toronto, in all traversing 123 miles. By the new direct line the distance to be traversed will not be much over 65 miles, and will permit of communication being carried on with ease and distinctness. The new wire will be of copper which, we learn, will reduce the resistance of passage of current about two-thirds.—Post.

CAMPBELLFORD.

THE DISEASE STILL DOING ITS WORK.—Two deaths more from measles have occurred in the village during the week, an infant child of widow Melville, Rear street, and the daughter of the Rev. T. Walker, whose illness we referred to in last week's issue, having been taken away. Mr Walker's family has been sorely afflicted, all his children—four in number—having been affected with the disease. His eldest son, Frank, a lad of eleven years, was very low on Monday morning, and the report went abroad that he was dead. A change for the better in his condition took place, however, and he is now recovering. The other two children who have not been so ill are recovering also.

A PIONEER LAID TO REST.—There are few of the pioneers of Seymour now remaining in the land, and their number has been reduced by the death of Mr. Granville Reilo, which took place on Friday last, he having attained the age of nearly seventy years. The deceased was a native of Glasgow, Scotland, and emigrated to this country when a youth of 16 years. He settled in Seymour in the year 1843—54 years ago—and has resided at his late home ever since. He was an elder of the Presbyterian Church in Campbellford for the past 25 years, and held this official position up to the time of his death. He was a man of exemplary character, of quiet and retiring habits. He was widely and well known in this locality, and during his long residence won the esteem and love of acquaintences and friends which is due a just man and honored resident. He leaves a wife and eight children—six daughters and two sons—all of whom are grown up.—Herald.

NORWOOD.

From Our Own Correspondent.

TREES.—Our streets have been very much improved this year by the care which a number of our villagers are taking for the proper shading of our town in days to come. The teachers of our school deserve credit for the dainty appearance of the school yard.

SPORTS.—The football match, between the Belleville (City) team and the High School of this place, has been cancelled, owing to the visitors failure to make the proper connections. The club is, however, going to Campbellford on the 24th and a return game will likely be played shortly afterward. The Lacrosse Club is turning out in fine form and things look as though a successful season is ahead for it. Some of the old time enthusiasm has been around and it is to be hoped that this our national game will receive the amount of encouragement it deserves. The probabilities are they will play in Millbrook on the 24th.

CONCERT.—A concert under the auspices of the "Royal Templars" will be held here on the 24th. A good progrrmme is being prepared and it is likely to prove a financial success as the admission is placed at a very reasonable price, viz, free.

RECOVERING.—Mrs. W. E. Roxburgh, who has been suffering from the effects of a fall, is, we are happy to state, fast recovering.

The question of inducements was discussed, and the main points laid before the Mayor and two Councillors. It will come up for discussion at the next Council meeting.

The first practice match of the season, Married v. Single, was played on Saturday. Only six married men turned up, but these, with five substitutes (marked *), were strong enough to beat the bachelors by 40 runs. The score is as follows:—

TRADE WITH THE NORTHWEST.

Lindsay, Like Peterborough Manufacturers, Find a Market in Our Westerly Provinces—The N. P. and C. P. R.

We find the following information in the Lindsay Post:—"It is satisfactory to find that Lindsay manfacturers are appreciated in Manitoba and the Northwest. This week Mr. James Hamilton is shipping, from his well-known works at Lindsay, a large number of vehicles which go direct to the warerooms at Brandon, Man., where they find a ready sale, and are in demand as a class of vehicle that well meets the needs of the country. The shipment this week includes buggies, phaetons, dog-carts and waggons, all of excellent design and superior workmanship. One vehicle in particular has been built to suit the market, the 'Olein' buggy, with the springs under the body, and the body as low down as it can possibly be placed. It is intended to stand the maximum of wear and work, and is pronounced positively unbreakable. While attending to the export trade Mr. Hamilton is giving increased attention to the home market, and has a stock of very superior vehicles ready for delivery." We are glad to learn that Mr. James Hamilton, like our own manufacturers, is deriving a benefit from the enlarged Canadian market. But we would like to know what chance Mr. Hamilton would have had of selling his goods at a profit in Manitoba if the Opposition had had their way, if there were no duty to preserve the market for him, if there were no C. P. R. to convey his goods to Manitoba, or if railways were allowed to induce Manitobans to purchase in Minneapolis or Chicago? Theories may sound very well, but practical benefits are the true test of statesmanship, and fortunately the affairs of Canada are now in the hands of practical men, not of philosophers with closet theories.

Lindsay v. Peterborough.

The first baseball match of the season here will be played on May 24th on the P. A. A. A. grounds, Lindsay v. Peterborough. The local nine think they can give Lindsay a good rub now.

Boulevards.

Boulevard building has commenced, and several stretches have been constructed in various parts of the town. This is one of the most effective ways of making a person's property more valuable and the town handsome.

Building.

The building season has set in in earnest. The contractors are all busy wading into their contracts. A large number of dwelling houses have been commenced, and up to date two large blocks of stores are to be built, and possibly three blocks.

First.

It is now a settled fact that spring has come. The opening verdure and the tuneful songsters say so, but if any further proof is wanting people who want it can go and hear the Italian aharping on his harp. The first sounds of his melodies floated over George Street to-day.

The Big Town.

Peterborough is quite a town. It has about twice the population of Port Hope and its assessment is about three times that of Port Hope. Favorable comparisons might be made with other small places in the vicinity such as Lindsay and Young's Point.

Pencil Points.

—Mrs. Chamber's concert promises to draw a large house.

—The P. M. makes it expensive for those who choose to be disorderly nowadays.

—The question "Is lager an intoxicating beverage?" has been asked.

—An unloader of schooners says that it is —if you can drink enough of it.

—Walter, the new peanut dealer, sports two jubilee souvenirs and a Band of Hope medal.

—He has begun to patronize the livery stables already.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS

WARLIKE AND REBELLIOUS.

Mr. Somerville was cheered in the House of Commons when he said that if any medals were to be given in connection with the rebellion of 1837 they should be given to those who were rebels. And why not? The rebels of that day fought for the right.—London Advertiser (Reform).

MONTREAL'S OPPORTUNITY.

How many Montrealers have seriously thought what effect the completion of the Canadian and American railway extensions at Sault St. Marie may have upon the trade of this city. When the connection is made at the Sault the line from St. Paul to Montreal will be the shortest route to the seaboard by many miles, and, other things being equal, the shortest route is certain to get the business. But will other things be equal? Will Montreal be able to offer as good terminal facilities as the great American cities? Can the business be handled as cheaply here as elsewhere?—Montreal Star (Indep.)

OUR VIEWS ALSO.

Among the articles placed on the free list is anthracite coal. We believe the change should not have been made, because we believe that a large part of the duty on anthracite has been paid by the producer, and not by the consumer. The man who expected an abatement of 50 cents a ton yesterday was woefully deceived. His coal remained at exactly the same price as before the removal of the duty. And it will remain at that price. The dealers will tell plausible cock-and-bull stories about the interstate commerce bill, and so on; but the people will pay exactly the same price for their coal as though the duty had remained.—Hamilton Spectator.

OR PREACH REBELLION.

The Hon. David Mills declines to "hold out his iron and wink" with the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, who wants to fight a duel with the London philosopher. Mr. Mills has conscientious scruples against shedding the blood of men. He prefers to talk them to death.—Toronto World (Indep.)

HEAR! HEAR!!

If the Reform press would uphold the Government in their wise measures, they would have better success in opposing the unwise and corrupt ones. But when they oppose everything the people don't know what measures really are wrong.—Woodstock Standard (Indep. Ref.)

A BRILLIANT DISPLAY.

The People's Palace in London Opened by Her Majesty the Queen.

LONDON, May 14.—London was all ablaze with excitement this afternoon, the occasion being the visit of the Queen for the purpose of opening the People's Palace at Mile End. The route selected for the royal progress extended from Paddington Station in the western portion of London to Mile End at the extreme eastern limit, a distance of about eight miles. The buildings along the entire way were gaily decorated with banners, wreaths, colored trophies and flags, the Irish colors and the Stars and Stripes being conspicuous in many places. White Chapel-road presented in perspective from almost any point a long vista of triumphal arches. The carriages were escorted by a troop of cavalry. The line of the procession was guarded by 10,000 volunteers and 5,000 regular troops, comprising artillery, infantry and cavalry, all selected largely with a view to the brilliancy and contrast of their different uniforms as additions to the pageant.

The Lord Mayor and the municipal officers of the City of London went in carriages from the Mansion House to the city's boundary line at Holborn. They alighted and awaited the Queen, who was in an open carriage. At the Queen's approach the Lord Mayor received the pearl sword from the sword-bearer. His Worship lowered the point and congratulated Her Majesty on coming to the most loyal city and presented the sword to the Queen. She took it and returned it. The Lord Mayor and retinue then placed themselves immediately in advance of the Queen's carriage, and escorted her across the city to the eastern boundary at Aldgate. There they bade her farewell for a brief time, and repaired to the Mansion House to await Her Majesty's return. The Queen proceeded to the People's Palace and ascended the dais, where the Prince of Wales, the Marquis of Lorne, the Duke of Cambridge, and the Archbishop of Canterbury were assembled, the choir singing the National Anthem. The Queen then received the golden key, Madame Albani sang "Home, Sweet Home" and the Prince of Wales declared the People's Palace open. The announcement was greeted with a great flourish of trumpets, followed by a grand chorus rendering "Old Hundred." Subsequently the queen laid the first stone of the foundation for the technical schools attached to the People's Palace. The Archbishop of Canterbury prayed for and blessed the people and pronounced the benediction. At the conclusion of the ceremonies the royal procession started to return. By command of the Queen the longest route was taken, the procession moving off into Burdett-road, going thence along Commercial-road to Aldgate. This deviation was ordered to please the citizens who requested it. Arriving again at the city limits the royal carriage was met be the Lord Mayor and civic officials and escorted back to the Mansion House, which the Queen entered in state for the first time in her life. The Lord Mayor wore crimson and ermine robes, only assumed when the sovereign visits him. He conducted the Queen to the tea room. The weather was fine all day.

The Queen subsequently returned to Windsor.

Missionary Steamer Missing.

WINNIPEG, Man., May 14.—A Victoria special says: "Great anxiety if felt for the missionary steamer, 'Good Tidings,' which sailed from Port Simpson, on the Northern coast, from this city, and was due on Monday last. She has on board the Rev. Mr. Crosby and party, of Port Simpson, to attend the conference. Despatches have been sent everywhere possible to get any news of her, but she has not yet been heard of."

"He Never Smiled Again!"

No "hardly ever" about it. He had an attack of what people call "billiousness," and to smile was impossible. Yet a man may "smile and smile, and be a villain still," still he was no villain, but a plain, blunt, honest man, that needs a remedy such as Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," which never fail to cure billiousness and diseased or torpid liver, dyspepsia and chronic constipation. ST. PAUL, Minn., May 14.—The Pioneer Press has advices of forest fires along the river north-east of Brainerd, two or three townships having been burned over. A heavy rain, which fell last evening, greatly assisted the settlers in the fight against the flames. The greatest injury to timber and logs is in the vicidity of Horseshoe Lake Several settlers have lost stock and outbuildings.

CHICAGO, May 15.—The Farmers' Review says: "Reports for the past week show that while some localities were favored with seasonable rains others, and the greater number, are needing rain, and that in its continued absence crops will suffer seriously. Reports on the condition of winter wheat continue fairly favorable.

Sentenced to be Hanged.

NEW WESTMINSLER, B. C., May 14.—The case of William Shearer, for the murder of J. E. Murne, was concluded last night. The past two days have been passed in the examination of a medical witness relative to the sanity of the murderer. The jury retired at 8.55 p.m. and returned a verdict at 10.55 of guilty. The prisoner was then sentenced to be hanged on the 6th of July. The crime for which Shearer is condemned was committed on Friday morning last. A coroner's inquest was held the same day, the case was submitted to the grand jury the next day, and the prisoner sent up for trial which commenced on Monday and concluded last night.

I beg to say that contrary to announcements which appeared in the Peterborough papers for the past two months, I DO NOT intend to remove to T. The final arrangements not being satisfactory to me, I withdrew from the projected change, and intend carrying on the Dry Goods business in my usual stand next to Lech's Hat Store.

It is my intention in the future as in the past to show at all seasons nothing but new and fresh goods in the various lines of Dry Goods and Gent's Furnishings; and by doing so, hope to retain the confidence which I am proud to say, I have enjoyed from the public since commencing business two years ago.

OUR IRON ORES.

RUMOURS have been current of late that capitalists in the United States have made arrangements to monopolize as far as possible the chief iron mines of Ontario, with the view not of smelting in this country, but of exporting the ores to the furnaces of our neighbors. More than once we have seen such announcements accompanied by statements that such operations were being conducted on a very large scale, and by expressions of gratification at the prospect of the establishment of such an industry. Though these rumours have not, so far, been authenticated, they cannot be regarded as improbable. Considerable quantities of iron ore have in the past been exported to the States from this very county, and the shipments might evidently be renewed. Besides the Coe transactions in the adjoining county of Hastings evidently point in this direction. He and his friends have gone a long way towards securing a monopoly of the chief iron mines in that county, and his purchases were accompanied by such boasts as we have mentioned of the large quantities of ore to be exported, and the benefit that would be derived from mining operations on so large a scale.

We have been unable to concur in these rejoicings. Indeed we have thought and said that such a policy was injurious instead of beneficial. It was bad enough to let our fine iron ores remain unused, but it would have been still worse to exhaust our iron mines that foreigners might snatch from us the benefit of the natural wealth with which our country was endowed. We wished to see our iron ores preserved, feeling convinced that the day must come that our people would recognize their value and put them to use, instead of exporting the raw material that foreigners might have the profit of utilizing it and then selling it back to us again in a manufactured form.

Now, happily, that time has come. The Macdonald Administration has added to its services to Canada that of encouraging the establishment of an industry which has done more than any other in modern times to build up the nations that engage in it largely. We are no longer, while possessing an abundance of excellent iron ore, to depend upon other countries for our supply of iron.

This being the case the folly of allowing our iron ore to be exported must have become evident if it was no se before. It is now obvious that the suicidal idea of handing over our iron mines to foreign capitalists, and sending away our iron ores to foreign furnaces should be abandoned. An export duty on iron ore should be imposed, and it should be fixed at a sufficient amount as to be virtually prohibitory. If the capitalists of the United States recognize the value of our mines well and good, but let them establish their works here, so that the realization of our natural wealth may go to build up Ontario, not Pennsylvania. If they are not willing to do so, others will come forward with the wise inducements now offered.

To exact such a duty on exportation would not be to adopt a new principle or one that can be considered objectionable. Last year such a duty upon saw logs was raised from an amount found to be insufficient, and this year the principle has been extended to shingle butts with the avowed intention of reserving our forest wealth for our own mills, and the benefit of manufacturing it for our own people. What reason can be advanced against the adoption of the same policy in regard to our mineral wealth? The necessity for thus preserving our mines is even more urgent, for trees will grow though slowly, while ores will not.

Steps should at once be taken to exact a duty on the export of iron ore, so that there may be no delay to encourage the threatened arrangements for large exportations, and so that foreign capitalists if interested in our mines may see at once that in order to make them available they must establish their works in this country.

CONFEDERATION LIFE ASSOCIATION.

THE proceedings of the annual meeting of the Confederation Life Association, and the financial statement submitted to the members, give a very satisfactory account of the year's operations. How highly its standing is appreciated by the public is shown by the large volume of its business and receipts. These are surpassed by only one Canadian company, by no British company doing business in Canada, and by only one company from the United States insuring in Canada. The soundness of its position is shown by its light death rate, its moderate expenses, its assets of over $2,000,000, and its surplus of nearly half a million dollars. These are the results of a careful, judicious course, aiming at no sensational inducements, but always doing full justice to its customers. Thus at the end of its third five-year period it stands in a foremost position among the life assurance companies doing business in Canada. The foregoing facts and figures we have culled from the Dominion blue book of last year, and from the annual financial statement, to which is appended the name of Mr. John Langton as one of the auditors, a certificate of accuracy that will naturally have great weight in Peterborough, his old home. As to the conduct of the local business, it is only necessary to say that it is in the hands of Mr. Harry Rush, the Peterborough Agent, who is so well known and appreciated that it would be a mere impertinence to sound his praises. We learn that this thoroughly Canadian company is doing a good business in this neighborhood.

Now that the general election is over and Reformers are relieved from the necessity of dissimulation they are talking free trade again. It is asked how, if grain were admitted free, it can be shown that "Toronto should be flooded with wheat from Buffalo and Detroit, with prices equal or higher almost constantly at the point of shipment?" There is not much wheat grown in Buffalo or Detroit, and they are not the only places in the United States. Why should not Minnesota and Dakota, which grow the kind of wheat in demand by millers, ship it to Toronto if there were no duty. Even with the duty, Dakota has paid it and shipped wheat by way of Manitoba. With this duty removed who can tell to what extent this practice might be adopted? And how would our Ontario farmers like to be shut out from supplying the mills because Dakota farmers had filled them up?

MR. MILLS criticised the tariff changes from what he supposed to be the farmer's point of view and had his ignorance exposed in several respects. Cannot Mr. Mills get himself made a farmer by special legislation?

O'Brien's Kingston Visit.

KINGSTON, May 16.—Citizens have signed a requisition raking the Mayor to call a public meeting for Wednesday night to discuss the appearance of Mr. O'Brien in this city on Friday night.

Coal Mining.

PITTSBURG, May 16.—A suspension of coal mining in the anthracite region, Pennsylvania, has been ordered to begin on Monday, the 22nd instant, and to continue one week. The object of the shut down is to relieve the surplus of anthracite coal at tide water shipping points, which amounts to between 600,000 and 1,000,000 tons.

The Bulli Colliery Disaster.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 16.—Advices from Australia say that 85 bodies of victims of the Bulli colliery disaster, near Sydney, had been recovered when the steamer Zealandia left. The inquest resulted in a verdict that the explosion was due to disregard of the rule prohibiting miners from working where gas existed.

Death of Mrs. Cartwright.

KINGSTON, May 16.—To-day, Mrs. Cartwright, relict of the late Rev. R. D. Cartwright, formerly chaplain of the Imperial forces here, and mother of Sir Richard Cartwright, died at the residence of her brother, Rev. F. W. Dobbs, Portsmouth. Deceased was nearly 80 years of age and had been in declining health for some time.

"Home, Sweet Home."

ATHENS, Ga., May 16.—Miss Mary Harden, the fiancee of Mr. John Howard Payne, and for whom he wrote "Home, Sweet Home," died on Saturday night and was buried here yesterday. It is said the original copy of "Home, Sweet Home" was buried with her as it was interlined with love declarations from Payne which the lady did not wish to have fall under the eyes of the public. She had been offered large sums for the manuscript but always declined to part with it. Miss Harden was 78 years of age.

DEAD IN A POOL OF BLOOD.

A Sad Affair in Griffintown—Death of Mrs. Sarah Duffy.

MONTREAL, May 16.—The Star says:—The topic in Griffintown yesterday was the death, under peculiarly distressing circumstances, of Mrs. Sarah Duffy, the wife of John Duffy, of 44 Seminary street. From interviews with eyewitnesses and with Coroner Jones the following particulars were gleaned: When John Duffy came home from his work on Saturday evening he found his wife helplessly drunk in bed. She would not get up to give him supper, and as there was nothing eatable in the house the long suffering patience of the man seems to have given out, and he slapped her in the face to rouse her, as he says, and then put her out of the room, locking the door after her. He then went out through the rear door to the stable to feed his horse. Nothing seems to have been heard of the woman during the night. But early on Sunday morning when Mr. Myers, who lives next door, came down stairs he heard some groans coming from the direction of the steps leading to the rear of his house. He found, on opening the door, the body of Mrs. Duffy stretched out on the stairs, a large pool of blood at the door and another on the stairs. Her left temple seems to have been crushed in, and the blood was streaming from the wound. Mr. Myers immediately called on the neighbors to help him take care of the unfortunate woman, but when help arrived the woman was dead.

Coroner Jones being notified, went to the scene and immediately procured the arrest of John Duffy, who admitted that he had struck his wife, but denied that he caused the wound from which she died. He claims that she must have fallen on the stairs whilst endeavoring to reach Mr. Myer's apartment, where she expected to find shelter for the night; and he points to the shape of the wound and to that of the tin can half filled with beer found beside her in proof of his theory. The Coroner, however, thinking the matter too serious, had the man put under arrest. The friends of Duffy praise him as a steady, hard-working man, and say that he has been greatly tried by the intemperate habits of his wife.

CONSUL TWICHELL'S REPORT.

How the Interstate Commerce Act Affects Kingston.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The department of state has received and transmitted to the inter-state commerce commission for its information a letter from U. S. Consul Twichell at Kingston, Canada, upon the subject of the inter-state commerce law and its effects upon our trade with Canada. The consul says:—Canada's high protective tariff, in which there is no prospect of reduction, has made us apprehensive from the first of the effect of the increased railroad rates on imports from the United States to this section of Canada. Since the 4th of April these rates, as shown by freight bills paid here, have been increased from 25 per cent. to 100 per cent. with no change on Canadian roads. After waiting 30 days for effects, I have made a partial canvass of the importers of the city of Kingston with the following result: Coal dealers are preparing to bring from Nova Scotia coal for all purposes where the Nova Scotia coal can be used. Two factories which have always used American coal have put in their orders for Nova Scotia coal. In hardware and pressed tinware I find orders have been changed from American to Canadian houses on account of freight. In groceries there is the same complaint. Products of countries outside of the United States they now expect to get by way of British Columbia and Halifax. The unpleasant feature in connection with my canvass has been the generally expressed desire to find how and where they can make their purchases without coming in contact with American railroads.

Supposed to be Lost.

NEW YORK, May 16.—The American ship Charles Marshall, which cleared London on December 5th for Philadelphia or New York and passed the Isle of Wight on December 15th, has been given up for lost with her crew of twenty-three men. Capt. Hutchison was a resident of Syracuse, N. Y., and leaves several children and a widow. The cargo consisted mainly of empty petroleum barrels and old iron.

Hon. Mr. Abbott Sworn In.

TORONTO, May 16.—Hon. J. J. C. Abbott, the new privy councillor and leader of the Senate, arrived in this city yesterday morning at 8 o'clock. He went straight to Government House and was sworn in by the Governor-General as one of Her Majesty's Privy Councillors for the Dominion. The hon. gentleman returned to Montreal last night, where he will remain till to-morrow morning. He will then go to Ottawa.

The New Brunswick Flood.

ST. JOHN, N. B., May 16.—The freshet in the river at St. John is falling rapidly, and Fredericton is out of danger. The gas works and water works will resume operations in a few days. At Woodstock the water works and electric light stations are also once more free from the flood. The suffering along the flooded district in Sunbury and Queen's is still intense. Communication with the high land has been opened by steam ferry boats, and relief parties are actively succoring those most in distress. The New Brunswick railway will start trains on schedule time to day, and unless heavy rain falls there will be no further interruptions. The damage to the Intercolonial about Rothsay will reach $20,000, as a large piece of track will have to be rebuilt. Latest estimates put the total loss at considerable over a million dollars.

THE THISTLE TRIED.

LONDON, May 16.—The special trial trip of the new racing yacht Thistle was made on Saturday down the Forth. The Thistle's first match will be against the Irex and will take place on May 28th. The course will be from South End to Harwich.

A LETTER FROM SMITH.

LONDON, May 15.—Professor Goldwin Smith is again expressing in the Times his views on things Canadian and American. Commercial men, the chiefs of industry on the American continent, are in his opinion equal in probity and every moral quality, while superior in energy and enterprise, to their rivals in any other country. But the American and Canadian politician is in most cases a political slave. The Irish vote is largely responsible for this. The Irishman is the worst of citizens in the United States, and Canada is becoming politically an Irish Republic. The moral of Professor Smith's long letter is: Pay no attention to anti-coercion resolutions passed by servile politicians or corrupt Legislatures. They do not represent real American or Canadian opinion.

O'BRIEN ELECTED FOR CORK.

DUBLIN, May 16.—Wm. O'Brien, editor of United Ireland, who is now in Canada, has been elected without opposition to the seat in the House of Commons for the North East Division of Cork, made vacant by the resignation of Edmund Leamy.

BULGARIA.

BUCHAREST, May 16.—It is reported that the Bulgarian Regents are meditating the proclamation of King Charles of Roumania as Prince of Bulgaria, thus virtually making the Danubian Balkan provinces one kingdom, Roumania having, it is said, consented to the scheme. This policy is attributed to the initiative of England, and is said to have the approval of Germany.

PARIS COUNCIL.

PARIS, May 16.—The elections for members of the municipal Council of Paris have been completed. The Revolutionists will now have ten seats in the council instead of four, as in the last council, while the Moderates who formerly had twenty-two seats will have but fourteen.

BERLIN, May 16.—Prince Bismarck has given official statutory notice to the house and land owners concerned, that the Government contemplate an extension of the fortified area around Strasburg, Metz and Posen.

MANCHESTER SHIP CANAL.

LONDON, May 16.—The directors of the Manchester Ship Canal Company have concluded a contract for the construction of the canal for $25,000,000. The contract is conditional on the whole capital being subscribed. The directors now assert that the capital has been secured.

A LIBERAL THREAT.

LONDON, May 16.—Sir William Vernon Harcourt proposes an important amendment to the bill exempting from secret inquiry all proceedings relating to public meetings or agrarian movements, including combinations to obtain a reduction in rent. The Gladstonians will make this a test amendment. If the Government accept it the bill will be allowed to progress, but if the Government refuses, every possible device will be used to obstruct the measure.

CANADA'S IRON FIELD.

A Company of New York Capitalists Formed to Develop Them.

WATERTOWN, N.Y., May 16.—A party of New York capitalists arrived here this morning in a special car. They were on their way to Kingston, Ont., from which place they will make an excursion up the Kingston and Pembroke railroad, which runs through the richest iron region of Canada. The object of the trip is to organize a mining company with $5,000,000 capital to develop this region. The company will be organized in Kingston to-morrow, and the officers likely to be elected are Henry Seibert, of New York, President; Daniel L. Gibbens, Secretary, and Fred S. Flower, Treasurer. Besides the above-named the following gentlemen were in the party that left this city: James Tillinghast, Buffalo; H. H. Hollister, Charles F. Fearing, Lewis Snyder, E. Martin Blank, of the Wall Street News; Henry S. Kearney, W. E. Cooper, W. A. Speaght, Matthew Dean, J. T. Storey, E. T. Post, H. G. Craig, J. D. Flower, of New York; ex-Senator A. CONFEDERATION LIFE.

FIFTEENTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE ASSOCIATION,

Held at the Head Office, Toronto Street, Toronto, on Tuesday, April 12, 1887, at 2 p.m.

The meeting was well attended by Policy holders, Shareholders and others interested.

The President was elected chairman, and J. K. Macdonald, Secretary of the meeting.

The CHAIRMAN called upon the Secretary to read the notice calling the meeting, which was done.

The Minutes of the last Annual Meeting were taken as read.

The PRESIDENT then submitted the Fifteenth Annual Report as follows:—

The close of the year 1886 completes the three quinquennial periods of the Association's existence, and the results, from whatever standpoint viewed, afford striking evidence of true progress.

It is, therefore, with a large measure of satisfaction that the Directors meet the Policyholders and Shareholders in the fifteenth Annual meeting with evidences of success unequalled in the history of Canadian Life Companies. It has continued to be the aim of the Directors to secure business at reasonable rates, and hence they have avoided the extravagance in that direction which too strongly marks the struggle for pre-eminence between Life Insurance Companies. A safe business, on only well tried lines of insurance, has been sought for, and therefore all merely specious plans, which, in the opinion of the Directors, are certain to prove delusive, have been avoided. The adoption of such plans, and a less conservative course in caring for the Policyholders' money, would have led to a largely increased volume of business; but, if that course had been adopted, a less satisfactory balance sheet and a decreased surplus would have been the result.

During the year (including 112 re-assurance for $173,250 from the Life Association of Canada), 1,919 applications for a total assurance of $2,977,100 were received. Of these, 1,812 for $2,794,100 were approved, and 107 for $183,000 were declined. It should be mentioned that these results represent only ELEVEN months' work, and yet, as compared with the full year 1885, the ELEVEN months' work shows an increase of 427 accepted applications for $407,063 of assurance.

No stronger evidence than the above will be offered of the appreciation by the public of the special advantages offered by the Association's high standard of security and liberal terms and results, combined with only sound plans of insurance.

At the close of the year the register showed the following business in force:— 9,493 policies on 8,476 lives, for $14,679,474 of assurance.

In the matter of the re-assurances from the Life Association, and the consideration allowed for the same, the Directors might have charged only a part to the expenses of the year, carrying the balance to some such account as "Commuted Commissions;" but such a course would have been contrary to the practice of this Company, and while apparently increasing the surplus, would have been entirely worthless either as a security or for division, and therefore the consideration was charged in full to the expense of the year. A sound balance sheet will steadily compensate for a slight increase in the expense ratio.

The death claims for the year were again favorable, calling for $85,948.85, which includes bonus (and intermim bonus) additions, under 56 policies on 49 lives. This fact sufficiently attests the care exercised in the admission of members. It will be observed that the interest received more than provided for the claims.

The usual Financial Statements, duly certified, are submitted herewith. It cannot fail to be a source of satisfaction to all interested in the Company to note the rapid growth in volume and strength which these statements indicate. The following INCREASES on the showing at the close of 1885 are worthy of note:—

	Premiums.	Interest and Rents.	Reserve.
Increase	$96,894 20	$13,019 91	$291,685 77

Assets.	Surplus.
$356,375 35	$80,234 07

In the opinion of the directors, the time has arrived when the rate of interest used in calculating the policy liabilities should be reduced from four and one-half per cent. to four per cent. The large increase in the Reserve, amounting so nearly to $300,000, will indicate how fully provision has been made for the future payments, which are sure to be required. So thoroughly has the necessity for ABSOLUTE safety been realized by the board, which in the face of the greatly reduced rate of interest now (and likely to be) obtainable on first-class investments, can only be assured by reducing the assumed rate of interest, that they have determined to hold a large sum undistributed. Larger profits to the policy-holders at the present time would be but a poor compensation for a possible inability to provide at an early day for the greater inability which will be occasioned by the Government compelling the assumption of four per cent in calculating the reserves. The Directors mean to be prepared, and will therefore hold for that purpose and for unforseen contingencies the sum of $61,365.45 undistributed.

It will be a cause of satisfaction to the Policyholders to learn that one-half of the ten per cent. going to the shareholders, for the past Quinquennium, has been given up as a further protection to the Policyholders, being included in the $61,364.45 so specially reserved. This gives, practically, ninety-five per cent. of the profits of the Quinquennium to the policyholders.

The Confederation Life has done the Canadian Public excellent service in leading up to a measure of liberality on the part of the life companies strikingly in contrast with what prevailed before it was deemed desirable to come up to its standard. This Association still maintains its place in the van.

It will be seen from the Balance Sheet that the sum of $290,420.50 has been allocated to the policyholders. To this should be added $10,239.78, which has been paid out as Interim profits, making the total profits to the Policyholders for the last five years $270,660.28, more than double the profits for the second Quinquennium.

The result cannot fail to prove satisfactory, the more especially as so large a provision has been made for all contingencies under the special amount held as undistributed surplus.

It has also been decided to bring the amount paid on the new shares up to ten per cent., making the old and new alike. This will be done by declaring a bonus of $2 per share, and calling in $4 on the new shares. This bonus will be declared out of the shareholders' surplus, and will make the paid up capital $100,000, which will still further strengthen the security of the policyholders.

The Directors felt that the time had arrived for the creation of an Actuarial Department, and, on the recommendation of the Managing Director, it has been organized.

The valuation of the Policy and Annuity obligations has been made by Mr. D. Parks Fackler, the well-known Actuary, of New York. His certificate will be found appended to the report.

The change decided upon last year in regard to the quinquennial periods goes into effect in 1887, and in future the date of the issue of the policy will determine its quinquennial periods. Policies sharing say four years's profits now, will, on the settlement of the premium for 1888, become entitled to the profits for 1887, the fifth year of the policy. Polices in force for longer or shorter periods will similarly become entitled to profits in 1889-90, etc.

The Directors have had the insufficiency of the present office accomodation forced upon them by the rapidly growing business, and have concluded that the time has come when the Company should possess a building of its own. They have tried to purchase a suitable site, but finding that impossible, have leased for a period of 42 years, with the right to renew in perpetuity the site is on the north east corner of Yonge and Richmond streets. It is proposed to proceed to build as soon as may be prudent, and have the building ready for occupation before the expiration of the lease of the present offices.

The Directors have pleasure in referring to the continued diligence and faithfulness of the Office and Agency Staff.

All the Directors retire, but are eligible for re-election.

J. K. MACDONALD, Man. Director. W. P. Howland, President.

J. K. MACDONALD, Managing Director.

A number of the persons present expressed their great pleasure at the very satisfactory report submitted, and commended the Directors and management for the steps taken in providing for the increased security to the policyholders, and also for the large surplus after such ample provision has been made for the requirement of the present law, as well as for the greater requirement under the prospective reduction to the four per cent basis of valuation.

The usual routine business was taken up and disposed of. The old Directors were re-elected, and at a subsequent meeting of the Board Sir W. P. Howland was re-elected President and the Hon. Wm. McMaster and Wm. Elliott, Esq., were re-elected Vice-Presidents.

JESS.

BY H. RIDER HAGGARD.

Author of "King Solomon's Mines," "She," etc

"'Is your name Croft?' he said.

"'Ay,' I answered.

"'So is mine,' he went on with a sort of a drunken leer. 'I'm your brother.'

"'Are you?' I said, beginning to get my back up, for I guessed what his game was, 'and what may you be after? I tell you at once, and to your face, that if you are my brother you are a blackguard, and I don't want to know you or have anything to do with you; and if you are not, I beg your pardon for coupling you with such a scoundrel.'

"Oh, that's your tune, is it?' said he, with a sneer. 'Well, now, my dear brother Silas, I want my children. They have got a little half brother at home—for I have married again, Silas—who is anxious to have them to play with, so if you will be so good as to hand them over, I'll take them away at once.'

"'You'll take them away, will you?' said I, all of a tremble with rage and fear.

"'Yes, Silas, I will. They are mine by law, and I am not going to breed children for you to have the comfort of their society. I've taken advice, Silas, and that's sound law,' and he leered at me again.

"I stood and looked at the man, and thought of how he had treated those poor children and their young mother, and my blood boiled and I grew mad. Without another word I jumped over the half finished wall and caught him by the leg (for I was a strong man ten years ago) and jerked him off the horse. As he came down he dropped the sjambock from his hand, and I caught hold of it and then and there gave him the soundest hiding a man ever had. Lord, how he did bellow! When I was tired I let him get up.

"'Now,' I said, 'be off with you, and if you come back here I'll bid the Kaffirs hunt you back to Natal with their sticks. This is the South African Republic, and we don't care overmuch about law here.' Which we didn't in those days.

"'All right, Silas,' he said, 'all right, you shall pay for this. I'll have these children, and, for your sake, I'll make their life a hell—you mark my words—South African Republic or no South African Republic. I've got the law on my side.'

"Off he rode, cursing and swearing, and I flung his sjambock after him. And it was the first and last time I saw my brother."

"What became of him?" asked John Niel.

"I'll tell you, just to show you again that there is a power that keeps just such men in its eye. He got back to Newcastle that night, and went about the canteen there abusing me and getting drunker and drunker, till at last the canteen keeper sent for his boys to turn him out. Well, the boys were rough, as they are with a drunken white man, and he struggled and fought, and in the middle of it the blood began to run from his mouth, and he dropped down dead of a broken blood vessel, and there was an end of him. That is the story of the two girls, Capt. Niel, and now I'm off to bed. To-morrow I'll show you round the farm, and we will have a talk about business. Good night to you, Capt. Niel; good night!"

CHAPTER III.

MR. FRANK MULLER.

John Niel woke early next morning, feeling as sore and stiff as though he had been well beaten and then strapped up tight in horse girths. He made shift, however, to dress himself, and then, with the help of a stick, limped through the French windows that opened from his room on to the veranda and surveyed the scene before him. It was a delightful spot. At the back of the house was the steep, bowlder strewn face of the flat topped hill that curved round on each side, embosoming a great slope of green, in the lap of which the house was placed. The house itself was solidly built of brown stone, and, with the exception of the wagon shed and other outhouses, which were roofed with galvanized iron that shone and glistened in the rays of the morning sun in a way that would have made an eagle blink, was covered with rich brown thatch. All along its front ran a wide veranda, up the trellis work of which green vines and blooming creepers trailed pleasantly, and beyond was the broad carriage drive of red soil, bordered with bushy orange trees laden with odorous flowers and green and golden fruit. On the farther side of the orange trees were the gardens, fenced in with low walls of rough stone, and the orchard full of standard fruit trees, and beyond these again the oxen and ostrich kraals, the latter full of long necked birds. To the right of the house grew thriving plantations of blue gum and black wattle, and to the left was a broad stretch of cultivated lands, lying so that they could be irrigated for winter crops by means of water led from the great spring that gushed from the mountain side high above the house and gave its name of Mooifontein to the place.

All these and many more things John Niel saw as he looked out from the veranda at Mooifontein, but, for the moment at any rate, they were lost in the wild and wonderful beauty of the panorama that rolled away for miles and miles at his feet, till it was ended by the mighty range of the Drakensberg to the left, tipped here and there with snow, and by the dim and vast horizon of the swelling Transvaal plains to the right and far in front of him. It was a beautiful sight, and one to make the blood run in a man's veins and his heart beat happily because he was alive to see it. Mile upon mile of grass clothed veldt beneath, bending and rippling like a corn field in the quick breath of the morning, space upon space of deep blue sky overhead with never a cloud to dim it, and the swift rush of the wind between. Then to the left there, impressive to look on and conducive to solemn thoughts, the mountains rear their crests against the sky, and, crowned with the gathered snows of the centuries whose monuments they are, from æon to æon gaze majestically out over the wide plains and the ephemeral, ant like races that tread them, and while they endure think themselves the masters of their little world. And over all—mountain, plain and flashing stream—the glorious light of the African sun and the spirit of life moving now as it once moved upon the darkening waters.

John stood and gazed at the untamed beauty of the scene, in his mind comparing it to many cultivated views that he had known, and coming to the conclusion that, however desirable the presence of civilized man might be in the world, it could not be said that his operations really added to its beauty. For the old line, "Nature unadorned adorned the most," still remains true in more senses than one. Presently his reflections were interrupted by the step of Silas Croft, which, notwithstanding his age and bent frame, still rang firm enough—and he turned to greet him.

"He Never Smiled Again!"

No "hardly ever" about it. He had an attack of what people call "billiousness," and to smile was impossible. Yet a man may "smile and smile, and be a villain still," still he was no villain, but a plain, blunt, honest man, that needs a remedy such as Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," which never fail to cure billiousness and diseased or torpid liver, dyspepsia and chronic constipation. At druggists.

Thoroughly cleanse the blood, which is the fountain of health, by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, vital strength, and soundness of constitution will be established.

Golden Medical Discovery cures all humors, from the common pimple, blotch, or eruption, to the worst Scrofula, or blood-poison. Especially has it proven its efficacy in curing Salt-rheum or Tetter, Fever-sores, Hip-joint Disease, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Enlarged Glands, and Eating Ulcers.

Golden Medical Discovery cures Consumption (which is Scrofula of the Lungs), by its wonderful blood-purifying, invigorating, and nutritive properties. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath, Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, Asthma, and kindred affections, it is a sovereign remedy. It promptly cures the severest Coughs.

For Torpid Liver, Biliousness, or "Liver Complaint," Dyspepsia, and Indigestion, it is unequalled as a remedy. Sold by druggists.

Arrangements are now being made for billeting the ministers who will attend the Bay of Quinte conference to be held here in June. So far accommodation has been been secured for the greater part of the visitors. Those who feel like entertaining one or two of the visiting clergy should see the Rev. I. Tovell.

Co-Operation.

At the regular meeting of the Otonabee Lodge of Oddfellows, held last night, the following committee was appointed to meet with several committees of the various societies in town to discuss the question of properly celebrating the Queen's Jubilee on the 21st of June, viz.: Wm. Cluxton, P. G., J. L. Hughes and E. E. Henderson.

A. C. A.

The Northern Division of the A. C. A. meet at Stoney Lake on August 1st. Ladies who will kindly contribute flags for the prizes for the regatta to be held on that occasion will please intimate the number of flags they will contribute to one of the following gentlemen, Mr. R. C. Strickland, Lakefield, Mr. J. G. Edwards, Lindsay, or Mr. Wm. G. McKendrick, Toronto.

The Corps.

On application of Mr. McNeil, Col. Slatter, commander of the Camps Militant, in connection with the Oddfellows of Ontario, has issued orders for the turning out of that corps in August to attend the demonstration to take place in Peterborough. Col. Slatter further states that he will do everything in his power to make the turnout a success, and that it is likely Major-General Eddy and Lieut.-Gen. Underwood will be present.

"Grip's" Premium Plates.

Grip, Canada's comic paper, has just issued a very fine lithographed group of Reform politicians in Canada. This is a companion group to the Conservative leaders issued from the same office last year, and is the same size, 18x26 inches. When framed the pair make a handsome ornament for any library, dining-room or reading room. The portraits are well executed, and the plates are a credit to Canadian enterprise. They are sold separately for 25 cents each, or a copy of either plate is sent free to any one paying $2 for one year in advance to Grip, or subscribers sending $1.10 will receive Grip for six months and their choice of either Reform or Conservative groups. Address, Grip, Toronto, Ont.

Rail Arrangements.

The committee having charge of negociating with the railways for special rates during the Oddfellow's demonstration in Peterborough have completed their work. The Order are highly pleased with the rates obtained—in fact no such rates and terms were ever obtained in connection with any other demonstration taking place here. The Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk railways have given in their schedules of rates which have been adopted by the committee. The latter have just concluded arrangements with the Northern Railway, the Kingston and Pembroke Railway, and the Central Ontario Railway whereby these roads will issue tickets at the same rates as the Grand Trunk and Canadian Pacific. Already the committee are receiving communications regarding the terms they offer for running excursions from special points to Peterborough.

Imperial Federation League.

Mr. J. H. Long, President of of the Peterboroug Branch of the Imperial Federation League, attended a meeting of the Council of the League at Ottawa, on Saturday. A draft of a pamphlet proposed to be issued by the league was discussed at some length, and was finally referred to a sub-committee for revision and extension, and to be reported to an adjourned meeting to be called by the chairman. An animated discussion took place as to the advisability of the league adopting a resolution favorable to imperial reciprocity or a policy of trade within the Empire on more favorable terms than with foreign countries, and this question was also left for further consideration and for information regarding the work accomplished by the imperial conference upon the arrival of Sir Alex. Campbell and Sandford Fleming, the Canadian delegates.

THANKS FROM LORD LANSDOWNE.

His Excellency's Reply to the Queen's Park Resolutions.

The Governor-General on Monday afternoon sent this letter to Mayor Howland, of Toronto:—

GOVERNMENT HOUSE, Toronto, May 16, 1887.

MY DEAR MR. MAYOR,—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of this day's date, enclosing copies of the resolutions which were carried at the mass meeting on Saturday last in the Queen's Park.

I have read these resolutions with the greatest pleasure. The cordial reception given to me on my arrival in Toronto had already afforded a striking proof of the loyal feelings of your citizens towards Her Majesty, and of their desire to show their respect, for her sake, to her representative in this part of her dominions.

I trust, however, that I may regard these resolutions not only as giving additional emphasis to that remarkable demonstration, but as an indication that in the opinion of the citizens of Toronto, expressed at one of the largest and most representative meetings ever held in your city, I have done nothing to forfeit that respect or to justify a withdrawal of the good-will which has hitherto been shown towards me.

I earnestly trust that I may continue to merit the confidence of your people, and that when my term of office has expired no act of mine, public or private, will be found to have detracted from the honorable traditions of the office which I am now permitted to hold.

It has been a source of the deepest regret to me that those who have sought for political purposes to stir up strife between me and the tenants on a part of my Irish estates should have been for a time successful; I desire sincerely that the differences which have thus arisen may not prove to be permanent, and that the kind relations which until recently existed between those tenants and myself may be ere long completely restored.

I trust that you will take an early opportunity of making known my deep appreciation of the kindness which I have received since my arrival in Toronto, and my gratitude for the support and encouragement which I have received at the hands of your people.

I am, dear Mr. Mayor,
Yours very faithfully,
LANSDOWNE.

ANNEXATION OR NOTHING.

Commercial Union Opposed—A New York Papers Loud Talk.

NEW YORK, May 16.—The Sun, in its leading editorial this morning, says: "It is reported that the leading men of the Dominion Government at Ottawa are seriously considering the project of a commercial union with the United States. Just what the details of that project are we don't know or care to enquire. But we tell the Canadian statesmen that nothing short of a political union under the constitution of the United States will give them what they want, viz., perfect free trade between all the Canadas and all the States of the Great Republic. We assure them in all candor that this is a settled principle with our people of all parties, and the sooner our neighbors across the border recognize it and sensibly set about considering the advantages which may be secured by its adoption the sooner will they obtain with us that political happiness and prosperity which they so ardently long for, and which, whether it comes peaceably or not, is their manifest destiny. The idea of a commercial union or zollverein is futile; it has no real place in our ideas and will never be seriously considered by our people. It is equally certain that the course of petty annoyance which seems to have been inaugurated, whether originating in England or Canada, can have but one conclusion, namely, an absolute back down on the part of its authors or conquest on ours."

A Huge Hammer.

Mr. W. H. Law has placed in the Central Iron Works a very powerful automatic steam hammer—the largest ever made in Canada. The ponderous machine arrived in town from the works of Messrs. Bertram & Sons, Dundas, on Monday, and is now being placed in position. The gross weight of the hammer is fourteen tons, the ram alone weighing 2,000 pounds. It has a stroke of 28 inches and can strike one hundred blows to the minute. It was tested on Monday at the shop where it was manufactured, and gave great satisfaction. The perfect way in which it was designed rendered the management of this machine, possessing such stupendous power, an easy task to anyone. By merely adjusting the lever to a proper degree the touch was made so delicate as to crack a nut, or to flatten a twelve inch square of iron under its heavy blows. The hammer was specially designed several improvements suggested by Mr. Law having been carried out successfully. The price of it was $1,700. A local paper, in giving a description of the hammer, says that "Mr. Polson, of the Polson Iron Works, of Toronto, was present and pronounced the hammer to be one of the finest he had ever seen," and that "Mr. Foley, foreman at Goldie & McCullock's, in Galt, declared that 'the cylinder is the finest ever cast in Canada."

Started for Toronto.

MONTREAL, May 16.—Messrs. O'Brien and Kilbride, accompanied by representatives of New York and Chicago newspapers, left here by the 11.55 o'clock train to-night for Toronto, and expect to arrive there by eleven o'clock in the morning. They were seen off at the station by about fifty members of the Land League, and the train rolled out of the station amid cheers for O'Brien, Kilbride and Parnell, and the singing of "God Save Ireland." Mr. O'Brien's parting words were:—"I will speak, please God, in the Queen's park to-morrow afternoon. Despite everything that has been said, I do not fear any trouble, for I have faith in the good sense and fairness of the great mass of the people of Toronto." Mr. O'Brien, who appeared greatly fatigued with his labours, was unaccompanied save by the American newspaper correspondents.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC

FROM

J. J. SHEEHY

I beg to say that contrary to announcements which appeared in the Peterborough papers for the past two months, I DO NOT intend to remove to T. Dolan & Co's Dry Goods Store, nor have I any connections whatever with that establishment. The final arrangements not being satisfactory to me, I withdrew from the projected change, and intend carrying on the Dry Goods business in my usual stand next to Loch's Hat Store.

It is my intention in the future as in the past to show at all seasons nothing but new and fresh goods in the various lines of Dry Goods and Gent's Furnishings; and by doing so, hope to retain the confidence which I am proud to say, I have enjoyed from the public since commencing business two years ago.

O'BRIEN IN TORONTO.

A Noisy Meeting in the Queen's Park—A Few Slight Disturbances.

An open air meeting was held in the Queen's Park, Toronto, on Tuesday afternoon, and was addressed by Mr. Wm. O'Brien, M.P., and editor of the Dublin United Ireland, and Mr. Denis Kilbride. The number present is variously estimated at from 5,000 to 12,000. The Mail says:—"Although there was no serious breach of the peace during the meeting, the fact that opposition to the speakers of the day was organized was abundantly manifested as soon as an attempt was made to introduce O'Brien. It was Mr. J. A. Mulligan who first essayed to speak, but he was met with a storm of yells and groans, and could not be heard by any save the hundred or so standing immediately in front of the platform. These outbursts, designed apparently to drown the voice of the speaker, came every time from certain places in the crowd, where the disturbers had gathered together for the purpose of creating a noise. No organized attack was made upon any of O'Brien's sympathizers, the opposition being satisfied to prevent the speakers from being heard, and in following out this programme ran no danger of a collision with the police. The police force, it may be mentioned, was very strongly represented. Squads of police were posted at the four angles formed by the platform, and the mounted policemen were stationed at a covenient spot near the speakers. Messrs. Muiligan, O'Brien and Kilbride, despite desperate and persistent efforts to make themselves heard, could not force their voice through the din made. When those unfriendly to O'Brien and his mission tired of shouting they sang in union God Save the Queen. When the National anthem grew monotonous they sang popular choruses. O'Brien's friends were not idle, and vigorously cheered the speakers whenever they paused, although very few had heard anything of what had been said. The crowd throughout was very good humoured, but occasionally a dispute between two men ended in a fight. In each case mutual friends separated the combatants, or else the prancing steeds of the mounted police compelled all to fly in disorder. No stones or missiles were thrown during the meeting, which lasted from 4.30 to about 6 o'clock." The Toronto papers all state that the opposition was such that only a few could hear the speakers, and the speakers frequently were compelled to pause. Mr. O'Brien's speech was principally a protest against the interruptions. Mr. Kilbride explained his relations as a tenant with Lord Lansdowne. The following resolution was moved by Mr. D. Cahill:—"That this meeting of citizens of Toronto earnestly sympathise with the mission of Mr. William O'Brien, the editor of United Ireland, and takes this opportunity of entertaining a healthy protest against the unjust and cruel treatment of the tenants at Luggucurran by Lord Lansdowne." The Globe says:—"The reading of the resolution was loudly interrupted, and few if any of the audience could have got an intelligent idea of its contents. The man who read it became thoroughly exasperated with those who were disturbing the meeting and violently declared there was a lot of blackguards. There was no opportunity to get the voice of the meeting on the resolution, but it was declared carried."

A banquet was tendered Messrs. O'Brien and Kilbride in the evening, which was largely attended, more desiring admission than could be accommodated.

Strike on the Welland Canal.

ST. CATHARINES, May 17.—A strike is in progress on the section of the new canal near Geneva street under the contract of Smith, Mumford & Co., but sub-let to Mr. Fraser, of Thorold. Lately the sub-contractor has been employing non-union laborers and teams on his work. On Saturday he was waited on by a representative of the knights of labor and asked to change his hands. He ordered the knights off the works and as a consequence the masons and other union men quit work.

An Old Woman's Last Smoke.

ST. THOMAS, Ont., May, 17.—Mrs. Fraser, an old lady residing in Malahide, while crossing a field yesterday to visit her neighbor, placed a lighted pipe in her pocket which set fire to her dress. When found her clothing was entirely consumed and her body burned to a crisp. Medical assistance was summoned, but nothing could be done for her. Her daughter, Mrs. T. W. Edge, of London, was telegraphed for.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT

FIRST SESSION OF THE SIXTH CANADIAN PARLIAMENT.

Scott Act Amendment—Civil Service Examinations—The Departments—Tariff Changes—Freetraders Again.

MONDAY, May 16.—Some private bills were introduced and others advanced a stage.

BEER AND WINE.

Col. TYRWHITT introduced a bill to amend the Scott Act by permitting the sale of beer, wine and cider in Scott Act counties.

Mr. MILLS wanted the Administration to declare its position on this measure.

Sir JOHN MACDONALD said they would take the matter into consideration.

CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.

Mr. MCNEILL introduced a bill to amend the Civil Service Act, by relieving Civil Servants who had entered the service before the passing of the Act from promotion examinations.

THE DEPARTMENTS.

Sir J. MACDONALD introduced a bill as to the Finance Department and the Treasury Board. In reply to Mr. Mills, he said that he would explain the limits of the different departments when the bill for their reorganization was being discussed.

INTEREST.

Mr. LANDRY introduced a bill to limit interest to 7 per cent.

LOAN COMPANIES.

Mr. MULOCK, on the second reading of the Freehold Loan and Savings Co., pointed out that too extensive powers of borrowing were asked, and it would be made a precedent.

Sir J. MACDONALD agreed in this view, After the second reading the bill was referred to the Committee on Banking and Commerce.

TARIFF CHANGES.

The House considered a number of items of the proposed tariff changes, with considerable discussion, which on the part of Opposition members was often quite apart from the subject.

Mr. CHARLTON and Mr. CASEY objected to the duty on stereotype plates, maintaining that it was an advantage that the type for Canadian journals should be set by United States printers.

Mr. BOWELL said the duty on these plates was not only to protect Canadian type foundries, but also Canadian compositors, whose work was taken from them by the foreign labor on these imported plates.

Mr. WELCH and others opposed the duty on fertilizers.

Mr. CLAYES wanted the strength of the ingredients shown on the package. He made a general attack upon the N. P.

The duty on fertilizers was dropped.

The iron items were allowed to stand after considerable discussion.

Mr. PATERSON (Brant) discussed them by talking about his candy shop, the public debt, and other matters.

MR. PARNELL'S HEALTH.

Mr. Gladstone Anxious—The Irish Leader's Health Not Good.

NEW YORK, May 17.—Justin McCarthy, M. P., telegraphs the Herald as follows anent his recent visit to Mr. Gladstone:—

"I found Mr. Gladstone full of anxiety about the health of Mr. Parnell, and he dwelt on the value of Parnell's life just now, not only to Ireland, but to England, too. I have seen Mr. Parnell since his return from Dublin, the day before yesterday (Thursday.) I believe he is better so far as his bronchial attack is concerned, but his general health is far from good. He has aged sadly of late. He is still a young man, but he looks stooped and old and wasted. Ten years ago—even five years ago—he stood like a young athlete in the strife. It is the old story—the sword has worn out the scabbard. Parnell is giving his life for Ireland as certainly as if he were sacrificing it for her on a battlefield. Of course he is greatly missed by his colleagues, but we wish to spare him all we can, as he is not given to sparing himself. Besides, at this moment, with the Coercion bill in committee, the debates are such as can best be dealt with by clever, skilful lawyers, well acquainted with the practical administration of the criminal law in Ireland."

Fate of the Informers.

NEW YORK, May 17.—A london despatch to the World says: "After the Phoenix Park trials and the subsequent execution of those convicted of the murder of Lord Frederick Cavendish and Mr. Burke, popular feeling against the informers ran so high that they were kept in prison to save their lives. The Government cast about the means whereby to get rid of such loathsome encumbrances, and finally secretly smuggled Kavanagh, Smith, Carey and Farrell out of the country to various colonies. News has just been received here of the fate of the four informers Kavanagh has been dead some time. He always drank hard, and after leaving Ireland he went from bad to worse and finally succumbed to delirium tremens. Smith died under much the same circumstances as Kavanagh. Carey has done remarkably well and is in prosperous circumstances in one of the colonies. Farrell is also doing well in another of the colonies."

Gold and Silver.

Silver, in its relative value to gold has varied greatly at different times. In the days of patriarch Abraham it was eight to one; B. C. 1000 it was twelve to one; B. C. 500 it was thirteen to one; at the commencement of the Christian era it was nine to one: A. D. 500 it was eighteen to one; in 1100 it was eight to one; in 1400 it was eleven to one; in 1545 it was six to one; in 1551 it was two to one; in 1600 it was ten to one; in 1777 it was thirteen to one; in 1800 it was fifteen and a half to one. It maintained the latter ratio until 1872, when it began to rise, and in 1876 it attained to twenty to one, it soon after gradually declined, then advanced again, and on the first day of August, 1886, reached the highest point ever known, which time it has gradually declined to twenty to one.—The American Banker.

HIS GRACE REMAINS FIRM.

He Still Has the Same Opinion of the Visit and of Lord Lansdowne.

A representative of the World called on His Grace Archbishop Lynch on Tuesday evening to enquire whether, in view of the large audiences which have greeted Mr. O'Brien in his tour so far, he had changed the opinion which he first formed of Mr. O'Brien's mission.

"I am more than ever confirmed in the opinion that Mr. O'Brien, notwithstanding the righteousness of his cause, made a serious blunder in coming here to attack the Governor-General," replied His Grace. "My whole aim in life was to allay the feeling between Catholics and Protestants, and we were getting along so nicely that both the Dominion Parliament and Local Legislature passed strong resolutions favorable to Home Rule and the Irish cause. But Mr. O'Brien's unwise course will very largely neutralize the effect of the resolutions of sympathy and awaken an unkind feeling between Catholics and Protestants, and poor Ireland will be the sufferer from this impolitic move. It is quite true that Mr. O'Brien was greeted with large audiences, but that will be productive of very little good, in comparison to the injury done through the alienation of former friends. Large audiences are often the result of curiosity. When we got the expression of sympathy from the representives of the people, that it was a great gain acquired in the cause of a suffering people. My views of the Marquis of Lansdowne are already known through my letter. I believe him to be an exorbitant and tyrannical landlord, not withstanding that a few of his tenants, who are made special pets by His Lordship give him a certificate for generosity. Mr. O'Brien's statement of the cruelty inflicted on the Luggacurron estate is quite correct. Lord Lansdowne borrowed money at one per cent. from the Government and lent it out at five per cent. to his tenants. I did not pay my respects to him since he came to Toronto, because my nature revolts against shaking hands with the oppressor of the poor, as I believe him to be."—Toronto World.

FRENCH CABINET CRISIS.

Retrenchment Resolutions Carried—The Government Resign.

PARIS, May 17.—The debate on the report of the Budget Committee, which demands a reduction in the estimates submitted by the Government, was begun in the Chamber of [illegible]

M. Dauphin, Minister of Finance, declared that in their proposals the Government had effected all the retrenchments that were possible, and had re-established the financial equilibrium through the income and alcoholic taxes. The country knew that the Government were acting more in consonance with Parliamentary tradition than was the course suggested in the report of the Budget Committee. (Applause from the Left and part of the Centre.)

M. Rouvier said the committee could not accept the Government's proposals for increased taxation and expenditures.

Premier Goblet said the present financial situation was the result of the accumulated errors of past governments. He was ready to work with a committee with a view of providing efficacious remedies. The Government desired to balance the budget, even by fresh taxation if necessary. He reproached the committee with demanding reforms which it knew to be impracticable from a budget point of view. (Cries of dissent.) He found nothing that justified the committee's hostility either in the Government's internal policy or in its foreign policy, neither of which was lacking in wisdom and firmness. He was ready to co-operate again with the committee or to leave office as the Chamber might decide. (Applause.)

The Chamber, by a vote of 275 to 259, rejected the proposals of the Government and proceeded to discuss the order of the day.

M. Goblet then announced that the Cabinet would resign. As soon as this announcement had been made the members of the Cabinet left the House.

Afterwards a resolution was proposed by the Budget Committee, affirming the necessity of adopting new plans for retrenchment. The resolution was then adopted by a vote of 312 to 143, and the Chamber adjourned then until Monday next.

Premier Goblet in an interview with President Grevy to-day, tendered the resignation of himself and colleagues, which was accepted.

Orders taken for the finest kinds of custom made boots to be had in Canada for both gentlemen and ladies at Kidd's.

Elopement Frustrated.

WINDSOR May 17.—Yesterday the police received a despatch from Mr. Richard Smith, of Ingersoll, instructing them to board the express on the Grand Trunk road and take his daughter in custody. On Saturday a Chicago real estate agent named Jas. Sharon put in an appearance at Ingersoll, and there met Miss Florence Smith, an attractive young girl of 16. Yesterday he succeeded in inducing her to elope with him to Detroit, promising to marry her on their reaching American soil. When the police boarded the train they found the couple in a private room of the Pullman with the door locked. The door was forced and the pair taken to the Crawford house. The young woman was held until the arrival of her parents last night. Miss Smith will be taken back to-day, and her parents will allow Sharon to skip to Chicago or anywhere else.

Enjoy Life.

What a truly beautiful world we life in! Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health, but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof, that Green's August Flower, will make them free from disease, as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy-five per cent. of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the Head, Palpitation of the Heart, and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it. d90

LATEST CABLE NEWS

THE IRISH SECRETARIES.

LONDON, May 17.—When the credit for the civil service came up for consideration in the House of Commons last evening, Mr. Dillon led in the attack upon the appointments of Mr. Balfour and Colonel King-Harman, charging the former with incompetence, neglect of duty and contemptuous treatment of the Parnellites. Mr. Dillon was supported by Mr. Campbell-Bannerman, Mr. Fowler and Mr. Harrington. Mr. Balfour replied that it was a difficult thing to please the Parnellites, who complained that his salary was too large, while Colonel King-Harman received no salary at all, and that he knew nothing about Ireland, while Col. King-Harman knew too much. Mr. Smith defended the appointments. The subject then dropped.

CANADA'S FRIENDS IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, May 17.—The Princess Louise accompanied the Marquis of Lorne at the opening of the Liverpool exhibition to-day. They inspected the Canadian section, expressed their approbation of the Canadian agricultural and mineral exhibits and their continued interest in the progress of Canada.

NEWFOUNDLAND BAIT BILL.

LONDON, May 17.—The Queen has just given her formal assent to the Newfoundland Bait Bill. It is understood that the Imperial Government gave assurances to the French Government last autumn that the French fishermen should not be interfered with during 1887. In fulfilment of the pledge, the bill will not be in operation till next year. The demands of Newfoundland delegates are thus satisfied.

SENSATION CREATED.

LONDON, May 17.—Sir George Otto Trevelyan, speaking at the banquet of the Eighty Club last nigh, strongly condemned the Coercion Bill as unjust and unfair to the Irish people. He believed that there were not more than twenty Liberal Commoners who desired to exclude the Irish members from Westminster, and that there was not one of those twenty who was not willing to give up the point in order to secure the return of Lord Hartington to the Liberal ranks. He taunted Lord Salisbury with having taken office with the help of the Parnellite vote in the face of Mr. Forster's accusation against Mr. Parnell of complicity in crime, an accusation of as great gravity as the charges of the Times. He concluded by declaring that the Liberals wanted the Unionists to rejoin their old party and would pay an honorable price to get them back. The speech created a sensation in the lobbies of Parliament. The Home Rulers regard it as a triumph for their cause.

WAR PREPARATIONS.

The Reichstag Committee by a vote of 19 to 6 has adopted the first clause of the Brandy Tax Bill. This signifies the passage of the whole bill.

GETTING WARM.

LONDON, May 17.—The editor of Vanity Fair says: "I met an Irish friend the other day who had been on a flying visit to his distressed fatherland. In reply to my enquiry as to how he found things going on over there he said. They are getting very warm indeed. Men are standing about the towns and villages all day long with their hands in their pockets and their backs against the wall, discussing the coercion bill, and waiting for the bloodshed to commence."

ONTARIO'S REAL ESTATE.

The determination of Canada to adopt the policy of manufacturing her own iron, besides its direct advantages, will have one incidental effect of the greatest importance. It must inevitably increase the value of our iron mines, which hitherto have been a very speculative and little esteemed property. Now this increased value will be a gain to Ontario and to its people. The real estate of the Province is rendered more valuable, and the community is enriched by this part of its property being rendered available instead of lying dormant. Ontario still possesses extensive iron mines in its Crown lands, though unfortunately much of this valuable property has been sacrificed, almost given away, through the improvidence and wastefulness of the shortsighted administrators of our affairs. Now, however, there can be no excuse for any further reckless appropriation of our valuable property for an inadequate compensation. Playing into the hands of would-be monopolists should be at once discontinued. The Provincial Government should be held to a strict account if after the Budget speech was delivered at Ottawa it shall be found that it has alienated a single acre of our Crown lands containing iron ore for any inadequate price, unless it has been already granted. For instance, Mr. Coe and his associates should be prevented from carrying out any more of their clandestine purchases in the County of Hastings on such favorable terms for them, and with such an advantage over less favoured competitors, that the Ministry did not dare to give a full account of their dealings with our public property, but kept back the information, even when ordered by the House to furnish it. Indeed there should be no hasty sales at the present juncture to mere speculators. The value of our property is enhanced and the people of Ontario should reap the benefit, not speculative individuals with friends at court.

It seems odd and unaccountable that the opponents of a duty on coal should almost always betray the grossest ignorance of the subject when they discuss it. The red-hot Grit antagonists of the coal tax always ignore the plain fact that the coal owners have made an allowance to meet the duty at least in part. And even the Toronto Telegram with its more moderate antagonism does not know which kind of coal has just been placed upon the free list. It says:

"It would be more satisfactory to the general public if the tax on hard coal were removed as well as the tax on soft. Soft coal is largely used by manufacturers and the removal of the duty will to them be acceptable. But the great multitude who look back at their coal bill for the winter just over will wish that Sir Charles Tupper could have seen his way to running his pen through the duty on hard coal as well. The winter's coal bill is to all too many, especially in the cities, a serious item in the household expenditure. In the country districts there is not so much coal used, hardwood being easy to get. There should be no tax on the primary necessaries of life," etc.

This is all wrong. The duty has been removed from hard coal not from soft. As to the effect on prices, we will see.

Just after Canada has placed anthracite coal on the free list there comes a despatch from Philadelphia that:—

"The suspension of coal mining in the anthracite region has been ordered to begin on Monday, 23rd May, and to continue one week. The object of the shut down is to relieve the surplus of anthracite coal at tide-water shipping points, which amounts to between 6000,000 and 100,000 tons."

Now, we do not maintain that this restriction of the supply has for its object to make "a corner" and keep up the price for Canada in spite of the repeal of the duty, though undoubtedly it will have that tendency. What we wish is to call attention to the fact that the Pennsylvanian anthracite coal mines are in the hands of a clique, who can control their output and fix their prices for any locality at their own will and pleasure. They paid the Canadian duty (by an allowance on the price) in order to avoid competition, and now they are free to put that amount in their own pocket or make us a present of it. We cannot be sure which they will do, but we have a shrewd suspicion.

The Montreal Herald wishes to know why Mr. Curran does not proceed with his threatened action against certain newspapers that calumniated him. Probably the reason is that some of these journals have eaten their own words, have been frightened into the withdrawal of their slanders, as the following extract from the Ottawa Free Press will show:—

"The Montreal Post, which first charged Mr. Curran, M.P., with procuring the removal of laborers from the Lachine canal, has withdrawn its statements so far as that gentleman is concerned. As the remarks of the Free Press were based upon the statements made by the Post and other papers, and as Mr. Curran has denied their accuracy, we have pleasure in retracting anything published in these columns relating to Mr. Curran's alleged connection with the matter."

Perhaps Mr. Curran will attend to the Herald in due time.

The removal of the duty on anthracite coal was a surprise to all. No one seemed to expect it. Iron being dearer and coal no cheaper, the cost of iron goods generally will necessarily be increased. The agricultural implement makers say, however, that there is such keen competition in their line that they will not be able to raise the price. —Brockville Recorder

Reformers stated that the duty on coal increased its price. Now that the duty is removed they say that coal will be no cheaper. The statement of the Recorder that the price of agricultural implements will not be raised does not square with the appeals made to the farmers on the ground that the price of such implements will be higher.

He was the auther of the Welsh lines to which the late Brinley Richards composed the music known as "God Bless the Prince of Wales," and he was styled the Robert Burns of Wales. He was manager of the Nan Railway, Montgomeryshire.

The sitting of the English Presbyterian Synod were held in Manchester last month, when it was stated that the Church consisted in 1886 of 286 congregations and 61,781 communicants, giving an average of 216. It was decided that the next Synod should be held at Newcastle-on-Tyne.

WAIT AND SEE.

The Peterborough REVIEW, however, cannot take a sharp turn quite so suddenly, and continues to maintain that the producer does not pay the (coal) duty, which is a great deal more creditable to its consistency than to ite common sense.—Toronto News (Indep.).

JESS.

BY H. RIDER HAGGARD

Author of "King Solomon's Mines," "She," et

"Well, Capt. Niel," said the old man, "up already! It looks well if you mean to take to farming. Yes, it's a pretty view, and a pretty place, too. Well, I made it. Twenty-five years ago I rode up here and saw this spot. Look, you see that rock there behind the house, I slept under it and woke at sunrise and looked out at this beautiful view and at the great veldt (it was all alive with game then), and I said to myself, 'Silas, for five and twenty years have you wandered about this great country, and now you are getting tired of it; you've never seen a fairer spot than this or a healthier; now be a wise man and stop here.' And so I did. I bought 3,000 morgen (6,000 acres), more or less, for £10 down and a case of gin, and I set to work to make this place, and you see I have made it. Ay, it has grown under my hand, every stone and tree of it, and you know what that means in a new country. But one way and another I have done it, and now I have got too old to manage it, and that's how I came to give out that I wanted a partner, as old Snow told you down in Durban. You see, I told Snow it must be a gentleman; I don't care much about the money, I'll take a thousand for a third share if I can get a gentleman—none of your Boers or mean whites for me. I tell you, I have had enough of Boers and their ways; the best day of my life was when old Shepstone ran up the Union Jack there in Pretoria and I could call myself an Englishman again. Lord! and to think that there are men who are subjects of the queen and want to be subjects of a republic again! Mad! Capt. Niel, I tell you, quite mad! However, there's an end of it all now. You know what Sir Garnet Wolseley told them in the name of the queen up at the Vaal river, that this country would remain English till the sun stood still in the heavens and the waters of the Vaal ran backward. That's good enough for me, for, as I tell these grumbling fellows who want the land back now that we have paid their debts and defeated their enemies, no English government goes back on its word, or breaks engagements solemnly entered into by its representatives. We leave that sort of thing to foreigners. No, no, Capt. Niel, I would not ask you to take a share in this place if I wasn't sure that it would remain under the British flag. But we will talk of all this another time, and now come in to breakfast."

After breakfast, as John was far too lame to go about the farm, the fair Bessie suggested that he should come and help her to wash a batch of ostrich feathers, and, accordingly, off he went. The locus operandi was in a space of grass in the rear of a little clump of "naatche" orange trees, of which the fruit is like that of the Maltese orange, only larger. Here were placed an ordinary washing tub half filled with warm water and a tin bath full of cold. The ostrich feathers, many of which were completely coated with red dirt, were plunged first into the tub of warm water, where John Niel scrubbed them with soap, and then transferred to the tin bath, where Bessie rinsed them and then laid them on a sheet in the sun to dry. The morning was very pleasant, and John soon came to the conclusion that there are many more disagreeable occupations in the world than the washing of ostrich feathers with a lovely girl to help you; for there was no doubt but that she was lovely, a very type of happy, healthy womanhood, as she sat there opposite to him on the little stool, her sleeves rolled up almost to the shoulder, showing a pair of arms that would not have disgraced a statue of Venus, and laughed and chatted away as she washed the feathers. Now, John Niel was not a susceptible man; he had gone through the fire years before and burned his fingers like many another confiding youngster; but, all the same, he did wonder as he sat there and watched this fair girl, who somehow reminded him of a rich rosebud bursting into bloom, how long it would be possible to live in the same house with her without falling under the spell of her charm and beauty. And then he began to think of Jess, and what a strange contrast the two were.

"Where is your sister?" he asked presently.

"Jess! Oh, I think that she has gone to the Lion Kloof, reading or sketching, I don't know which. You see, in this establishment I represent labor and Jess represents intellect," and she nodded her head prettily at him, and added, "There is a mistake somewhere; she got all the brains."

"Ah," said John, quietly, and looking up at her, "I don't think that you are entitled to complain of the way that nature has treated you."

She blushed a little, more at the tone of his voice than the words, and went on hastily: "Jess is the dearest, best and cleverest woman in the whole world—there, I believe that she has only one fault, and that is that she thinks too much about me. Uncle told me that he had told you how we came here first when I was 8 years old. Well, I remember that when we lost our way on the veldt that night, and it rained so and was so cold, Jess took off her own shawl and wrapped it round me over my own. Well, it has been just like that with her always. I am always to have the shawl—everything is to give way to me. But there, that is Jess all over; she is very cold, cold as a stone, I sometimes think, but when she does care for anybody it is enough to frighten one. I don't know a great number of women, but somehow I don't think that there can be many in the world like Jess. She is too good for this wild place, she ought to go away to England, write books and become a famous woman, only," she added, reflectively, "I am afraid that Jess' books would all be sad ones."

Just then Bessie stopped and suddenly changed color, the bunch of lank, wet feathers she held in her hand dropping from it with a little splash back into the bath. Following her glance, John looked down the avenue of blue gum trees and perceived a big man with a broad hat and mounted on a splendid black horse, cantering leisurely toward the house.

"Who is that, Miss Croft?" he asked.

"It is a man I don't like," she said, with a little stamp of her foot. "His name is Frank Muller, and he is half a Boer and half an Englishman. He is very rich and very clever, and owns all the land round this place, so uncle has to be civil to him, though he does not like him either. I wonder what he wants now."

No "hardly ever" about it. He had an attack of what people call "biliousness," and to smile was impossible. Yet a man may "smile and smile, and be a villain still," still he was no villain, but a plain, blunt, honest man, that needs a remedy such as Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," which never fail to cure biliousness and diseased or torpid liver, dyspepsia and chronic constipation. At druggists.

The Daily Review.

WEDNESDAY, MAY 18, 1887.

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

Cricket.

The Orillia cricket club will be organized for this season on Wednesday evening, May 25th.

Explanation.

J. J. Sheehy's card to the public appears in this edition of the REVIEW on the first page.

Queen's Birthday.

Steamer Golden-Eye will give a trip to Idyl-Wild. Dancing on scow and at Idyl-Wild. Good Regatta. One chance for $50 sewing machine; all for 50c. on 24th May.

Appeals.

The Town Clerk received about fifty appeals against assessment through the Post Office this morning. These, together with those already in, will be tried by the Court of Revision.

No one need despair of finding millinery to suit them while Turnbull is in the trade. He keeps a well selected stock of choice goods, and as new lines appear in the market has new shapes and trimmings arriving almost daily.

Waterworks.

Messrs. Robinson and Coulter have run a line of pipes from the waterworks main on George street down Edinburg street to their residences, so that they may be able to get water for use on their lawns.

A. O. E.

Lansdowne Lodge, No. 25, S. O. E., will attend Matins at St. John's Church in a body on Sunday morning, May 22nd, at 11 o'clock. A sermon will be preached by the Rev. E. W. Sibbald, of Belleville, the Most Worthy Grand Chaplain of the Order.

Are you a bargain seeker? Call at Turnbull's and see his beautiful Cretonnes at 10 cents a yard.

Rich Harmony.

We would recommend our readers to secure reserved seats at A. L. Davis & Co's for the concert on next Thursday evening in the Opera House, price 50 cents. This will be a concert that no lover of rich harmony should miss.

Miss Mittie Fraine.

The Ottawa Journal says:—"Miss Fraine's rendition of very difficult selections were such as to show her to be an elocutionist of the first order." Don't fail to hear her in the Y. M. C. A. Hall on Friday evening. Tickets, 25c.

Turnbull's mammoth store is in its new summer dress, decked with lace flouncings and embroideries, lace Grenadines, lace gloves and parasols, lace curtains and pillow shams, etc., etc. For new and handsome goods this is the right house.

Port Hope, Too.

Port Hope is negotiating with Mr. R. S. Williams for the removal of his piano factory from Toronto to Port Hope. The matter is in the hands of a committee of the Town Council. The committee met on Tuesday, and the Times says that the culmination of the negotiations may be looked for ere long.

Service of Praise.

The Service of Praise which was rendered with such success at St. Paul's Church on Monday, 9th of May, will be repeated in the George Street Church, on Thursday evening, May 26th, under the direction of Mr. Parker. Admission free, silver collection. It is to be hoped that all who did not hear this really fine entertainment, will avail themselves of this opportunity.

A New Paper.

The North Ontario Times, published at Uxbridge, is a new candidate for public favor. It is an eight page weekly paper, neatly and clearly printed. Its appearance is certainly prepossessing and alone would be enough to commend it, but besides it gives a large quantity of local news, pays attention to general news and has readable editorials on current questions. It should be a very successful venture, and we hope it will.

Personal.

The friends of Homœopathy will be glad to learn that Dr. Shaw, a duly qualified and experienced Homœopathic Physician, has decided to locate at Peterborough. The docter has been eight years in practice, and though a graduate of McGill College, is a thorough Homœopathist. He comes highly recommended by Drs. John Hurl, of Toronto, Logan, of Ottawa, and Husband & Vernon, of Hamilton. He may be consulted for the present at the Grand Central Hotel.

An army of bright ladies and children buy their hosiery at Turnbull's. Why? Because he shows a large stock, fresh from the largest factory in Germany, and sells them very cheap.

QUEEN'S JUBILEE.

Proposed Programme to Celebrate the Event.

A meeting of the representatives of the various Societies of the town was held on Tuesday evening for the purpose of arranging for the Queen's Jubilee celebration.

The Rev. W. C. Bradshaw was called to the chair and Mr. C. Alliston was elected Secretary.

The Rev. Mr. Bradshaw, Mr. Wm. Brundrette, D. D. Gallelty and Mr. F. W. Miller addressed the meeting.

After some discussion it was decided that the representatives of the Societies here present should decide upon the celebration of the Jubilee on June 21st and arrange the details.

The programme was discussed at length and the following proposal arrived at. The 57th Battalion, the Peterborough troop of Cavalry and this Division of the Durham Field Battery are to be invited to turn out at 10 a. m., to parade the principal streets and go through various evolutions. This will occupy the time till 12 at noon.

At 2 p.m. a procession consisting of the various societies in uniform, the Fire Brigade in uniform, and the citizens and school children wearing Jubilee badges, will march from the drill shed to the grounds (to be arranged for), and a grand choral concert will be held, the school children singing the Jubilee hymns. These hymns will be procured and furnished to the superintendent of each Sunday school, who will have charge of their respective flocks. The school children will be all brought together for rehearsal under Mr. F. W. Miller's leadership several times before the 21st of June.

As it is proposed to hold a regatta and sports, it is probable that Burnham's Point will be the grounds chosen, that being the most convenient place. After the choral singing the sports will take place, and when that programme is ended the regatta will take place on the Little Lake. The children are to be furnished with refreshments during the afternoon.

In the evening the town will be illuminated, and a grand illuminated canoe parade will take place on the Little Lake.

The following committees were appointed to look after the work assigned to them:—

MILITARY COMMITTEE.—Messrs. McNeil, Bradshaw and Long.

MUSIC COMMITTEE.—Messrs. Millar, Gallelty and Fraser.

PROCESSION COMMITTEE.—Messrs. Brundette, T. Rutherford and Geo. Hall.

CANOE COMMITTEE.—Messrs. Yokome, Kidd and Allisson.

GAMES COMMITTEE.—Messrs. Rutherford, Kidd and Richardson.

PRINTING COMMITTEE.—Messrs. Menzies, Macdonald and Fanning.

REFRESHMENT COMMITTEE.—Messrs. Richardson, Wilson and Brundette.

GROUNDS COMMITTEE.—Messrs. Bradshaw, Brundette and Macdonald.

DECORATION AND ILLUMINATION COMMITTEE.—Messrs. Long, Jones and Hall.

FINANCE COMMITTEE.—The Chairman of the various committees with Mr. Brundette chairman.

Messrs. W. Brundette, Geo. Hall and D. D. Gallelty were appointed to wait upon the Town Council and the Village Council of Ashburnham to request grants towards defraying expenses.

The Committee.

The Oddfellows Demonstration Committee will meet for the transaction of important business this evening.

Terrier Lost.

The Rev. Father Keilty, of Ennismore, has lost a terrier, which he values so highly that the finder will be liberally rewarded.

Peterborough Driving Park.

The Secretary is getting entries for the great event of the 24th of May, the Queen's Birthday. The races will, no doubt, under the energetic management of the Association, be a great success.

Accident.

Mrs. Eason, of Allendale, while getting into a buggy at Heenan's Temperance House, Hunter street, on Tuesday afternoon, fell and broke her left arm a little above the wrist. She was taken to Dr. Brennan's surgery, where the bone was set.

Golden grain of truth. Turnbull is selling ladies Taffeta and pure silk gloves that are cut to fit the hand. Every pair numbered. You will not regret having walked an extra block after you have tried a pair.

St. John's Church.

There will be service in this church this evening at 7.30 it being the Eve of Ascension Day, and on to-morrow, Ascension Day, two celebrations of the Holy Communion, 8.30 a. m. and 11 a. m. On Sunday next, 22nd inst., there will be collections for Domestic Missions at all services.

Good Opening.

The following advertisement is clipped from an English publication: "One or two decidedly Christian men will be received into a Christian family in New Zealand and educated in farming, but they must be industrious and will be required to pay £60 the first year." Farmers here are not quite so particular.

Art Union.

Mr. H. LeBrun has again been lucky in drawing a valuable prize, in the London Art Union drawing. He has now drawn three valuable prizes. The one he has now drawn is valued at £40 sterling (about $200) which may be selected out of a number of paintings. Mr. R. H. Fortye drew a £20 prize. The paintings will be selected in due time and sent to the lucky recipients.

Peterborough Talent.

Mr. Thos. Dunn has received a communication from St. Catharines, asking him to take the leading baritone part in a cantata which is to be presented to the public at the Jubilee celebration in St. George's Church, on June 21st.

Muldoon Alive Yet.

Mr. Alex Elliott, who is now travelling in California, has written to a friend here that he is in good health and enjoying his trip. He also intimates that Mr. Jim Dolan, the Muldoon of Madoc, is looking "fine and healthy" and is getting fat in the "glorious climate of Californy." The latter impresses the young ladies of the West just the same as the madiens of Paris and London.

Kidd has an eagle from the sky down to his window; $5.00 kid boots down to $4.00, down to $.300, down to $2.50, down, down, down!

Capt. Brennan's Successor.

Capt. Brennan's successor as Lieutenant of No. 5 Company will be Color-Sergeant Scrimmager, of D Company of the Midland Battalion, which took part in suppressing Riel's rebellion. While in the Northwest the new officer was given three separate appointments—Color-Sergeant of his own Company, Sergeant-Major of the Saskatchewan detachment, and Hospital Sergeant of the Regiment when assembled before Fort Pit and Frog Lake. In all of his duties his services were very efficient, giving great satisfaction to the commanding officer.

Your chance to-day to secure the best value in Ladies Jerseys even shown in Peterborough. Sheppard is now offering some beautiful goods in black and colors at fully 50 per cent. less than wholesale prices.

Senator Sherman on Reciprocity.

NEW YORK, May 17.—U. S. Senator Sherman, an ex-Secretary of the Treasury, has written to Erastus Wiman on the question of Reciprocity between the United States and Canada. In his communication Mr. Sherman says:—"No question of mare importance in our foreign relations is now presented than this. It is certainly an object of desire to remove all existing controversies and to encourage business and commercial intercourse between the people of both countries. As to the particular measure proposed by Mr. Butterworth, or indeed as to the extent to which reciprocity should go and the articles that should be admitted free of duty in the respective countries, I do not feel justified in expressing an opinion, for these must be the subject of negotiations between and legislation upon by the two countries. I can only say that the general object sought seems to be one of the highest importance, creditable alike to both countries, and which will receive my careful and friendly consideration during the coming summer. It would be discreditable in the highest degree for two countries having so many interests in common and natural ties of friendship and amity to have any irritation or controversy about their trade and intercourse with each other."

On April 27th the annual meeting of the Scottish Temperance League came to a close in Glasgow. In the forenoon Sir William Collins took the chair. He referred to the recent liquor-traffic plebiscite, and said it showed that the people of Glasgow were prepared for prohibition, and he urged that the wishes of the people ought to be given effect to by Parliament. The income for the last twelve months amounted to £6,668.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC

FROM

J. J. SHEEHY

I beg to say that contrary to announcements which appeared in the Peterborough papers for the past two months, I DO NOT intend to remove to T. Dolan & Co's Dry Goods Store, nor have I any connections whatever with that establishment. The final arrangements not being satisfactory to me, I withdrew from the projected change, and intend carrying on the Dry Goods business in my usual stand next to Loch's Hat Store.

It is my intention in the future as in the past to show at all seasons nothing but new and fresh goods in the various lines of Dry Goods and Gent's Furnishings; and by doing so, hope to retain the confidence which I am proud to say, I have enjoyed from the public since commencing business two years ago.

MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT.

Restriction of Municipal Rights by Mr. Mowat's Centralizing Policy.

In commenting upon Mr. J. G. Bourinot's historical sketch of the establishment of municipal institutions in Canada, the Hamilton Spectator concludes with a good suggestion. It says:—

"It is clear, however, that the so-called reform government of Ontario is now retrograding and taking from the people many powers formerly conferred upon them. The apology for the exercises of autocratic authority was that the people were not wise enough to manage their own affairs, and that they would be much better off under the paternal rule of a monarch strong enough to preserve tranquility and wise enough to so order things as to secure the greatest good to the greatest number. Mr. Mowat puts forward the same apology. The people of Hamilton are not wise enough to manage their police, to license taverns, or even to regulate market fees; and the Toronto autocrat thinks a little paternal rule will secure the greatest good to the greatest number. Mr. Bourinot would confer a favor upon the people if he would supplement the work he has already done by preparing a short history of the restrictions upon and substractions from the municipal rights of the people of Ontario during the past 15 years."

FESTIVITIES IN LONDON.

A Week of Gaiety—Jubilee Fancy Dress Ball.

LONDON, May 18.—This is a week of gaiety. Last evening there was a grand state ball at Buchingham Palace, to-day the Queen's fourth drawing room and this evening Lady Hamilton, wife of the admiralty secretary, will give a cabinet ball. On Thursday Mrs. Mackay, wife of the American millionaire, has a musical soiree; on Friday many guests, after attending the reception of Mrs. Phelps, wife of the U. S. minister, will drive to the ball of the Duchess of Leeds and on Saturday the Prince of Wales holds a levee at St. James' Palace in behalf of the Queen.

The Jubilee fancy dress ball of the Royal institute of water color painters last evening was a grand affair. Soon after eleven o'clock music and the presentation of pikes by the array of halberdiers at the doorway announced the arrival of members of the royal family, including the Prince and Princess of Wales, she wearing a light grey silk, trimmed with dark grey velvet—and their daughters, Victoria and Maud, escorted by their uncle the Crown Prince of Denmark. The tableax were on a scale of unparalleled magnificence.

More Gold.

We are pleased to be able to report the recent discovery of a valuable deposit of gold in the region of Tomogaming. When studying the nature of the rock formation in which the silver minss of Messrs. Holditch and Cockburn are located in the same region, we were convinced that additional discoveries of the precious metals would soon be made in the vicinits of Tomogaming, but we were not prepared to hear of a discovery such as that which has been reported this week. The newly-discovered mine is the property of Mr. P. A. Ferguson, of Mattawa, and Mr. J. Daverhill, of Montreal. It is located on the shore of Lake Tomogaming, distant about 16 miles south on the Ottawa River, and embraces 195 miles of land. A careful assay has been made of various samples of ore taken from the lodes uncovered, and an average of about $70 in gold per ton of rock has been obtained therefrom. We are informed that it is the purpose of the owners to commence mining operations in the month of June next. There can no longer be any doubt that the district of Nipissing abounds in very rich mineral deposits, which await discovery and development by our enterprising and industrious people.—Nipissing Times.

Addresses to Lord Lansdowne.

TORONTO, May 18.—Members of the Irish Protestant Benevolent Society, St. Andrew's Society and the Caledonian Society assembled at their respective rooms at 1.30 to-day and marched in procession to the government house, where an address was presented to His Excellency from each society. St. Andrew's and the Caledonian societies were preceded by pipers.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT

FIRST SESSION OF THE SIXTH CANADIAN PARLIAMENT.

Government Business—The Tariff Changes—Opposition Returns to Free Trade.

TUESDAY, May 17.—Some more private bills were introduced.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS.

Sir J. MACDONALD moved that Government business should take precedence of Thursdays.

Mr. MILLS objected as the Opposition wanted to discuss important questions.

Sir J. MACDONALD said there should be ample opportunity. The season was advancing and he believed the members would be glad to expedite business.

Mr. MITCHELL said the lateness of the season was the fault of the ministry for not having the elections last fall.

Sir J. MACDONALD said as the new Voters' Lists were not ready then he adopted the constitutional course of waiting for them.

THE TARIFF CHANGES.

The House considered the proposed tariff changes, nearly all those remaining being passed after various slight amendments to perfect them.

The Opposition members in the series of discussions returned with apparent unanimity to the old free trade position, attacking the N. P. and assailing Canadian manufacturers, as if they had not pretended at the general elections to swallow the principle of protection for home industries.

Messrs. CHARLTON, PATERSON, MILLS and JONES were the chief freetrade orators with the occasional assistance of Mr. Mitchell and others.

PORT HOPE.

A MISSING MILLER.—William H. Horton is well known in Port Hope, where for years he has lived and worked at his trade as a miller. He is a quiet, respectable man, with a wife and child; strictly temperate, and of good habits. On Monday he did not go to work, but was confined to his bed by a bilious attack. Yesterday morning he rose, intending to go to work at McCabe's mill, where he has been since December. At breakfast, he complained of a headache and a feeling of dizziness. Between half-past six and seven he left the house, and no one can be found who has since seen him. What direction he took, or what became of him, no one knows. At the mill his absence raised no comment, and not until Mrs. Horton, alarmed by the non-appearance of her husband to dinner, appeared about three o'clock. Since then enquiries have been made, and in a quiet way, what steps possible are being taken to find a clue. Horton is a comparatively young man about thirty two-years of age, is dark complexion with mustache and side whiskers, about medieum height and well though not stoutly built. He wore a black soft felt hat and a tweed sack coat of a "pepper and salt" sort of color; all his clothing was liberally sprinkled with flour and would proclaim his trade. He had no money with him nor does his wife think there would be found any paper to reveal his identity.—Times.

A Fresh Water Sea Serpent.

A special from Locust Point, on the shore of Lake Erie, near Toledo, Ohio, says:—French settlers along the lake shore, in Erie township, Ottawa county, a few miles east of here, were surprised and amazed last night over the appearance of an unknown fish of mammoth size. Two brothers named Dusseau, both fishermen, were returning from the fishing grounds, when they discovered a phosphorescent mass upon the beach. It was late in the evening, but they succeeded in making their boat fast to the shore, and, upon examination, discovered a lake monster writhing in agony. The brothers say that it was like a large sturgeon in shape, but that it had long arms, which it threw wildly in the air. While they were watching it the great fish apparently died, and the Dusseau boys, badly frightened, hurried away for aid. When they arrived with ropes the fish had disappeared. In its dying efforts it had succeeded in tumbling into the lake and had been carried away by the waves. The marks on the beach indicate that the serpent was between 20 and 30 feet in length. Several scales as large as silver dollars which were cast off were picked up.

Wheat Statistics

The visible supply of wheat has been reduced by 1,900,000 bushels in round figures during the past week. This is the largest decrease that has taken place in any one week during the year. But still the visible supply is at present larger than it was this time last year by several million bushels. Those who believe all they see about great shortages in England and France figure on the whole of the 44,000,000 of bushels being cleared out before the next crop begins to come in; but everybody is not so sanguine. Large decreases, however, may be looked for now that navigation has opened and that the time for heavy shipments to Europe has come. Thus far the shipments have not been equal to those of last year. According to Beerbohm's computation the amount on passage during the week ending May 11th was 19,416,000 bushels, as compared with 20,160,000 bushels during the same week last year.

Getting their Eyes Open.

A London Corn Circular puts the free trade in flour, thusly: "A. B., residing in Manchester, has two mills, one for the manufacture of flour, the other of cotton; the raw material for both is imported from America. When both are manufactured A. B. discovers that his flour is undersold by America (since it is admitted free of duty), whilst his cotton manufacture, exported to America is charged 25 to 30 per cent, 'ad valorum,' import duty—the consequence is that flour mill is practically closed for home consumption, and his cotton mill for American consumption, notwithstanding that the raw material for both are imported from thence."

THE IRISH QEESTION.

ROME, May 18.—The memoir on the Irish question prepared by the Irish college is entitled "Ireland As It Is." It explains the Parnellite policy and apologizes for the attitude of the Irish episcopacy, referring especially to Archbishop Walsh. The memoir is rather firm and uncompromising in tone, but not revolutionary. It is supposed Mgr. Kirby, rector of the college, consulted with the Vatican before issuing the document.

THE IMPERIAL INSTITUTE.

LONDON, May 18.—The perseverance of the Prince of Wales has prevailed and the Imperial Institute has at last satisfactorily turned the corner. All fears of a fiasco has departed and there is joy in Marlborough House and in Adam street. Up to Saturday last the United Kingdom contributed about $925,000 and Canada $100,000, while Australia promises nearly $500,000. Fresh lists are pouring in daily, and the Indian chiefs meditate making very large offerings by way of "nuzzur." All this it prints in the biggest type, believing, of course, it will do harm to the cause Mr. O'Brien advocates.

THE CRIMES BILL.

LONDON, May 17.—The debate on the Crimes bill was resumed in the House of Commons to-night. Sir William Vernon Harcourt moved an amendment exempting from secret inquiry all proceedings relating to public meetings or agrarian movements, including combinations to obtain reductions of rent. Mr. Balfour, Chief Secretary for Ireland, held that the offences embraced in the measure had been sufficiently defined, and that the amendment if adopted would simply render the bill futile, leaving out all or nearly all agrarian offences. Messrs. Dillon and Gladstone spoke briefly in favor of the amendment, which was finally negatived by a vote of 242 to 180.

THE WAR OFFICE SCANDAL.

LONDON, May 18.—The Royal Commission recently appointed to enquire into scandals affecting the War Office, which included allegations of collusion in the matter of contracting for small arms, whereby defective weapons were furnished at exorbitant prices and other irregularities, has prepared its report, which will shortly be submitted to Parliament. Canada's Iron Resources.

KINGSTON, May 18.—American capitalists interested in the mines along the line of the Kingston & Pembroke Railway visited their mineral property, of which they have 15,000 acres, and returned greatly impressed. They have taken heavy orders of railway stock, believing it to be a good investment. At a meeting for organization, Henry Seibert, of New York, was elected president, B. W. Folger, Kings on, vice-president, and Hon. D. L. Gibbons, New York, secretary-treasurer. An office will be opened here, and it is presumed that 100,000 tons will be shipped to Kingston before navigation closes. New machinery, systemised work and the procuring of experienced miners will be at once secured. The company has connections with the best iron men in the United States, and has orders for more ore than it can supply. The ore is the best in the world for Bessemeer steel purposes.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes "as bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhœa, whether arising from teething or other causes. 25 cents a bottle. Be sure and ask for "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup," and take no other kind.

The Daily Review.

THURSDAY, MAY 19, 1887.

NOT NEW.

In its remarks on the Budget speech the Montreal Witness says:—

"Sir Charles Tupper did, however, offer a new explanation of how it became necessary for Canada to adopt a high tariff. It appears that during the first seven years after the American civil war American manufacturers could not compete with Canadian ones because the American labor market was dislocated, but when it became thoroughly reorganized the competition killed our industries."

So far from being new this explanation was given over and over again by the advocates of the adoption of the N. P., but the Witness in its blind advocacy of free trade often shows itself singularly ignorant of the arguments of its opponents, and of the facts of the case. We, and scores of others who were battling for the encouragement of our home industries, asserted re-repeatedly that during the civil war in the United States and for some time afterwards the disturbance of the labor market, the interference with industries, the depreciation of paper money, the high interest and other cognate causes, resulting from that struggle, prevented importation from the States from crushing out our industries, and rendered our comparatively low tariff thus sufficiently protective. When it was found that the protection was not sufficient under changed circumstances, Canada very wisely raised its tariff to protect her own manufacturers and artisans. While the closet philosophers are theorizing upon free trade, practical statesmen devise a tariff that will support home industries in their competition with those of foreign countries, and at the same time secure a sufficient revenue chiefly from the well-to-do and luxurious. Our Canadian statesmen have been most successful in doing this, and hence the marvellous progress of the Dominion.

A CONTRIBUTORY STOREHOUSE.

In sending out invitations to a lecture to be delivered in New York by the Hon. B. Butterworth on Commercial Union between the United States and Canada, Mr. Erastus Wiman says:—

"Canada is one of the richest countries in the world in natural resources, and in her iron, copper and other minerals, as well as in her fisheries, timber, coal, phosphates, and other natural products, the United States have a storehouse from which could be drawn supplies greatly contributory to their progress."

This is very well from the United States point of view, but true-hearted Canadians prefer that Canada's rich natural resources shall be made to contribute to the progress of Canada. They do not believe that it is wise to sell our ores, timber, &c., at a cheap rate to foreigners, and then buy them back again at a far higher price, after these foreigners have had the profit of manufacturing them. They believe that Canadians are quite capable of utilizing the rich natural resources of Canada by manufacturing from the raw material the articles required by Canadians. They naturally wish the profit of such operations to accrue to Canadians, and do not wish that the Dominion should be merely contributory to the progress of the United States. This is the policy that has been adopted by the people of Canada, that has been repeatedly maintained by them, and that is now being applied to that most important industry the iron trade. It is a pity if this policy does not suit the people of the United States, or of those disloyal Canadians who prefer foreign to Canadian interests, but it must be admitted that the people of Canada are justified in looking after their own interests as they are doing.

WILL the Kingston Whig kindly read the whole of a paragraph in the REVIEW before criticising part of it? Mr. King has "appealed to the law courts as regards the Returning-Officer," of Queen, N. B., and we did not overlook his announcement that he would not appeal to the law courts as regards his right to the seat, as we commented upon it immediately after the words quoted by the Whig. The sneers of the Whig will not convince us that a man should not go to the courts if he wishes to obtain justice. It is the province of Parliament to make laws and of the courts to apply them. We believe the closer each keeps to its own province the better, especially in cases where party feelings may be excited in the Legislatures. If Mr. King is too poor to test such a very simple case in the courts, why do not his political friends take up a collection for him, as they did for the deposit money of moneyless candidates? The claim is apparently good, and unless there is some flaw in it the risk of loss would be small.

THE Grand Jury at Peterborough found in the gaol three idiots and five lunatics, who, by the curious anomaly of our system, are tricked out as criminals, though innocent of any offence. The custom appears to be universal, as statistics give the number of such cases in Ontario as 470 during the past year. To say such a system is a blot on our civilization is putting it mildly.—Stratford Beacon.

Is not our Reform contemporary a little astray in laying the blame entirely on the system? In Ontario the Province is expected to make provision for idiots and lunatics, and when that is not done, are not the administrators of the system, the Ontario Government, at fault? They boast of what they have done for the lunatics and idiots, but, as the Beacon admits, much is left undone.

Kidd has an eagle from the sky down to his window; $5.00 kid boots down to $4.00, down to $.300, down to $2.50, down, down, down!

FATHER DOWD.

A Glowing Tribute to the Venerable Priest From Rev. Gavin Lang.

The following letter has been published in the Montreal papers:

INVERNESS, Scotland, 29th April, 1887.

DEAR MR. MURPHY,—I see, in a recently received Montreal paper, the announcement of an impending celebration in honor and commemoration of the jubilee of the ministry of my old friend and neighbor, Father Dowd, of St. Patrick's Church. In that announcement, it is suggested that there should be an expression of sympathy on the occasion from brother clergymen of all creeds and persuasions. I earnestly hope that this suggestion will be acted upon by Protestants as well as Roman Catholics. Though no longer resident or labouring in Montreal, I feel a strong desire to offer my tribute of respect and best wishes for continued usefulness to the venerable priest, and I can think of no better way of conveying such, in order that they may be added to those of like character, than by asking you as one of his most prominent coadjutors, to do so in the manner and at the time you may think best.

Even the slightest reference to the name of good Father Dowd brings up many and various memories. I had occasion, more than once, to ask his advice upon public questions, and was always received with the most pleasing courtesy. I well remember the time of intense anxiety during the, as was supposed, perilous and disastrous voyage he made, now many years ago, en route to Rome, and the relief we all—all Montreal and Canada—felt when the new came that the travellers in the ship had been spoken at sea, and no worse fate had befain en them than the breaking of a shaft. Very thankfully the Star sent me a communication of the welcome tidings to St. Andrew's Church during the service, and, it being handed up to the pulpit, we joined in giving thanks, then and there, to Almighty God for his merciful preservation of our fellow citizens. Nor do I forget the season of suspense caused by the illness through which Father Dowd passed, and I have the most grateful recollection of the kind things he said when I left Montreal and returned to Scotland. Shortly before that, I had been anxious to hear one of the Redemptorist Fathers preach, and when I was looking about for a seat, he sent one of his officials to show me to one, which turned out to be that of my old friend, Dr. Hingston—a courtesy which was repeated at another service which I attended in St. Patrick's on St. Patrick's Day.

You will have many gatherings around Father Dowd at the jubilee celebration to render, in person, their desires for his prolonged life and increasing happiness. I will be with them in heart and spirit. Even before then, will you give him my kindest regards and with the same to yourself. Believe me, yours faithfully,

GAVIN LANG.
Late Minister of St. Andrew's Church (Church of Scotland), Montreal.

THE CRIMES BILL.

The Debate on Sir William Vernot Harcourt's Amendment.

LONDON, May 18.—In the course of the debate in the House of Commons on Sir William Vernon Harcourt's amendment to the Crime's Bill, Mr. Dillon said that unless the amendment was accepted the Government, by the terms of the bill, would be able to imprison everybody politically obnoxious to it. Landlords not receiving their rents might swear out an information for conspiracy against tenants, and persons who might be summoned to appear at a bogus enquiry could, for refusing to answer, be imprisoned as long as the Government chose to keep them incarcerated.

Mr. Gladstone said he deeply regretted that the Government had failed to recognize the justice of granting to the Irish tenant the same protection it gave to the English workman. What, he asked, did the Government mean by "boycotting?" Was intimidation included in the term or merely boycotting, leading to exclusive dealing? As to the remark of the Chief Secretary for Ireland that the Government would not yield to obstruction, the Opposition, he claimed, had a right to refuse to yield to tyranny.

Sir R. E. Webster, Attorney-General, says there was a wide distinction between an honest combination of workmen and a combination of those able to pay, and bringing into it an outside association to assist them in evading payment. The bill, he says, dealt solely with criminal conspiracy. It would be impossible to define the word "boycotting," but the offence called by that name was known, and there could be no danger or injustice in suppressing it.

Mr. T. P. O'Connor said the combinations of landlords, with the object of keeping rackrents up to the starvation point would be permitted, with the combination of tenants to defeat extortion was made criminal.

Sir William Vernon Harcourt's amendment was defeated.

The first clause of the bill having been disposed of, notice was given of the proposal of eighty amendments to the second clause, the chief one of which is to exempt combinations of tenants from the operation of the clause.

The various political parties have been actively at work arranging for meetings, for and against coercion, during the Whitsuntide recess, and nearly every prominent members of the House of Commons has one or more engagements to speak during that time. A series of mass meetings against coercion have been arranged to be held in Scotland, at which Mr. John Dillon, Mr. Thomas Sexton and Sir Charles Russell will speak.

THE Opposition members and journals are making a great outcry over the fiscal arrangements just adopted to establish in Canada the manufacture of the iron that we consume. In four or five years the benefit of this course will have become so obvious that we will have the same critics protesting that they would not dream of interfering with the iron duties to the detriment of a great Canadian industry. They will adopt the policy of the Conservatives and continue to abuse the Administration as before.

Kingston Labor Troubles.

KINGSTON, May 18.—The strike at Chown & Cunningham's foundry still continues. There is no work going on at the cotton mills. Yesterday the carders told the manager that they wanted an increase in wages. He did not give them a satisfactory answer before twelve o'clock. The men then decided to strike and went to their dinners. They did not return and will not do so until an increase of 15 per cent. in wages is granted.

O'Brien's Ottawa visit.

OTTAWA, May 18.—Mr. O'Brien's visit tomorrow is not rousing any excitement here. More interest attaches to the preparation for receiving Lord Lansdowne next week. It is likely that Mr. O'Brien will speak here without any molestation to an audience sympathizing with his views. The arrangements are that Mr. O'Brien will be met at the station by a deputation of the local National League and an address presented. The lecture at night will be held in the roller rink holding two thousand people. Admission will be by ticket. A banquet to him will be given at the close of the lecture.

OTTAWA! FAIR OTTAWA!

(Lines suggested by the view from Government Hill, Ottawa.)

Oh! would I had the wonderous power,
Ottawa! fair Ottawa!
The Muse's pen but for an hour,
To paint, if mortal hand can paint,
Thy charms, in lines however faint,
And thus make outside man acquaint
With Ottawa! fair Ottawa!

Thy noble river proud and grand,
Ottawa! fair Ottawa!
How pleasant on the banks to stand,
And see its bosom bearing down
To many a busy mart and town
Thy lordly woods thy valleys crown,
Ottawa! fair Ottawa!

The sacred music of thy falls,
Ottawa! fair Ottawa!
Sounds deep as when an angel calls,
And peaceful on the troubled soul,
The murmurs of their waters roll,
And calm desires that brook control,
Ottawa! fair Ottawa!

And waving forests far and wide,
Ottawa! fair Ottawa!
Of native chieftain long the pride,
With many a clearing now between,
Where hall and mansion proud are seen,
Lend new enchantment to the scene,
Ottaw! fair Ottawa!

Nor indu try has been behind,
Ottawa! fair Ottawa!
To add the tribute of mankind
To all the charms that nature gave,
Of sky and field and flower and wave,
Trade's busy train thy water's lave,
Ottawa! fair Ottawa!

And compact buildings stately rise,
Ottawa! fair Ottawa!
To light the eye with glad surprise—
Sure signs of comfort and content,
Of wise, confiding Government,
Where aid of thine own sons is lent,
Ottawa! fair Ottawa!

And to thy upward pointing spires,
Ottawa! fair Ottawa!
That guide the soul from low desires,
How sweet their aim to contemplate,
An antidote to passion's hate,
A balm to the disconsolate,
Ottawa! fair Ottawa!

Thy noble Legislative Hall,
Ottawa! fair Ottawa!
Eclipsing far and crowning all,—
Long may the nation's strengthened hands,
Submerging fell disunion's bands,
Lift high their land 'mid other lands,
Ottawa! fair Ottawa!

Oh! where's the city like to thee,
Ottawa! fair Ottawa!
'Tis not with us nor o'er the sea,
For out from Heaven's curtained sheen,
'Tis said a seraph fair was seen
To place the finger of a queen
On Ottawa! fair Ottawa!

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

A Special Meeting.

A special meeting of the Town Council is called for to-morrow evening.

Arrived.

The Harmony Male Quartette arrived in town to-day. Mrs. Chambers has been in town to-day and yesterday visiting friends.

Queen's Birthday.

Steamer Golden-Eye will give a trip to Idyl-Wild. Dancing on scow and at Idyl-Wild. Good Regatta. One chance for $50 sewing machine; all for 50c. on 24th May.

No one need despair of finding millinery to suit them while Turnbull is in the trade. He keeps a well selected stock of choice goods, and as new lines appear in the market has new shapes and trimmings arriving almost daily.

Peterborough Driving Park.

The Secretary is getting entries for the great event of the 24th of May, the Queen's Birthday. The races will, no doubt, under the energetic management of the Association, be a great success.

Queen's Jubilee.

As stated in yesterday's REVIEW the plan for celebrating the Queen's jubilee is a "proposed" scheme only. The details are not settled on yet. The Mr. Wilson mentioned as being on the Refreshment Committee should have been Mr. Wier.

Concert To-night.

The Harmony male quartette concert this evening in the Opera House, at which Mrs. Chambers will sing, no one should miss. The voices of the gentlemen are sweet, rich and well trained. Tickets and reserved seats at A. L. Davis & Co.

The Fire.

We are informed that several fully-developed individuals, and quite able to walk, jumped on the rear of the waggon as the horse was heading for the scene of the fire, and thus in a manner retarded the progress of the horses. Should this be repeated on a future occasion the Chief of the Department will prosecute them.

W. C. T. U.

The regular meeting of the "Y" was held on Tuesday afternoon in the W. C. T. U. Hall. Miss Edwards, President, occupied the chair. A Flower Committee was appointed, whose duty it is to carry flowers to the sick in the hospital and homes. Those willing to help in this delightful work will kindly leave their contributions (flowers) at the W. C. T. U Hall next Wednesday.

Your chance to-day to secure the best value in Ladies Jerseys even shown in Peterborough. Sheppard is now offering some beautiful goods in black and colors at fully 50 per cent. less than wholesale prices.

Friday Night.

Miss Mittie Fraine, elocutionist, will read the following among other pieces at the Y. M. C. A. Hall on Friday night: "First Settler's Story" (Will Carleton), "Flying Jim's Last Leap," "Creed of the Bells," "The Bishop and the Cow" (Towbridge), "The Prayer" (Charleton). Besides the readings several musical selections will be given by Miss Stephens and Mr. A. D. Browne. Tickets 25 cents.

Personal.

The Bishop of London arrived in town on Tuesday, and was the guest of the Bishop of Peterborough. They both left by the night train for Montreal to attend the golden jubilee of Father Dowd. In another column will be found an interesting letter from a prominent Protestant minister in connection with this celebration. Father Dowd has been a lifelong friend of Sir John Macdonald. We extend our congratulations and hope that the venerable priest may live to celebrate his diamond jubilee.

The friends of Homœopathy will be glad to learn that Dr. Shaw, a duly qualified and experienced Homœopathic Physician, has decided to locate at Peterborough. The doctor has been eight years in practice, and though a graduate of McGill College, is a thorough Homœopathist. He comes highly recommended by Drs. John Harl, of Toronto, Logan, of Ottawa, and Husband & Vernon, of Hamilton. He may be consulted for the present at the Grand Central Hotel.

Mr. Geo. D. Edwards, of Halifax, formerly of the Telegraph office here, is in town.

Mr. Adam Hudspeth, M. P., Lindsay, is at the Oriental Hotel.

Turnbull's mammoth store is in its new summer dress, decked with lace flouncings and embroideries, lace Grenadines, lace gloves and parasols, lace curtains and pillow shams, etc., etc. For new and handsome goods this is the right house.

FIRE

A Whole Block of Sheds in a Blaze on Simcoe Street.

At ten o'clock on Wednesday night a fire broke out in a small stable in the Condon Temperance House yard, Simcoe street. In a twinkling it burst out and into the Snowden Hotel stable and shed and soon the Grand Central Hotel shed, Dr. Crevier's stable, and southward, English's dry house and the City Hotel stables had all caught fire.

Before the alarm was sounded the fire had spread along wrapping the Snowden Hotel stables in flames. The firemen were quickly on the spot. A line of hose was run from the single hydrant, opposite the lock works, and the stream was directed to the seat of the fire in a trifle over three minutes after the alarm had been first sounded. A second line was run from a hydrant on George street in front of Mr. Matthew's store down Simcoe street, and across the sheds where the branchmen used it to guard the Grand Central Hotel stables. The third line of hose was taken from the hydrant on George street in front of Mr. Garvey's store and run through the City Hotel yard to the back of the City Hotel stables. A fourth line was taken from a hydrant, on Charlotte street, which, together with a line of hose brought up from Mr. Peter Hamilton's foundry and attached to the same hydrant, was used to protect Mr. English's canoe factory and the houses on Charlotte street, which were by this time in imminent danger. The flames were raging furiously, carrying upwards clouds of sparks. With the fire burning from street to street it seemed as if the efforts of the firemen to confine it to the sheds would be futile; but by good management on the part of Chief Rutherford and Assistant Chief Craig it was kept within the limits. In half an hour it was got under control and then was easily subdued.

The cause of the fire is unknown. The loss is estimated at $2,500. Snowden's Hotel sheds, $1,500; English's dry-house and lumber, $800; City Hotel stable, $100, and Dr. Crevier's stable $100. There is $500 insurance on the Snowden Hotel sheds, and the others are covered by insurance except English's dry-house, upon which there was no insurance.

NOTES.

The new fire system in the Fire Department was tested for the first time at this fire, giving the most satisfactory results.

There were about 1,500 feet of hose in use.

The roof of the city hotel caught fire from a shower of sparks. The blaze was soon extinguished.

The fire was getting pretty near to Garvey's warehouse, where a quantity of coal oil was stored.

The danger of allowing wooden buildings to be put up in the centre of the town was made apparent on Wednesday night. Were it not that but little wind blew, and that the firemen rendered very efficient service, the newspapers might be now coming out with cuts of the "burnt district."

More Fires.

At half-past eleven o'clock to-day an alarm summoned the firemen to Wilson's Woollen Mill, situated at the west end of the Ashburnham bridge. The fire broke out in the picker room, which was filled with raw and partially manufactured goods, and spread with surprising rapidity. Though the room was lined with sheet iron the flames were not to be shut in. In a very short time the whole iron lining caved in, and the fire was all over the building in an instant. Owing to the distance which the hose had to be run—from Water street, in front of Mr. Hill's insurance office—it was fully five minutes before the first stream was playing. Two more streams were turned on from the engine, which was stationed near the bridge. Nothing could be done to save the mill, as the fire was too far advanced. The efforts of the firemen were directed to saving the house near the mill, the bridge and the wheel house opposite the mill. The wind blowing north scattered burning embers up to Meldrum, Davidson & Co.'s mill. Several times flames sprung up the large wood piles between the Bridge and the Brodie mills, but these were attended to by two hand engines. The Brodie Mills caught fire on the roof twice, but the Brodie Mill fire department were out in full force having three powerful streams at their service. Meldrum, Davidson & Co's mill also caught fire on the roof, but this blaze was also promptly put out. The cause of the fire is supposed to be the same as that of the burning of the woollen mill on the opposite side of the river a few months ago—a match in the wool passing through the picker. The loss is estimated at $9,000; Mr. Wilson's loss is $6,000, machinery and materials, and the Dickson Company's loss $3,000 on the building. There is $3,200 insurance on the machinery and materials in the Glasgow & London, and $2,500 on the building in the Mercantile.

EXCEEDINGLY PROMPT.

E. E. Henderson, General Agent "Phœnix" (of England) Fire Insurance Company, Peterborough:

DEAR SIR,—I acknowledge with thanks the receipt of your cheque this a. m. in settlement in full of my claim in the "Phœnix" of England Fire Insurance Company, represented by you, for damage of stock from the fire last night in rear of my canoe factory on Charlotte street. Such prompt adjustment is deserving of public mention.

Yours truly,
WM. ENGLISH.

THE AGITATOR MOBBED

O'BRIEN PELTED WITH STONES ON TORONTO STREETS.

A Mob Pursues Him and Kilbride—O'Brien Struck Three Times—Others Receive Blows, Including a Policeman.

The Toronto Mail says:—Wednesday night was another historical night for the city of Toronto. The excitement over O'Brien's appearance had apparently not subsided, but had rather become intensified. The O'Brien party was expected to go East on the C. P. R. at eight o'clock, and a large crowd had collected at the Union station to see him off. Another large crowd had congregated at the York street entrance to the Rossin house, where it was expected O'Brien would appear on taking leave of the hotel. At a casual glance, the crowd seemed composed mostly of the agitator's friends. At eight o'clock a report passed through the assemblage that O'Brien had gone to North Toronto Junction in a carriage, and quite a number started for that place. A representative of the Mail was standing on the steps and on making enquiry he ascertained that Mr. O'Brien would not leave until next morning. The crowd still kept increasing in number, and soon about five hundred persons, mostly young men, were congregated on both sides of the street, every face turned towards the Rossin house entrance. Sergt. Adair and three men kept walking up and down among the crowd. About 8 15 a shout went up followed by feeble cheers for O'Brien, and that gentleman appeared on the steps wearing a silk hat on his head. Mr. Mulligan, President, and Mr. Cahill, secretary of the local branch of the Land League, and Mr. Wall, of the New York Tribune, were with Mr. O'Brien. They turned north, towards King street,

FOLLOWED BY THE CROWD.

Mr. R. B. Teefy and Denis Kilbride were in the rear unnoticed. The three policemen on duty and Sergeant Adair fell in line and followed behind the first party. "O'Brien must be mad," was the remark of the peaceably disposed spectators, "to walk the streets at night without a strong guard." Others attributed it to a desire on O'Brien's part to obtain notoriety by inciting the citizens to mob him. Along King street the crowd went hooting and yelling like mad, cheering for Lansdowne and groaning for O'Brien. Again and again efforts were made to get at the agitator, but the police determinedly kept the crowd at bay. At the corner of Bay and King streets the first stones were thrown. Some tough in the crowd struck Sergeant Adair three times on the head with a stone, and nothing in the world but the stiff helmet saved his skull from being crushed. Although stunned, he turned on the crowd; bricks and rocks then began to fly, and groans and hisses made a terrific din. O'Brien and his friends were hustled by the mob that collected in front of them and they turned down Bay street. Bay street is paved with cobble stones, and then the rocks began to fly in earnest, but the crowd was so dense around him that more friends than foes were struck. The silk hat, however, afforded an excellent target, and opposite the Albany Club he was struck between the shoulders by a stone and fell. He was quickly on his feet again. A man rushed in and threw a large stone, which struck Mr. Mulligan, staggering him. Some one called out that this man was Sergeant Adair's assailant, and the three policemen pursued him through the crowd. They caught him, but had to let him go again and follow O'Brien. This action on the part of the police allowed the crowd to get at O'Brien. The streets were not lit with gas at this point, and stone flew through the air in all directions. Mr. Wall was struck with a large stone in the base of the skull and he fell. Mr. Cahill and Mr. Kilbride ran to his assistance, and received some of the missiles. Kilbride was struck on the arm, and Mr. Cahill also received a severe cut on the head. But the crowd was after O'Brien, and they passed the others without noticing them further. Mr. Wall was taken to Hooper's drug store, where his head was bandaged. Meanwhile the crowd continued to pursue O'Brien. Two men succeeded in

CATCHING HOLD OF HIM,

but before they could injure him the police rushed to his assistance and they bolted. O'Brien ran down the street and turned along Wellington street. A large pile of stones lay on Wellington street in front of the Reform Club. The crowd rushed toward this pile, and every now and again some one would stagger with a blow from a stone. This frightened those disposed to take hold of O'Brien, and they began to scatter on each side. Close in the rear of the fleeing agitator a man stooped to pick up a stone, and as he did so he was struck in the ear and dropped. Detective Reburn stooped to pick him up and a stone knocked his white Christy off his head. O'Brien turned and tried the door of Belcher, Sutherland & Co., but it was locked. Here he was struck in the stomach with a stone, which almost doubled him up. He fled westward, and espying a light in the shop of Mr. Lalor, locksmith, he turned in there, followed by a friend. The mob outside sent volley after volley of stones through the windows, smashing every pane of glass, and damaging a number of valuable bicycles which were being put in order for the Woodstock race.

HOW HE ESSCAPED.

After passing through Lalor's store Mr. O'Brien and his friend remained in the rear of Bilton Brother's tailoring store, 103 King street west. Patrol Constable W. R. Switzer (No. 16), who was watching Heintzman's building, fearing the crowd might follow and cause a disturbance secured a temporary shelter for them in Bilton's store, and watching an opportunity undertook to conduct O'Brien to his hotel. The attempt was rather risky, as some of the crowd were watching in the back lanes. A rush was however made to the rear of the Rossin House and Mr. O'Brien was helped by Switzer over the court wall, ten or 12 feet high, just as a shower of missels fell about them from the crowd, who had got scent of the rescue and was then closing in. They gave vent to their disappointment in hooting and loud yells and throwing a volley of stones.

MR. O'BRIEN'S VIEWS.

Mr. O'Brien was interviewed by a representative of the Mail at the Rossin House shortly after his escape from the mob. He was laughing over the incident and bore no mark or bruise. He stated that he had been struck three times by stones, twice on the body and once on the wrist. Neither blow was severe, however. It was suggested that when leaving the city on the following morning he should drive to North Toronto and take train there for Ottawa. Mr. O'Brien answered that he would leave the city as openly as he entered it, making his departure from the Union station. "If they murder us," said he, referring to himself and Mr. Kilbride, "they will place a stain upon the reputation of Toronto that the city will never get rid off."

The local branch of the National League was holding its regular weekly meeting, at St. Vincent Hall, when news of the stoning arrived. The members immediately dashed for the door and ran down to the Rossin House in quick time. Their anxiety about O'Brien was soon relieved, as it was learned he was safe and uninjured.

Golden grain of truth. Turnbull is selling ladies Taffeta and pure silk gloves that are cut to fit the hand. Every pair numbered. You will not regret having walked an extra block after you have tried a pair.

FROM

J. J. SHEEHY

I beg to say that contrary to announcements which appeared in the Peterborough papers for the past two months, I DO NOT intend to remove to T. Dolan & Co's Dry Goods Store, nor have I any connections whatever with that establishment. The final arrangements not being satisfactory to me, I withdrew from the projected change, and intend carrying on the Dry Goods business in my usual stand next to Loch's Hat Store.

It is my intention in the future as in the past to show at all seasons nothing but new and fresh goods in the various lines of Dry Goods and Gent's Furnishings; and by doing so, hope to retain the confidence which I a proud to say, I have enjoyed from the public since commencing business two years ago.

FRIDAY, MAY 20, 1887.

MR. O'BRIEN AT OTTAWA.

Better Treatment at the Dominion Than at the Provincial Capital.

OTTAWA, May 19.—Messrs. O'Brien and Kilbride arrived at the Canadian Pacific railway at 5.30 p.m. A deputation from the Reception Committee had proceeded to Perth to meet them. At the Union Station here a crowd of 800 or 100 persons gathered. Many of them rushed into the car to greet Mr. O'Brien. Lusty cheers were given for him upon his appearance on the platform by a small proportion of those present. The rest seemed to have no interest but curosity in the matter and there was no disorder of any kind.

In the Rink, where about 1,000 persons had assembled, Mr. O'Brien received a hearty reception. The students of the College of Ottawa were present in a body, leading in the cheers and singing "God Save Ireland." Mr. J. L. Dowling, who presided, read a telegram from Archbishop O'Brien, of Halifax, expressing sympathy with O'Brien and condemnation of "the blackguardism of Toronto, for which the educated rowdyism under Mayor Howland was chiefly responsible." An address from the local League was then read. During its reading loud cheering was heard on Cartier square opposite the rink. It appears that a counter demonstration was going on there, and presently the strains of "God Save the Queen" were heard, followed by hearty Loyalist cheers. This was kept up for a considerable time, and was accompanied occasionally by the tooting of horns.

Mr. O'Brien in his speech, which was otherwise substantially that delivered elsewhere, referred to the disorders last night. He said he believed there was not a respectable Canadian who did not share the sentiments of Archbishop O'Brien. He declared that the ignorant Orangemen were the rioters and that the intention was to make it a killing matter. The audience rose to their feet and cheered as Mr. O'Brien concluded, and the college boys again led in singing "God Save Ireland."

Mr. Kilbride was next introduced and spoke at length. He referred to the troubles in Toronto last night as the opposition of Lord Landsdowne's paid or primed "rowdies." He closed by asking if the Canadian people would tolerate to be governed by one of the greatest tyrants that had ever oppressed Ireland.

Senator O'Donohoe of Toronto was the next speaker. He said that Toronto, from the earliest history to the present, had been disgraced by the acts of the Orangemen, but he believed the acts of last night would not have been committed had it not been for the presence of Lord Lansdowne in the city. He concluded by moving a resolution of sympathy with and vote of thanks to Messrs O'Brien and Kilbride.

Prof. Frawley seconded the resolution, which was carried unanimously.

Rev. Father Whelan, parish priest of St. Patricks, in moving a vote of thanks to the chairman, said that for Lord Lansdowne as a landlord the best thing we could do was to pray for him, that he might be taken away from the way of temptation; that he might be removed from the occasion of sin. To pray, in short, for the success of the plan of campaign.

Messrs. O'Brien and Kilbride spoke in reply, and the meeting terminated in an orderly manner.

Parnellite Descent on the Colonies

LONDON, May 18.—The visit of Mr. O'Brien to Canada for the purpose of agitation is the beginning of a general appeal to the the colonies on behalf of Ireland. The Parnellites have taken steps to organize a wholesale descent upon the British colonies to appeal to the people to hold meetings, pass resolutions and in other ways signify their abhorrence of the Government's policy of coercion, and at as early a date as possible well known orators will be sent to the more populous of the English dependencies to begin work.

TAHLEQUAH, Indian Territory, May 18.—John Blair, Jim Christie, and French Christie quarrelled yesterday. Christie shot Blair, mortally wounding him, whereupon Blair shot Jim Christie through the head, killing him. He then shot French Christie, seriously wounding him.

THE IRISH MEMOIR.

Condemnation of Parnell, if this Version is Correct.

LONDON, May 19.—The Chronicle correspondent at Rome has received the proof sheets of the memoir prepared by the Irish College. The document begins by pointing out that in the Parnell or the Fenian movement interests far higher and holier than the material advantages sought for are at stake. Genuine Irish grievances are no longer heard of, the cry for total separation having replaced all others. What was treason in the revolt of 1866, condemned by Pius IX, is now regarded as a mere matter of practical politics. But, says the memoir, acts against morality and religion, or the peace of society, cannot, like the Chancellor or Mr. Gladstone, change their hue, and the acts of Mr. Parnell and his followers are still under Papal condemnation. It is not necessary, therefore, for the Pope to condemn them, although, to quote the memoir, this, their leader, being a free-thinker and outside the pale of the Church, is exempt from Papal authority. But that will not exempt his followers who profess to be Catholics. After condemning Mr. Parnell for his association with apostles of violence, the memoir declares that to accomplish his self-assumed task of breaking the last link that binds Ireland and England he made traitors of the masses of the Irish people. The means by which he sought to dissolve the union are denounced in the most unmeasured terms, while the "Tools" he employed to spread "Terrorism" throughout Ireland are held up to public execration. The memoir then continues: "The act of the Fenian party are the surest witnesses we can have, first, of what their rule is, and second, what it will be if they get supreme power. They now claim the support of Catholics of their own and other countries who of late have been led to look favorably upon the Parnellites' movements. Such can have had no notion of the horrible terrorism of which Parnellite rule wherever it prevailed has been. It is that terrorism which has from the first been the source of Parnell power. In support of this view it gives a long catalogue of agrarian crimes committed between January, 1866, and March, 1877, derived from the last report of the Inspector-General of the Irish constabulary, and declares that the perpetraters of these atrocities and outrages must be brought to punishmemt if the loyal section of the population is not to be exterminated. It insists that every one who has any sympathy for the sufferings of mankind must hail with joy the passing of the Crimes Act, and adds "But incredible as it may seem, there is a party opposed to it in Parliament on whom the appalling sufferings of the defenceless class, who are being mercilessly hacked down dead, butchered as if they were wild beasts, go for nothing," a party led by the very man who only ten years ago passed a coercion bill that Nero or Draco would hardly have dared to pass. The bill is opposed by them on the ground that it is a coercion bill, and not what the House of Commons calls it, a crimes bill. That is their plea for the conspiracy now entered into by Messrs. Gladstone and Parnell to impede its passing and becoming speedily a law. The hope by this inhuman process to prolong the reign of terrorism which now obtains in Ireland, because they see that in its destruction the reign of Parnellism and crime will come to an end.' Nothing, it holds, can justify the opposition to the immediate passage of the bill and it predicts that Mr. Gladstone's hostility to the measure will utterly ruin his character as a statesman. (After expressing the sorrow of the Irish College at the Phœnix Park murders and the subsequent "glorification of that execrable deed," the memoir concludes as follows: "The party with whom Mr. Gladstone has now identified himself for the furtherance of a revolutionary movement, which has for its avowed object the destruction of the United Kingdom, have done everything possible of late to persuade Catholics by their speeches, in and out of Parliament, that the vicar of Christ was in favor it. Could the English Government be brought to believe this outrageous calumny, what would they think of the Pope, what would the Emperors of Austria, Germany and China think of him? What would the world at large think of it? What would non-Catholics who believe in revelation think of the Roman Catholic Church if its head on earth could view, except with profound sorrow, a movement which is filling Ireland with anarchy and devastation, were to favor a movement which unless its days are shortened will leave a land that once flowed with milk and honey a desert without religion?"

MR. CHAMBERLAIN PROPHESIES.

LONDON, May 19.—Mr. Chamberlain presided at a festival of the Hardware Society last evening. In replying to a toast to Parliament he said he thought that when the Irish problem had been solved the Liberal-Unionists would not return to their old places, but that the more advanced Tories and intelligent Liberals would be found working together for the common good of their country. Parliament would then probably be composed of three parties; first, fossil Tories; second, Advanced Conservatives and Liberal-Unionists; and third, a party led by Mr. Labouchere.

THE HOME RULE AGITATION.

LONDON, May 19.—Sir George O. Trevelyan, in a speech at Manchester last evening, said he thoroughly agreed with Lord Hartington that Parliament ought to represent the whole kingdom and reserve to itself the control of subordinate legislative bodies. He very much regretted that Mr. Gladstone had not seen fit to abandon his scheme to exclude the Irish members from the English Parliament, otherwise many of those who were once his followers would still be found under the folds of his banner. Sir George made an appeal to the Liberal-Unionists to withdraw their support from the Government which he said was striking at its rivals through the personal reputation of the Parnellite members.

THE EGYPTIAN QUESTION.

LONDON, April 19.—In view of the conclusion of an Anglo-Turkish convention, finally disposing of the question of British occupation of Egypt, petitions have been numerously circulated in Alexandria and other places in Egypt, and which have received a large number of signatures inviting France to occupy Egypt in the event of the evacuation of that country by England. The petitioners allege that it is vital to the interests of the French residents of Egypt that the protection now afforded them by the British authorities against robbery and ultimate financial ruin, should be guaranteed, after the withdrawal of the English, and the claim is made that such protection cannot be enjoyed by foreign residents unless the restraining hand of some power other than Turkey is raised in their behalf. The Government will present to the House of Commons, on Friday evening, a statement explaining the negotiations of Sir Henry Wolff with the Turkish Government and detailing the results of his mission.

SECEDED FROM THE CLUB.

LONDON, May 19.—Lord Hartington and seventy other Liberal-Unionists have seceded from the Eighty Club in consequence of the club's approval of Mr. Gladstone's Irish policy.

IRISH EMIGRATION.

Tyranny the Cause of it, but Who is the Tyrant.

LONDON, May 19.—In the House of Commons this evening, Col. King-Harman, replying to Wm. A. Macdonald (Parnellite) in reference to the remarkable increase in emigration from Ireland, said it should be attributed partly to the growing want of employment in Ireland, partly to the fear entertained by the masses that the new Crimes Act would enable the authorities to punish past violations of the law, and partly to the fact that numbers of the Irish people were forced to leave the country because of their disinclination to join secret societies. (Parnellite cries of "Oh," "Oh.")

Mr. Macdonald: "Is it not the increase of emigration from Ireland partly due to the introduction by the Government of the Crimes bill, and the desire of the Irish people to escape its tyranny?" (Cries of "Hear, hear.")

Speaker Peel called for order, saying, "This is a matter of opinion and not a proper subject for question."

Mr. Labouchere moved to adjourn the debate for the purpose of enabling him to criticize the annexation of Zululand.

Sir Henry Holland, Secretary for the Colonies, protests against the discussion of the matter. Full opportunity would be given to discuss it when the Zulu estimates were brought up for debate.

Several Radicals supported Mr. Labouchere's motion, when Mr. Smith, the Government leader, moved the cloture.

Mr. Smith's motion carried by 278 to 156.

Mr. Labouchere's motion was rejected by 280 to 142.

THE IRON TRADE.

ALREADY there are signs that the new iron duties will very speedily have their intended effect. From Blairton in this county, from the district north of Kingston, from the Ottawa Valley and from other localities come reports of preparations being made for the utilization of our rich iron ores. Evidently an end will soon be put to the suicidal folly of Canadians letting their iron mines lie idle while relying upon their neighbors for an inferior article manufactured for us by foreigners who derive the chief profit from the transaction.

It will be especially satisfactory to the people of Peterborough to find that our own county is foremost in the projected development of our vast mineral resources. The bill just introduced by Mr. Guillet on behalf of Mr. Pearce for a charter to the Cobourg, Grafton and Marmora Railway is intended to open up once more the well known iron mines at Blairton in the township of Belmont, not this time to ship away the ore to Pennsylvania, but to supply furnaces in our own country. The renewed working of the Blairton mine, besides being beneficial to the immediate locality, should be of advantage to our town, if our business men are prompt in availing themselves of the opening. Indeed, with the direct railway communication from here to Blairton, there should be no insuperable obstacle to our town securing a still more direct benefit from this enterprise.

THE Toronto Globe, in an article disapproving of the visit of Mr. O'Brien to Canada, says:—

"The question of Home Rule does concern Canada, because, through the refusal of self-government to Ireland, Canada has once been and may be again raided by American Fenians."

Now, long before Home Rule was a fashionable cry in Canada, the REVIEW advocated the local management of local affairs in Ireland, such as we have in our Provinces. We believe the great majority of the people of Canada also hold this view, in spite of any difference of opinion as to the details of the plan. But if the cowardly argument of the Globe was the best that could be advanced for Ireland the feeling of Canadians would be very different. The good will of Canada for Ireland has a better source than dastardly fears, whatever may be the motive of the Toronto Globe.

THE Province of Quebec has very sensibly legislated against taxing commercial travellers, a practice which some municipalities had adopted. When, however, commercial travellers, as is rarely the case, act as peddlers and retail goods, they should be made to pay for a peddler's license, or be fined for infringing the law. Otherwise, store keepers who pay municipal taxes and otherwise contribute towards building up the locality in which they do business, would be subjected to very unfair competition, and the municipality would be defrauded of its dues.

THE Marquis of Lorne says that he would like to see added to the titles of our Sovereign, "Queen of Canada, Australia and South Africa." If the Australian and South African colonies are to rank with the Dominion of Canada they should first confederate themselves as we have done.

CAMPBELLFORD.

AN ACCIDENT AVERTED.—We are informed that on Tuesday morning last, one of the sectionmen discovered that the timbers of a pile bridge on the Grand Junction Railway, about seven miles west of here, had sunk some inches and lowered the rails with it. The regular train from Peterborough had passed over the bridge only a short time before, and evidently the place had become defective about that time. Had it not been noticed till a couple of hours later, the freight following the passenger train might have met with an accident equal to that which occurred last week.—Herald.

Blairton Iron Mines—Haldimand Election—The Tariff Changes—P. E. I. Subsidy—Intercolonial Passes.

WEDNESDAY May 18.—A number of private bills were introduced.

RAILWAY TO BLAIRTON MINES.

Mr. GUILLET introduced a bill to incorporate the Cobourg, Grafton & Marmora Railway, which is intended to open up the Blairton iron mines.

The Clerk of the Crown in Chancery laid on the table the papers in the Haldimand election.

TARIFF CHANGES.

Sir C. TUPPER in Committee proposed certain changes in his tariff resolutions, and they were carried after some discussion, as well as some items that were left over.

Mr. BARR called attention to the loss that would be experienced by British Columbian cities owing to the increase of the duty on iron pipes, ordered for waterworks and gasworks.

Sir C. TUPPER said a clause would be introduced in the bill to give power to deal with such cases as these.

The resolutions were reported and concurred in, and a bill was introduced.

P. E. I. SUBSIDY.

Sir C. TUPPER laid on the table papers connected with the increase of the P. E. I. subsidy.

INTERCOLONIAL PASSES.

Mr. DAVIES complained that some members had not received passes on the Intercolonial.

Sir C. TUPPER promised that any oversight should be rectified.

EXTENSIVE TREE PLANTING.—Mr. T. M. Grover has set out on his property west of Victoria street over 10,000 trees, principally from American nurseries. In a few years he will have his residence hemmed in by a forest of black walnut, black ash, maple, &c., the 10,000 being made up principally of these varieties.

EXCHANGED PULPITS.—The Rev. A. Bell of St. Andrew's Church, Peterborough, and the Rev. J. Carmichael, pastor of the Presbyterian congregation here, exchanged pulpits on Sunday last. Mr. Bell was greeted with large audiences at both morning and evening services, and his discourses were able and instructive.

HASTINGS AGAIN DEFEATED.—The return match between the juniors of the Norwood and Hastings' Football Clubs was played on Saturday afternoon in the park and again resulted in a decisive victory for the Norwood boys. At the end of the hour and a half, the time agreed upon, the score stood, Norwood 4 goals and Hastings 0. The team play of the Norwood eleven was excellent. For Hastings, Anderson, Fowlds and Cook played a rattling game; while for Norwood, Fraser, Harper, Renwick, Reid, Roxborough and Eaton, did exceedingly well.—Register.

THE PASSOVER.

EXPLANATORY NOTES BY S. I. CURTISS, PH. D., D. D.

Lesson VIII of the International Series (Second Quarter), for Sunday, May 22. Text of Lesson, Ex. xii, 1-14—Golden Text, I Cor. v, 7.

In the last lesson Moses was called to be the leader of Israel out of Egypt. Chapters 4-11 show how the way was prepared for him. They contain an account of the struggle of the king of Egypt with the King of Kings. One blow after another falls on the unhappy Pharaoh and his people, until he can no longer be in doubt that the Jehovah with whom he is contending, and concerning whom he had scornfully asked, is a God of almighty power. He must have seen before the struggle was ended that the gods of Egypt could not save him. The last of the ten plagues was to come in the destruction of all the first born of man and beast among the Egyptians. Hitherto the Israelites had been spared from the plagues that had been visited upon the Egyptians. A special provision was now to be made for the sparing of the first born in connection with the institution of the passover.

THE LESSON.

Moses and Aaron (v. 1)—God is represented as speaking to Moses and Aaron. By this we are to understand that he spoke to Moses and that Moses gave the message to Aaron for the people. This arrangement was made that Aaron should speak to the people, because Moses distrusted his own power of speech, although God might otherwise have given him the ability to speak to them without the help of Aaron.

The New Year (v. 2)—As our Christian era dates from the birth of Christ, so the new year among the Israelities was to date from the birthday of the nation. Hitherto the year had begun in the autumn, as it still does among the Jews; but here God commands that it should begin in the spring, with the month Abib, or Nisan, corresponding to April or May.

The Lamb (v. 3)—They were to speak to the congregation of Israel, perhaps to the representatives of different tribes and families, who could come together to hear God's commands. On the tenth day of the month they were to take a lamb, or kid (Revised Version, margin), for each family. While the lamb was not to be killed until the 14th of the month, they were doubtless allowed four days to make a careful selection from their flocks or that they might purchase from others.

V. 4. If the family were too small to eat the lamb—and in later times a piece of the lamb as large as an olive sufficed for each person who ate the passover meal—then they were to invite a next door neighbor to share with them. In New Testament times the legal number who were to partake of one lamb was not less than ten.

V. 5. Not every lamb was suitable for this purpose, but, as in the sacrificial ritual of later times, it was to be without blemish, a male of the first year, either of the sheep or of the goats.

V. 6. This lamb or goat was to be kept until the fourteenth day, and then all the assembly of the congregation, probably, however, not in any one place of meeting, but in their respective places of abode, were to kill the lamb "between the evenings" (Revised Version, margin). There are two interpretations and usages with reference to the term between the evenings; some (the Pharisees and modern Jews) think that it means the time between 3 o'clock and sunset; others (the Samaritans and Karaites) from sunset to the end of twilight.

The Blood (v. 7)—After killing the lamb they were to sprinkle the blood with hyssop upon the door posts and on the lintel—the cross piece at the top—of the houses in which they were to eat the passover.

The Passover Meal (vs. 8, 9)—They were to eat the flesh in the night, roasted, and with unleavened bread, which they were to use, because, on account of their haste, there was no time to prepare leavened bread, and perhaps because leaven was a symbol of uncleanness and evil. They were also to take bitter herbs, which were to remind them of their bitter bondage in Egypt. (Compare the bread of affliction, Deut. xvi, 13.) They were not to eat the lamb boiled or raw; the latter command was necessary because it is not uncommon for some people to eat raw flesh.

V. 10. As it was used for a sacred purpose and not for the satisfying of hunger, none of it was to be left until the morning. In case any of it was left over, it was to be burned.

Ready for the Journey (vs. 11, 12)—They were to eat it prepared for their journey. With their long mantles girded up so that they would not be hindered in going, with their sandals, which the people were not accustomed to wear in the house, fastened to their feet, and their staves in their hands. They were to eat in haste, ready to start at a moment's warning. They were reminded that it was the Lord's passover. While the destroyer would slay every first born of the Egyptians, both of man and beast, he would save alive the children of the Israelites in every house where the blood of the lamb appeared on the door posts. In this plague, through the destruction of beasts it might well be said that Jehovah would execute his judgments against all the gods of Egypt, since not a few animals received divine worship.

THE PASSOVER LAMB AND THE LAMB OF GOD.

In this narrative the Old and New Testaments clasp hands. This account seen in New Testament light is a type or representation of Christ. He is directly called the Lamb of God and our passover. Some of the points of analogy between the passover lamb and the Lamb of God are the following:

1. The passover lamb was without blemish. The Lamb of God was without blemish and without spot.

2. The passover lamb was slain between the evenings, between 3 and 6. At the very same hour when the passover lambs were being slain the Lamb of God gave up his life on the cross.

3. The blood of the passover lamb sprinkled on the door posts and lintel was the salvation of the inmates of the Israelitish house. The blood of the Lamb of God sprinkled on our hearts, which are our doors, is our salvation from ruin.

4. The passover lamb, whose blood had been shed for the Israelites, was eaten in communion by the Israelites. By faith we feed on the Lamb of God in the supper and have fellowship with one another.—Sunday School World.

JESS.

BY H. RIDER HAGGARD

Author of "King Solomon's Mines," "She," et

On came the horse, and John thought that its rider was going to pass without seeing them, when suddenly the movement of Bessie's dress between the "naatche" trees caught his eye, and he pulled up and looked round. He was a large and exceedingly handsome man, apparently about 40 years old, with clear cut features, cold, light blue eyes and a remarkable golden beard that hung right down over his chest. For a Boer he was rather smartly dressed, in English made tweed clothes and tall riding boots.

"Ah, Miss Bessie," he called out in English, "there you are with your pretty arms all bare. I'm in luck to come just in time to see them. Shall I come and help you to wash the feathers? Only say the word, now"——

Just then he caught sight of John Niel and checked himself.

"I have come to look for a black ox, branded with a heart and a 'W' inside of the heart. Do you know if your uncle has seen it on the place anywhere?"

"No, Meinheer Muller," replied Bessie, coldly, "but he is down there," pointing at a kraal on the plain some half mile away, "if you want to, go and ask about it."

"Mr. Muller," said he, by way of correction, and with a curious contraction of the brow. "'Meinheer' is all very well for the Boers, but we are all Englishmen now. Well, the ox can wait. With your permission, I'll stop here till 'Oom' Croft (Uncle Croft) comes back," and, without further ado, he jumped off his horse and, slipping the reins over its head as an indication to it to stand still, advanced toward Bessie with outstretched hand. As he did so the young lady plunged both her arms up to the elbows in the bath, and it struck John, who was observing the whole scene, that she did this in order to avoid the necessity of shaking hands with her stalwart visitor.

"Sorry my hands are wet," she said, giving him a cold little nod. "Let me introduce you, Mr. (with emphasis) Frank Muller—Capt. Niel, who has come to help my uncle with the place."

John stretched out his hand and Muller shook it.

"Captain!" he said, interrogatively; "a ship captain, I suppose?"

"No," said John, "a captain of the English army."

"Oh, a rooibaatje (red jacket). Well, I don't wonder at your taking to farming after the Zulu war."

"I don't quite understand you," said John; rather coldly.

"Oh, no offense, captain, no offense. I only meant that you rooibaatje did not come very well out of the war. I was there with Piet Uys, and it was a sight, I can tell you. A Zulu had only to show himself at night and one would see your regiments skreck (stampede) like a span of oxen when they wind a lion. And then they'd fire—ah, they did fire—anyhow, anywhere, but mostly at the clouds, there was no stopping them; and so, you see, I thought that you would like to turn your sword into a ploughshare, as the Bible says—but no offense, I'm sure—no offense."

All this while John Niel, being English to his backbone, and cherishing the reputation of his profession almost as dearly as his own honor, was boiling with inward wrath, which was all the fiercer because he knew that there was some truth in the Boer's insults. He had the sense, however, to keep his temper—outwardly, at any rate.

"I was not in the Zulu war, Mr. Muller," he said, and just then old Silas Croft came riding up, and the conversation dropped.

Mr. Frank Muller stopped to dinner and far on into the afternoon. His lost ox seemed to have entirely slipped his memory. There he sat close to the fair Bessie, smoking and drinking gin and water, and talking with great volubility in English, sprinkled with Boer Dutch terms that John Niel did not understand, and gazing at the young lady in a manner which John somehow found unpleasant. Of course it was no affair of his, and he had no interest in the matter, but for all that he found the remarkable looking Dutchman exceedingly disagreeable. At last, indeed, he could stand it no longer, and hobbled out for a little walk with Jess, who, in her abrupt way, offered to show him the garden.

"You don't like that man!" she said to him, as they slowly went down the slope in front of the house.

"No; do you?"

"I think," replied Jess, slowly and with much emphasis, "that he is the most odious man that I ever saw, and the most curious." And then she relapsed into silence, only broken now and again by an occasional remark about the flowers and trees.

Half an hour afterward, when they arrived again at the top of the slope, Mr. Muller was just riding off down the avenue of blue gums. By the veranda stood a Hottentot named Jantje, who had been holding the Dutchman's horse. He was a curious, wizened up little fellow, dressed in rags, and with hair like the worn tags of a black woolen carpet. His age might have been anything between 25 and 60; it was impossible to form an opinion on the point. Just now, however, his yellow monkey face was convulsed with an expression of intense malignity, and he was standing there in the sunshine cursing rapidly and beneath his breath in Dutch, and shaking his fist after the retreating Boer—a very epitome of impotent, over-mastering passion.

"What is he doing?" asked John.

Jess laughed. "Jantje does not like Frank Muller any more than I do, but I don't know why. He will never tell me."

CHAPTER IV.

BESSIE IS ASKED IN MARRIAGE.

In due course John Niel got over his sprained ankle and the other injuries inflicted on him by the infuriated cock ostrich (it is, by the way, a humiliating thing to be knocked out of time by a feathered fowl), and set to work to learn the routine of farm life. He did not find this a disagreeable task, especially when he had so fair an instructress as Bessie, who knew all about it, to show him the way in which he should go. Naturally of an energetic and hard working temperament, he very soon got more or less into the swing of the thing, and at the end of six weeks began to talk quite learnedly of cattle and ostriches and sweet and sour veldt. About once a week or so Bessie used to put him through a regular examination as to his progress; also she gave him lessons in Dutch and Zulu, both of which tongues she spoke to perfection; so it will be seen that he did not lack for pleasant and profitable employment. Another thing was that he grew much attached to old Silas Croft. The old gentleman, with his handsome, honest face, his large and varied stock of experience, and his sturdy English character, made a great impression on his mind. He had never met a man quite like him before. Nor was the liking unreciprocated, for his host took a wonderful fancy to John Niel. "You see, my dear," he explained to his niece Bessie, "he's quiet, and he doesn't know much about farming, but he's willing to learn, and he's such a gentleman. Now, where one has Kaffirs to deal with, as on a place like this, you must have a gentleman. Your mean white will never get anything out of a Kaffir; that's why the Boers kill them and flog them, because they can't get anything out of them without. But you see Capt. Niel gets on well enough with them. I think he'll do, my dear, I think he'll do," and Bessie quite agreed with him. And so it came to pass that after this six weeks' trial the bargain was finally struck, and John paid over his £1,000 and took a third interest in Mooifontein.

THE CITY AND SUBURBS

To-night.

Explanation.

J. J. Sheehy's card to the public appears in this edition of the REVIEW on the first page.

A Fine Canoe.

The Omemee Herald says:—"On Tuesday last Mr. W. H. Curry received a fine canoe from English's factory, Peterborough. In the evening Mr. Curry took a spurt on Pigeon River and was well pleased with his new canoe."

Hunt's Brick trowels and the Cincinnati Plastering Trowels are noted for their excellent quality. Plastering and Kalsomin Brushes up to 10|0 for sale by GEORG STETHEM.

Miss Mittie Fraine.

As Miss Fraine is one of the foremost Canadian elocutionists. The Y.M.C.A. Hall should be filled to-night to hear her. Miss Stephens and Mr. A. D. Browne, vocalists, will assist in the entertainment. Tickets 25 cents.

Service of Praise.

The Service of Praise which was rendered with such success at St. Paul's Church on Monday, 9th of May, will be repeated in the George Street Church, on Thursday evening, May 26th, under the direction of Mr. Parker. Admission free, silver collection. It is to be hoped that all who have not yet heard this really fine entertainment, will avail themselves of this opportunity.

Golden grain of truth. Turnbull is selling ladies Taffeta and pure silk gloves that are cut to fit the hand. Every pair numbered. You will not regret having walked an extra block after you have tried a pair.

Important.

Attention is directed to the advertisment of Messrs. T. Dolan & Co., in this issue. It will be seen by the announcement that this old and reliable firm are offering an excellant opportunity to the public of purchasing Dry Goods, Ready-made Clothing, etc., previous to a contemplated change in the business, and doubtless this offer will be taken advantage of by a great many.

Kidd has an eagle from the sky down to his window; $5.00 kid boots down to $4.00, down to $.300, down to $2.50, down, down, down!

Binder Twine.

We have this morning before us samples of Binder Twine from the Dartmouth Ropeworks Co., of Halifax, Nova Scotia, whose advertisement appears in our columns. These samples are greatly admired by experts, and the Dartmouth twine is without doubt keeping up its well earned reputation of being the best in the market. The use of self binder reaping machines, which is gradually becoming so general, has enabled our farmers to hold their own in the face of such low prices for wheat, which would be impossible were old methods employed, but no matter how perfect the machines may be unless the twine is smooth, regular, and breaks at an even strain, half their usefulness is gone. The Dartmouth twine fills all the requirements better than any other, and we strongly advise its use in all cases, thus time and money will be saved.

No one need despair of finding millinery to suit them while Turnbull is in the trade. He keeps a well selected stock of choice goods, and as new lines appear in the market has new shapes and trimmings arriving almost daily.

Military Appointment.

The Kingston News says:—"Major Henry Smith, of 'C' infantry school, Toronto, will probably be appointed Lieut.-Colonel commanding the new school of infantry at London. Major Smith is an officer of experience and ability and served with credit during the recent North-West campaign as assistant adjutant-general on the staff of Major General Sir Fred. Middleton. His many friends in the militia will be pleased to know that the valuable services of a good officer are likely to be recognized." The appointment of Major Smith to this command would certainly be appreciated by the whole Volunters force of the Dominion. It would be giving promotion to a thoroughly experienced officer, one widely known and esteemed in military circles generally, and, besides, recognizing the services of an officer who served with conspicuous gallantry during the North-West rebellion. A better selection could not be made.

Are you a bargain seeker? Call at Turnbull's and see his beautiful Cretonnes at 10 cents a yard.

BLAIRTON IRON MINES.

Mines in Peterborough County to be Re-Opened.

The Mail's Ottawa correspondent writes on May 18th:—"Rumours are afloat to-day of new iron enterprises. It is stated, for example, that an immense capital is to be thrown into Northern Ontario to develop the mines and to bring blast furnaces into operation. The only story which is in any way definite is that Mr. Pearce, who controls the old Cobourg, Peterborough and Marmora road, is making arrangements to work the mines at Blairton, back of Cobourg. These mines were formerly operated in the interests of American blast furnaces, but the taking out of the ore was unprofitable, owing to the circumstance that the railway communication was broken and the ore had to be carried by tramway and water as well as by rail. For this reason the operation was not a success. Mr. Pearce now owns the Cobourg railway, and he proposes to build a branch from it to Norwood and thence to Blairton. It is not yet decided where the blasting will take place, but if charcoal furnaces are to be erected, they will be at the mines, and if coal is to be used they will be at Cobourg. The bill for granting power to extend the railway was introduced by Mr. Guillet this afternoon."

The Blairton iron mines are in Belmont township, Peterborough County, about three miles from the Blairton station on the Canadian Pacific, which station is 28 miles from Peterborough. The mines were opened and a railway built to them in 1867 by the Cobourg, Peterborough & Marmora Railway and Mining Company, and were worked until 1875. Since then they have been closed down. The old method of shipping was by a nine mile railway to the Narrows on the Trent (Trent Bridge), thence by boat to Harwood, and from there to Cobourg by rail. The news that the mines are about to be again operated, which has the appearance of being authentic, will be welcomed, especially in the vicinity of Blairton.

The concert given at Bradburn's Opera House on Thursday evening by Mrs. Chambers and the Harmony Male Quartette, of Montreal, was fairly well attended considering the warm weather. The following programme was presented:—

The Harmony Quartette on entering were greeted with applause, which was succeeded by an enthusiastic encore when "I Heard the Bells" was finished. They returned and gave a comic selection "Simple Simon." They were again recalled after filling their second number and responded with another laughable quartette. Mrs. Chambers' appearance brought forth a hearty round of applause. She was greeted with vociferous applause at the conclusion which she acknowledged with a bow. The solos by Mr. Venables (tenor) and Mr Creighton (tenor) and Mr. Duquette (basso) were all well received, especially that of the latter. Mr. Duquette was obliged to reappear. In the second part Mr. Millar, baritone, sang, making a favorable impression. It can be safely said that this concert was one of the richest musical treats ever offered to a Peterborough audience. The rolling harmony of the quartette, which was as sweetly blended and as true as an organ, took every one by surprise, and everyone who heard them was in ecstacies of delight. It would be invidious to criticise when all acquitted themselves so well, but the first tennor, Mr. Venables, and the basso, Mr. Duquette, made themselves especial favorites. Mr. Venables' tenor is quite clear and true, and both in the quartette and in solo he appears to know how to use it to the best advantage. Mr. Duquette's base is one of remarkable power, of great depth, and of musical richness decidedly more than ordinary. His low notes were taken with ease, and showed nearly as much power as those in the middle of his compass. Mrs. Chambers, always a favorite here, has wonderfully improved since she left Peterborough to go to Montreal. She has a finish in her style now that is very noticeable, and her voice is softer, sweeter and more cultivated. She need now have no hesitation in appearing before any audience. Her solo in the second part of the programme, "Good Bye" elicited such decided applause as demanded her re-appearance. The quintette, which was a perfect jem, was simply a solo by Mrs. Chambers with an inarticulte accompaniment by the Male Quartette; in fact imitating or representing a band accompaniment to prima donna singing, which, as at Jenny Lind's concert in New York, years ago, when the celebrated cantatrice was accompanied by a fine band of sixty instruments. They judiciously supported the voice without the too common fault of drowning it. The piano accompanimnets by Miss Cluxton were played with much taste. The voices were supported without bringing the instrument or the player into prominence. It is to be hoped that in the near future Peterborough will be again favored with a professional visit by this talented troupe. Mr. Wm. Cluxton, who took an active part in arranging the details of the concert, must be gratified at the manner in which everything passed off.

Turnbull's mammoth store is in its new summer dress, decked with lace flouncings and embroideries, lace Grenadines, lace gloves and parasols, lace curtains and pillow shams, etc., etc. For new and handsome goods this is the right house.

Holiday.

The public school pupils have been trying to get even with the Collegiate Institute pupils. When here Inspector Seath gave the latter a holiday. The public school pupils have been since agitating for one for themselves, and have prevailed on the Inspector of the Public Schools to declare Monday a holiday. They will thus have a day to prepare for the 24th.

Accident.

On Thursday forenoon Mrs. D. J. Crowley, of Otonabee, while driving along the south part of George street, met with a serious accident. The pair of spirited horses became frightened and bolted, throwing Mrs. Crowley out on the street. She was painfully bruised and suffered internal injuries. She was taken to the residence of her son in-law, Mr. Galvin. Dr. Kincaid was called and gave as much relief to the injured lady as possible.

PORT HOPE.

MISSING MAN FOUND.—Horton, whose mysterious disappearance was noticed on Wednesday, has turned up. On Thursday evening Mr. Cosgrove drove Mrs. Horton to the residence of her father, Mr. Niles, a few miles down the Cobourg road. While returning, he met Horton between the first toll gate and Gage's Creek, walking down the road. He is now at his father-in-law's, and will be kept there for a few days. There can be little doubt that his illness, from which he thought he had recovered, is not yet cured, and that the unfortunate man is now in a state of temporary dementia.—Times.

Sugar By the C. P. R.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 18.—The Canadian Pacific railroad has secured for transportation across the continent 8,000,000 pounds of sugar in addition to the 2,000,000 pounds shipped last week. It is believed the American refinery of this city is the shipper. Merchants here say that heavy consignments may participate a sugar war in the East. It is also thought there may be a purpose in this traffic deal to force the American transcontinental managers to admit the Canadian line into the railroad pool.

QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.

How It Will be Celebrated by Peterborough People.

The programme for the celebration of the Queen's birthday is already quit ample.

The Peterborough Amateur Athletic Association will hold sports in their grounds in Ashburnham and a baseball match will take place between Lindsay and Peterborough.

The Driving Park Association will hold their annual spring races on the Queen's birthday. There will be four races and the Fire Brigade Band will be in attendance.

Those who fell like a sail down the river, which at this season of the year will be very pleasant, may take the Golden Eye for Idyl Wild. On the waters near the resort a regatta will be held. Handsome prizes are offered for sailing, paddling and rowing.

The Salvation Army will celebrate the day by holding a great demonstration here—the first of the kind ever held. Peterborough being now the residence of the Adjutant of the district, the opportunity will be taken advantage of to bring all the officers of the district together, also a large body of soldiers. The principal streets will be paraded, and meetings will be held in the Opera House.

An event of the day will be the Orange excursion from Toronto. Three uniformed corps will be with the excursion, also several brass bands. It is expected that the excursionists will number between 1,500 and 2,000.

No doubt many will take a jaunt out of town to enjoy a quiet day in the country.
